Cost of Modern War.

The Anglo-German crisis is only one phase of the question in which every nation, America included, is vitally concerned. The impoverishment of the world by war—even by war which is never fought—is the most imminent evil now threatening the race.

It costs $10,000,000 to build a warship of the latest type. Each broadside fired by such a vessel in practice or at an enemy costs $10,000, and her guns are capable of discharging six rounds a minute.

The construction of these marine monsters is proceeding at the utmost capacity of the dockyards and gun foundries of the entire world. The peace taxes of the present are already heavier in the aggregate than the burden imposed to carry on any of the great wars in history.

Save This Recipe for Colds.

"Mix half pint of good whiskey with two ounces of glycerine and add one-half ounce Concentrated pine compound. The bottle is to be well shaken each time and used in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours." Any druggist has these ingredients or he will get them from his wholesale house. This is wonderfully effective.

The Concentrated pine is a special pine product and comes only in half ounce bottles each enclosed in an air-tight case, but be sure it is labeled "Concentrated."

His Discovery.

"Mamma," he said, "isn't 'Reason' a funny name for a girl?"

"Hush, dear!"

"And her first name is 'Theresa.' Look at it, mamma. 'Theresa Reason.' Gee! I'd change that name if it was mine!"—Chicago Tribune.

Some people suffer continually with tired, aching and swollen feet. Little do they know how soothing is Hamlins Wizard Oil. Rub it in at night and have thankful, happy feet in the morning.

Flatic Astronomy.

"If you want to knock your adversary out," said the physical instructor, "land a blow on that spot. That's the location of the solar plexus."

"And if I only want to make him see stars," said Algy, "I suppose I must land on his lunar plexus. Where's that?"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets first put up 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate, stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated tiny granules.

Welcoming Her.

"I'm glad you've dropped in, Mrs. Irons," said Mrs. Lapsling, cordially greeting the visitor. "This has been a dreary day for me, and a call from a friend is like an Osiris in the desert."

Yellow Clothes Are Unsightly.

Tie Is Essential.

"O, any bureau that has five drawers full of women's fixings and one man's tie in it."—Houston Post.

IMPOSSIBLE TO FIND ANYTHING better for sideache, backaches or stitches than Perry Davis' Painkiller. Get the large size, it is the cheapest. At all druggists, 25c, 50c and 90c bottles.

One on Mamma.

"Gwendolen, I suppose some worthless young dude is going to take you to the theater this evening?"

"Yes, mamma, I'm going with brother George to-night."

Researches as to Cancer.

A big British doctor finds that the parts of the body in which cancer starts, such as the lower lip, liver, etc., are highly electric and radio-active. A piece of the lower lip, if laid on a photo film, darkens it the same as does radium, but if a piece of the lung—cancer seldom comes in the lung—is put on the photo film nothing happens. So the doctor argues that highly electric flesh is the main secret of cancer. Woman's flesh is more electric than man's; cancer is commoner in women. — New York Press.

A prominent druggist in a neighborhood town, said that of all recipes he had filled, none would stop and cure a cough as quickly as the following: Take ½ pound rock candy and disolve it in a ½ pint of warm water, add three ounces compound syrup pine sap in, commonly called pine sap, shake well and take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. This recipe makes almost a pint of cough syrup and is a splendid remedy to have in the house.

The democrats of the Twelfth district, will hold their convention to select a member of the state committee, Jan. 12 at Ft. Wayne. Edward G. Hoffman is the present district chairman and will likely be re-elected.

The State Association of Township Trustees, which met at Indianapolis, last week, formed plans to have the legislature increase their salaries. They are also in favor of doing away with the advisory boards and county road commissioners. Trustees over the state receive salaries of from $200 to $400, except those who are in the exceptionally large townships where a larger compensation is given. Trustees do not receive salaries in comparison with the work they are required to do, and now the operation of the new law makes more clerical work, no one will dispute that they should have more pay.

The Enormous Crops of 1909

About a month ago, the preliminary estimates of this year's crops were published by the Bureau of Statistics. While not establishing a record, the figures were considerably in excess of those of last year, and were not far from the record established in 1906. However, figures above a thousand mean nothing to the average man, and no conception of this enormous production can be obtained unless he actually sees the entire crop. We have estimated the size of these crops, and our front-page illustration this week shows what a stupendous heap they would make if the more important crops were piled up in Madison Square alongside the Metropolitan Tower. To be sure, Madison Square and many blocks surrounding it would be completely lost under the mass of cereals and potatoes.

The corn, which is the bulkiest of the products shown, is represented as contained in huge bags piled up in pillars so as to represent mammoth corncobs and though the piles reach up to a height of 1,780 feet, this year's production of corn would make twelve of these pillars. Next to the corn we have the production of oats, amounting to a huge total of close to a billion bushels. The huge bag containing this quantity of oats would reach up to more than double the height of the Metropolitan Tower. The wheat, which comes next in order, would require a bag almost as large which, even when laid on its side, would overtop the tallest structures in New York. If this wheat was distributed among the inhabitants of this country, every one, man, woman, and child, would receive over eight bushels for his share of the crop. If this quantity were taken to a flour mill, it would be converted into one and two-thirds barrels of flour, and out of this quantity of flour a baker could make nearly five hundred loaves of standard five-cent size. In other words, we grow enough wheat in this country to supply every individual with a loaf and a half of bread per day. This is slightly more than the average supply per capita for the last forty years.

Comparing our crops with other countries, we find that the United States leads the world in the production of corn, oats, and wheat. Last year we did not equal European Russia's oats production, but this year's estimate is 176,000,000 bushels more than that of last year; and while the figures for the 1909 crop in Russia are not as yet available, it seems improbable that they will equal our own figures for this year. When it comes to barley, we must take second place, according first place to Russia. Russia also leads the world in the production of rye. We stand fourth in the production of potatoes, with Germany Russia and Austria ahead of us.

While we may flatter ourselves on our productions of corn, oats and wheat, the figures show that we do not make the best use of our acreage. The United Kingdom seems to be able to produce more wheat from an acre of land than any other country. For the years 1898 to 1907 it has produced 32.6 bushels per acre, as against 13.9 in this country and 9.3 in Russia, which makes the poorest showing of the large wheat growing countries. Germany leads in the yield of oats with 49.3 bushels per acre against 29.8 in this country. However, it seems very natural that the country having the largest tract under cultivation should have a poorer yield than those countries in which farming operations are carried on on a smaller scale and more particular attention can be given to the treatment of the land, so as to obtain the maximum product.

WHO'S BURGDERFER?

Burgderfer was born funny. His advent into the world was a joke, for the family runs to girls, (his sisters are all girls). Even the doctor's announcement of his first appearance in public caused the family to smile. Born with an innate desire to amuse people, we find him at the tender age of five managing his own circus in the barn, admission 10 pins. The family cat (near angora) and his spotted coach dog making up the menagerie. In school, we find him recognized as authority on the manufacture of "paper wads", conducting many a warm debate with his teachers, always taking the negative side, and never conquered except by the faith cure, i. e. "laying on of hands". His first appearance as a sure enough "funny fellow" taking real money begins when he was engaged to travel with the Hillsdale College Glee Club, the college that produced the famous poet, Will Carleton. Three years with this company made Burgderfer big enough to star alone. He has appeared at scores of the leading educational institutions all over the United States, at over fifty of the largest chautauquas, on hundreds of the best lecture courses, and from every section of the country committees report him the greatest fun maker ever on their programs. His return dates are not exceeded by any humorist on the American platform.

VOL. XXIII ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30 1909. NO. 52

The HART-HOOD-WIDNEY CO.
Hicksville, Ohio.

May the dawn of 1910 bring you a happy-prosperous

NEW YEAR.

Plans are already on foot in this establishment for 1910 to give to Hicksville and the country within a radius of twenty miles of here a store complete in every detail and organized on broader and more comprehensive lines to meet the needs of the growing volume of business. Our buyers in each department are putting forth extra efforts to bring together lines of merchandise that will far exceed all former showings. 1910 will see our Ready-to-Wear department largely extended in every way. The shoe section will see a further increased showing, many of the new Spring shoes being already here. The carpet and rug department is being added too. The Dress Goods section will present a greater and more varied selection. The Notion and Hosiery departments will see more radical improvements. The Underwear and Men's Furnishing sections will furnish its quota of improvements, and the high standard set by our grocery department will be maintained and give to the people a continued popular priced grocery in every way. Buying in large quantities enables us to quote the very lowest possible prices in every section and we most cordially invite comparison on any line and will esteem it a pleasure to have you make this store your home for 1910.

For a number of years past Waterloo has supported a public Christmas tree and the last one was attended by a crowd that could not find seating room in the opera house. The promoters had in mind the giving of presents to poor children who would find nothing in their stockings at home. Poor families were provided with coal wood, flour and clothing and much good was done. This year there was no need of a tree, business has been good, laboring men have found employment, the saloons that took many dollars are no more and the poor have vanished from Waterloo.

Xmas at Soldiers Home

The following letter was written by Henry A. Milton, an old veteran soldier. The letter will be of interest to our older readers as he is well known in this vicinity.

National Military Home, Marion, Ind.
Dec. 25—'09.

Editor of St. Joe News.

Dear Sir:-

Thinking that it might be interesting to the many comrads and friends who are readers of your paper to hear of the manner in which we are cared for at this, the Marion branch of national homes for disabled volunteer soldiers, and if you will grant me the space in your columns I will endeavor to give a brief account of the way in which we were cared for on Christmas day Dec. 25, 1909. And first of all I would say that the main push in the Home, Col. George W. Steele, was in the service of his country and that he is a warm friend to the men who went forth to save the country and he seems to feel the responsibilities resting upon him of caring for the membership of the home, and doing all he can for their comfort and amusement and in order to make his plans a success he and his staff officers have been the busiest set of men in the home during the past week, and their efforts have been crowned with success as a list of their purchases will show. Oysters 85 gallons, pork loins 950 lbs., crackers 75 lbs., celery 60 doz. bunches, sponge cake 300 lbs., rolls 300 lbs., mince pies 500, oranges 1,800, cigars 1,500.

Following is the menu: Oyster soup, Worcester sauce, crackers, tomato catsup, roast pork loins, apple sauce, celery, mashed potatoes, cream cheese, sponge cake, hot rolls, butter, hot mince pies, oranges, cigars and coffee.

The mess hall was very beautifully decorated for the occasion by an elaborate display of bunting and in front of the main entrance was suspended a motto with letters formed with sprigs of evergreen and reading "A Merry Christmas to all", and very prominent among the decorations was displayed "Old Glory".

Seated amidst these pleasant surroundings, we of the rank and file putting forth our best efforts to make a lasting impression upon the mind of the Quartermaster (and I think we succeeded fairly well.) The home band under the leadership of Captain John Pitt Stack discoursed the following musical program.

March.....Old Warrior.....Bernard
Selections....Ye Olden Time....Beyer
Intermezzo....After Sunset... Pryor
Idyl.....The Goddess.....Lucke
Excerpts from the Prince of To-night
.....Howard

As a fitting close to the day's festivities a band concert and a moving picture show was given at the Stinson Memorial hall. These entertainments are very popular with the membership of the home and the public as well, but no citizen is permitted to enter until the members of the home are all seated and then the citizens can take seats. On Friday afternoon, old Santa Claus visited the hospital and distributed nuts, candies and other little delicacies to the inmates, which was greatly appreciated by the patients. And so ended Christmas 1909 which was pronounced the most enjoyable one ever passed in the home.

Town Dads Meet

The last regular meeting of the old town board was held Monday night with trustees Leighty and Sechler in attendance. The session was a very short one and the only matter of business up for attention was the allowing of the following bills: To Wm. Curie, salary $10.00; Jacob Sechler, salary $10.00; L. D. Leighty, salary two years $20.00; Widney and Leighty office rent, $6.00 and Wm. Curie, plow points etc., for marshal, $1.10. A special meeting of the board was called for Monday, January 3rd., at 1:00 P. M., to make final settlement with the new officials.

Shipping Liquor

Beginning January 1, 1910, the penal code of the United States requires the shippers of intoxicating liquors in interstate commerce to mark on the outside of the package the name of the consignee, the nature of the contents of the package and the quantity contained therein, and any officer, agent or employe of any railroad company who shall knowingly deliver or cause to be delivered such a package to any person to whom it has been consigned, unless upon the written order in each instance of the bonafide consignee, or to any fictitious person or any person under a fictitious name, may be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than two years or both.

It is also provided that a penalty of $5,000 may be imposed upon any person, who in connection with the transportation of any such package, shall collect the purchase price or any part thereof, before, on or after its delivery, from the consignee or from any other person, or shall in any manner act as agent of the buyer or seller or any such package for the purpose of buying or selling or completing the sale thereof.

L. L. C

The L. L. C. was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. D. J. Baker, Wednesday evening, December 15 this being the date of their annual festivity. The interior of the home presented a merry Christmas welcome while a kindred spirit of good will and cheer interspersed with mirth and laughter seemed to make each one feel the very presence of jolly "Old Santa." The president took charge of the first part of the program which was of a literary nature. Seventeen members responded to roll call, after which the Misses Ethel Berry, Grace Sechler, Ida Widney and Lela Shilling conducted the social part of the program in a succession of up-to-date plays, which gave food for wit, pathos, humor and sarcasm. The ladies making their debut as composers, while Mrs. Dr. Lake and Mrs. Zetta May carried off honors their productions showing that they had attained the pinnacle in the art of composition. Mrs. Georgia Milliman and Grace Sechler stood last in the play called Holly-berry winning fame and good standing (being the last to sit down.) The next feature of the program was the banquet in the dining room where Mrs. Price, Milliman and Baker served the ladies to a four course luncheon to a queen's taste, each lady having brought some article of refreshment unknown to the other, the result was no two articles were of the same kind. Last but not least was the Christmas exchange, of which may be said, "It is a joy to give as well as receive."

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

Senator McLaurin Drops Dead.

United States Senator A. J. McLaurin died suddenly at his home in Brandon, Miss. Death was due to an attack of heart failure and came without the slightest warning. When the fatal stroke came upon him Senator McLaurin was seated in a rocking chair in front of the fireplace in his library. He suddenly fell forward without speaking a word, and life was extinct when members of his family reached his side. The swift summons of death followed within a few moments a remark by Senator McLaurin that he was then feeling better than he had felt at any time since his recent severe illness, resulting from an attack of ptomaine poisoning. As to a successor to Senator McLaurin it is pointed out that an appointment might immediately be made by Governor Noel or selected by the State Legislature which will convene early in January. Senator McLaurin, who was 61 years old, began his first term in the United States Senate in 1894, but was elected governor of Mississippi in 1895 and served in that office four years. He was elected again to the Senate in 1900 and served one term. He then returned for the term which began on March 4, 1907. His present term of office would have expired on March 3, 1913. Senator McLaurin was a lawyer by profession, and began the study of law in 1863 after he had served through the Civil War as a private in the Confederate army. He was born March 26, 1848, at Brandon, Miss., and was reared on a farm. He entered the Confederate army when he was 16 years old. Seven children survive him.

Night Flyer Puzzles Yankees.

Flying at a speed of from thirty to forty miles an hour a mysterious airship appeared over Worcester, Mass., hovered over the city a few minutes, disappeared for about two hours and then returned to cut four circles above the gaping city, meanwhile using a searchlight of tremendous power. Thousands of persons thronged the streets to watch the mysterious visitor. The airship remained over the city for about fifteen minutes, all the time at a height that most observers set at about 2,000 feet. After a time it disappeared in the direction of Marlboro, only to return later. At the time of the airship's visit Walker Tillinghast, the Worcester man who recently claimed to have invented a marvelous aeroplane in which he said he had journeyed to New York and return by way of Boston, was absent from his home and could not be located.

Six Years for Warriner.

Charles L. Warriner, deposed treasurer of the Big Four at Cincinnati, Ohio, pleaded guilty to embezzlement in the Common Pleas Court and was sentenced to serve six years in the Ohio penitentiary. Warriner was presented before Judge Woodmansee of the Common Pleas Court with the definite understanding between Prosecutor Hunt and his council, that he would plead guilty to the charge of embezzlement, and throw himself upon the mercy of the court. Of the $643,000 Warriner is alleged to have taken from the Big Four railroad less than half of that sum has been accounted for by him. There have been many stories circulated that he had secreted part of the money but these have not been verified.

Automobile Crank Killed Dr. Garstang.

A blow over the eye received as he was cranking his automobile was reported by the supervising physician of a private sanitarium in Indianapolis, Ind., to have caused the death of Reginald Garstang, a prominent physician and the son of William Garstang, superintendent of motive power of the Big Four lines of the New York Central railway. Dr. Garstang died of a hemorrhage of the brain after an illness of only a few days.

REJECT COOK CLAIMS AS POLE DISCOVERER

Danish Scientists Declare That the "Proofs" Presented by Doctor Are of No Value.

"FOOLED US ALL"—BRADLEY.

Peary on Receiving News Says, "I Told You So!"—Recalls Gold-Brick Message from Labrador.

The University of Copenhagen, the first institution of learning to recognize Dr. Frederick A. Cook as the discoverer of the north pole, has solemnly declared that the explorer had failed to establish the claim upon which his high honors had been based.

The committee appointed by the university to examine Cook's records recently presented its report to the consistory of the university, which reviewed the deductions of the experts with the greatest care and discussed the findings from every standpoint. That both the committee and the consistory were disappointed was soon known.

When the consistory met the other day a written report was adopted to the effect that the alleged records submitted for examination by Dr. Cook failed to prove his claim that he had reached the north pole.

The report of the committee, of which Prof. Stromgren was chairman, as presented to the consistory, states that Cook's papers are without any value; that his report to the university is practically the same as that published in the New York Herald upon his return from his arctic expedition. The copies of his notebooks submitted, says the committee, contain no original calculations of observations, but only results thereof. Accordingly the committee concludes that he affords no proof of having reached the pole.

The documents handed the commission of the University of Copenhagen for examination are:

1. A typewritten report prepared by Cook's secretary, Walter Lonsdale, and covering sixty-one pages of foolscap.

2. A typewritten copy made by Lonsdale from Cook's notebooks. This occupies sixteen pages of foolscap and includes a description of the expedition during the period from March 18, 1908, to June 13, 1908, during which, according to the statement, Cook journeyed from Svartevog to the north pole and returned to a point on the polar ice not specifically indicated, but west of the Axel Heiberg land.

The papers were not accompanied by a private letter from Cook, but Secretary Lonsdale stated verbally to the commission that the original notes and books of the explorer from which his copies were made had been sent to Europe by another route as a precautionary measure and would be delivered to the university in the course of a few days.

In presenting the data Lonsdale said explicitly and repeatedly that document No. 2 was a complete and accurate duplication of the information contained in all of Cook's notebooks that could be of any importance to the university for the purpose of this examination. In spite of the explorer's promise and his secretary's assurance that they would be forthcoming, the commission is not yet in possession of the original notebooks and diaries.

"He has fooled us all, from the king of Denmark down," was the exclamation of John R. Bradley, F. A. Cook's New York backer in his arctic trip, when apprised of the news from Copenhagen. "And he fooled me with the rest. As a matter of fact," continued the sportsman, "I long ago lost all interest in Dr. Cook, the north pole and everything connected with it. Polar bears and the wild life of the arctic in general is the only thing that has ever interested me much in that connection anyway.

"Three months ago from the Labrador coast I sounded an explicit and deliberately worded warning to the world, based on complete and accurate information in regard to the Cook claims. In doing so, I accepted the responsibility devolving on me and fulfilled my duty to myself and to the world." With these words Commander Robert E. Peary expressed his sentiments regarding the failure of the University of Copenhagen to find any proof of the discovery of the north pole by Cook.

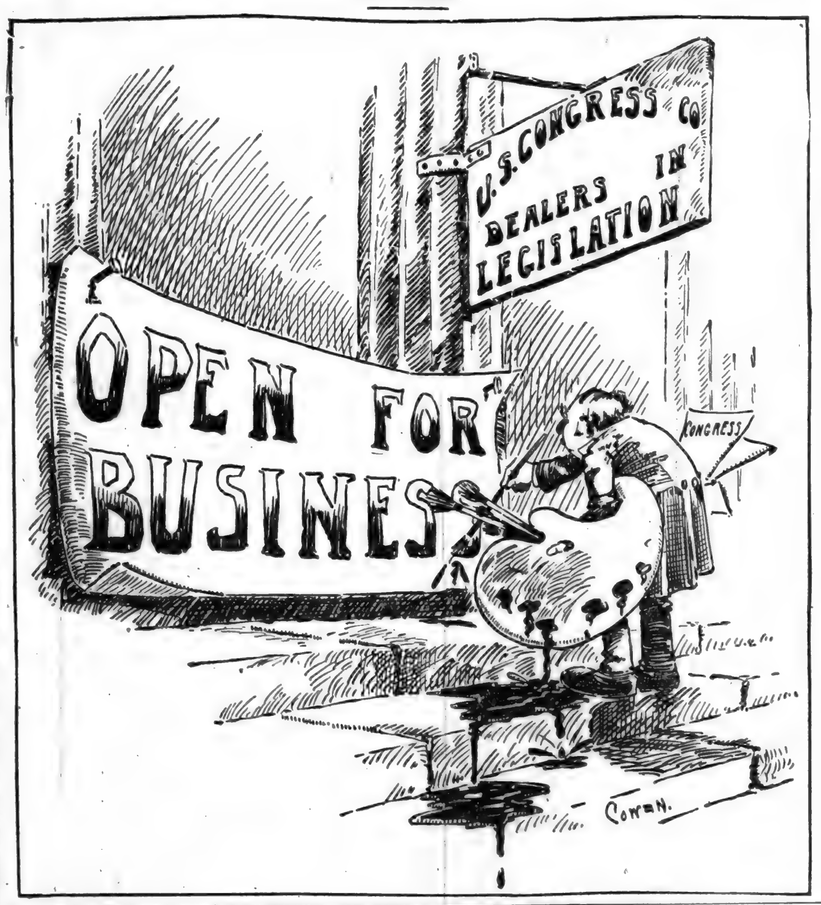
Man Divorced; Courts Death.

William Lanahan deliberately committed suicide by appendicitis in the Newport hospital, Newport, R. I. Two famous surgeons told Lanahan he had appendicitis and would die unless they operated on him. He refused. Lanahan had confided to his friends that he did not care to live without his wife, who secured a separation a few weeks ago.

Fifty Years in Cell; No Pardon.

John Warren, of Tolland County, who completed fifty years of a life sentence in Connecticut State prison for murder last Saturday, was denied a pardon by the State Board of Pardons. Warren murdered his wife by holding her head under water until she drowned.

AT IT AGAIN.



CONVICTED OF SUGAR FRAUDS.

All Trust Employes Except Bendernagel Are Found Guilty.

The Federal jury, before whom six of the employes of the Sugar Trust have been on trial in New York for sugar weighing frauds, returned a verdict as follows: Guilty as charged: Oliver Spitzer, dock superintendent at the Williamsburg refinery plant of the American Sugar Refining Company; Thomas Kehoe, sugar trust weigher; John R. Coyle, sugar trust weigher; Edward A. Boyle, sugar trust weigher; Patrick Hennessy, sugar trust checker. The jury disagreed as to the guilt of James F. Bendernagel, cashier of the Williamsburg plant of the American Sugar Refining Company, who was charged with passing bribes to government weighers. The verdict was accompanied by recommendations of the mercy of the court for the five who were found guilty. Together with Jean M. Voelker, who was too seriously ill to stand trial at this time, they were known as the "Big Six," and all were charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States government.

RICHES FOR A WANDERER.

Newspaper Clipping Leads Man to Whre Brother Died.

Attracted by a newspaper clipping which said his brother had died in Boston intestate, leaving a fortune of $250,000, James F. Corbett, for thirty years of wanderer in Canada, England and the United States, has returned to Boston to lay claim to a share of the estate of William J. Corbett, who died on Sept. 23. Rival claimants eager for the first sight of an "own" brother, lawyers and newspaper men sought out Corbett on his arrival at the South station and eventually the police had to take a hand to insure the man escort to a place of retreat.

The four protecting powers in the island of Crete joined in a note to Turkey, politely refusing to consider for the present, the proposal to establish a definite Turkish regime on the island.

The French government financially assists young French merchants to visit foreign countries to the extent of 3,000 francs the first year, and for a possible second year 2,400 francs. Competitive examinations are necessary.

The home for aged sufferers from the earthquake at Reggio, Italy, has been delivered to the Italian government. The home was built by funds provided by the American Red Cross Society. Forty huts in the neighborhood were also turned over to the authorities. This completes the work of construction of buildings undertaken by the American government and the Red Cross Society.

A message reported an engagement in Nicaragua near Rama between the forces of Zelaya and Estrada, in which the latter was victorious and captured 100 prisoners and a lot of cannon and ammunition. Washington heard that another revolt against Zelaya has begun near the Costa Rican border, headed by Gen. Cardenas, who has long been an exile in that country. Another rumor was to the effect that Zelaya was preparing to flee in case of his defeat.

MARK TWAIN SEES DEATH NIGH.

"Yes, boys, I'm about all in. My life's work is near an end. I'm about through with this world and this life." Looking pale and haggard and very feeble, Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain), America's foremost humorist, made this statement to the newspaper men following his arrival in New York on the steamship Bermudian, from Bermuda, where he had spent eight weeks in an attempt to regain his lost strength.

The humorist, when first seen by the newspaper men on board the steamship, was leaning heavily on the ship's rail. It was immediately observed that there was a marked change in his appearance. His cheeks were hollow, his eyes appeared dim and his breath was short and heavy. He stopped several times during his conversation to secure breath. Those who saw the humorist were unanimous in declaring that his present condition was due in a great measure to the death of his lifelong companion, H. H. Rogers, the former Standard Oil magnate, who died last summer.

34 FREEZE IN MIDLAKE.

Crew of Wrecked Steamer Marooned Without Food or Fuel.

On a tiny island in Lake Huron thirty-four members of the crew of the wrecked steamer Wissahickon the other day were marooned without food or fire. All of the food supply was under water. When the steamer struck the crew made shore safely, though drenched to the skin. The island is only a few acres in extent and while it has some drift wood there is hardly enough to keep the men from freezing. On Wednesday a tiny fishing gasoline launch from Manitoulin Island passed the island and sighted the wreck. There was only room aboard for Mate J. H. Casey and Engineer E. J. Erskine, and they were taken to Manitoulin Island, where there is a cable to the main land. Later tugs left Sault Ste. Marie to rescue the men.

MADRIZ IS PRESIDENT.

Zelaya's Candidate Is Unanimously Elected by Nicaraguan Congress.

Dr. Jose Madriz, former judge of the Central American court of justice at Cartago and Zelaya's candidate, has been elected president of Nicaragua by the unanimous vote of Congress. The session was a stormy one, but there seemed to be perfect unanimity with regard to the election of Madriz, and when the official announcement was made there were vociferous cheering and cries of "Viva Madriz," "Viva Leon," "Down with monopolies," "Down with tyranny," "Long live the constitution."

EX-SENATOR HARRIS DEAD.

Prominent Kansan Is Suddenly Stricken in Daughter's Home.

Former United States Senator William A. Harris, of Kansas, who two years ago was Democratic candidate for Governor of that State, died suddenly of heart disease at the home of Mrs. Lydia M. Mackey, in Chicago. He was a member of Congress from 1893 to 1895, and was United States Senator from 1897 to 1903. He was prominently connected with the American Short Horn Breeders' Association and the International Live Stock Exposition.

INDIANA DRY LAW STANDS.

Court Upholds Act Under Which Counties Have Closed Saloons.

The Supreme court of Indiana has held constitutional the county option election law, enacted in 1908, under which sixty-five of the ninety-two counties of Indiana have closed their saloons. The Supreme court affirms a judgment of a county court that fined a saloon keeper who had sold liquor after a "dry" victory in an option election had been registered. The case was appealed for a test of the law.

The court says that none of the contentions against the constitutionality of the law is valid. The defendant argued that the State legislature had passed a law in 1875 providing for the issuing of liquor licenses and that the county option law conferred on the people the power to suspend the older law, and was in fact prohibitory legislation. This the court denies. The law is not prohibitory legislation, and it confers on the people only the power to direct whether or not liquor licenses shall be issued in the different counties under the older law.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

Elmer Dover, who entered politics with the late Senator Mark A. Hanna, and acted as his secretary, has decided to abandon politics and has become executive officer for a firm of Chicago engineers. For many years Mr. Dover held the position of secretary of the Republican National Committee.

Just before the opening of Congress Representative Fowler of New Jersey issued a statement in favor of a proposed bill for a permanent tariff commission and bitterly assailing both Cannon and Aldrich. His bill proposes that Congress fix the maximum and minimum rates and that a commission of fifteen shall determine the actual rates within those bounds.

Vice President James S. Sherman in a recent address said: "During this administration we intend to still further perfect our monetary laws. We intend to start the rehabilitation of the merchant marine. We propose to further improve our methods of federal regulation. We shall take up seriously and effectively the conservation of our natural resources and the matter of inland waterways."

In the course of his series of addresses in Texas before starting on his travels to tropical climes, W. J. Bryan said at Galveston that he had been criticised in past years for his advocacy of the income tax on the ground that it would not hit him much, if any. He would not now say what he was worth, but he did not mind saying that his income tax would exceed the amount that 99 per cent of the wealthy Republicans would have to pay.

In his speech at the Civic Federation banquet in New York, Senator Root again warned the country that the Federal government is breaking down under the policy of vast centralization of authority and called a halt. He said: "This country is too great, its population too numerous, its interests too vast and complicated already, to say nothing of the enormous increases that we can see before us in the future, to be governed as to the great range of our daily affairs from one central power in Washington."

The Week in Congress

There was no session Wednesday of the Senate. The Esch bill, requiring railroads to make full monthly reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission and a measure giving the commission power to compel railroads to provide uniform equipment for their cars, were passed by the House. Opposition developed to the section of the Esch bill prohibiting the use in any action brought for damages of the reports furnished by the railroads. Chairman Mann urged that the section be allowed to remain in the bill as an encouragement to the railroads to give the commission the fullest information of accidents. All amendments to the section were defeated. The measure becomes effective at once. The Mann Panama Canal bill was reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and was the subject of general debate. The provision for abolishment of the Isthmian Canal Commission and the centralization of responsibility for the construction of the canal and the government of the canal zone under the President, in a director general, aroused opposition. Mr. Harrison, of New York, charged that former President Roosevelt had usurped authority in the canal zone he did not possess. Mr. Olmstead, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Mann defended Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Sterling, of Illinois, and Mr. Parker, of New Jersey, attacked the section of the bill relating to the judicial power in the zone. The reading of the bill was begun.

During a brief session the Senate adopted a resolution by Senator Cullom calling on the Secretary of the Interior for information respecting mining disasters and facilities of the government for rendering aid in such disasters. Adjourned at 1:16 until Monday. The House devoted five hours to the District of Columbia appropriation bill, carrying $10,156,473 for 1911. Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska in a speech demanded a congressional investigation of the general land office. He attacked Secretary Ballinger in connection with the so-called Cunningham coal land cases.

The Senate was not in session Friday. Consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill again occupied the day in the House. An amendment providing $17,000 for children's playgrounds was inserted. Mr. Mann, of Illinois, attacked Auditor Tweedale, of the District, for criticizing Congress, and Mr. Fitzgerald, of New York, intimated that ex-President Roosevelt's bad example was to blame. Adjourned at 3:53 p. m. until Monday.

The nomination of Horace H. Lurton to be associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, was confirmed by the Senate Monday. Senator Depew made an optimistic Christmas cheer speech in reply to pessimistic predictions based on the tariff made in La Follette's magazine and in newspapers. A long list of nominations for ambassadors, ministers and other appointive officers was sent to the Senate by the President. The District of Columbia appropriation bill, carrying about $10,275,000, was passed by the House. Mr. Mondell of Wyoming upheld Secretary Ballinger in a speech against the proposition to enlarge the government's authority over dams and water power rights in the different States. The Fitzgerald "unanimous consent" rule was invoked for the first time and two small local bills were passed.

The Senate Tuesday adopted a resolution by Mr. Flint calling for all the papers in the Ballinger-Pinchot case, and thus put in motion an inquiry into that controversy. After some debate adjournment was taken to Jan. 4. In a ten-minute session Mr. Mann reported to the House his bill for the suppression of the white slave traffic and Mr. Richardson filed a minority report against Mr. Mann's bill for the reorganization of the government of the Isthmus of Panama. The House adjourned to Jan. 4.

ALL AROUND THE GLOBE.

Open-air schools for children in the tenement districts are recommended in the annual report of the New York association for improving the condition of the poor, which is making a crusade against tuberculosis.

Mark Hanna, a Russian who took an American name and sought a license to wed at Newport, Ky., had to wait two days because he forgot the name of the prospective bride. Her name was Fannie Dozorthzov.

Mayor J. N. Adam, of Buffalo, at a meeting of the tuberculosis hospital commission of that city, announced that he intended buying what is known as the Perrysburg site of 293 acres for a tuberculosis hospital and presenting it to the city.

W. S. Evans, aged 60, formerly editor of the Orrville (Ohio) Courier, went on his first hunting expedition the other day and his body was found later hanging over an old fence, where it is believed he accidentally shot himself in the act of climbing over.

Salvatore Demma, a Syrian, is under arrest at Columbus, Ohio, in connection with the Black Hand cases. He is charged with misusing the mails to send blackmail matter and will be tried in Toledo with the fifteen others who have been arrested during the last few months.

The Master of Appleby

An unusual literary feast is offered our readers in this stirring romance. It is one of the strongest stories of the American Revolution that has yet been written.

The scene of this heroic narrative is laid in the South, and the scenes depicted have a magic national flavor that will stimulate every lover of good fiction that is based on patriotic facts.

There is Jack Ireton, the real hero of the story, and he is, indeed, a hero of steel. His doughty deeds are all in the line of loyal service to the struggling Colonies. His devotion to his young friend, Dick Jenifer, is something sublime and his love for the fair heroine of the story, Margery Stair, runs all through the story, as in a fabric of iron warp and golden woof.

The marplot of the romance, Sir Francis Falconnet, is a type of the revolutionary hireling, who rushes upon his fate while plotting the fall of better men. All the elements of war plot and the emotions pervade this story strongly. There is the constant clash of battle, but there is a gentle undertone of sentiment in the romantic passages of the serial which round out a beautiful story, well written and well told and long to be remembered.

CHAPTER I.

The summer day was all but spent when Richard Jennifer, riding express, brought me Captain Falconnet's challenge. 'Twas a dayfall to be marked with a white stone, even in our Carolina calendar. The sun, reaching down to the mountain-girt horizon in the west, filled all the upper air with the glory of its departing, and the higher leaf plumes of the great maples before my cabin door wrought lustrous patterns in gilded green upon a zenith background of turquois shot with crimson, like the figurings of some rich old tapestries I had once seen in my field-marshal's castle in the Mark of Moravia.

Beyond the maples a brook tinkled and plashed over the stones on its way to the near-by Catawba. The road made for the river lower down and followed its windings up the valley; but Jennifer came by the Indian trace through the forest. I can see him now as he rode beneath the maples, bending to the saddle horn where the branches hung lowest; a pretty figure of a handsome young provincial, clad in fashions three years behind those I had seen in London the winter last past.

Now I had known this handsome youngster when he was but a little lad; had taught him how to bend the Indian bow and loose the reed-shaft arrow in those happier days before the tyrant Governor Tryon turned hangman, and the battle of the Great Alamance had left me fatherless. Moreover, I had been with him at the Mecklenburg Arms no longer ago than yesterweek. Hence, I much needs be somewhat taken aback when he drew rein at my door-stone, doffed his hat with a sweeping bow worthy a courtier, and said:

"I have the honor of addressing Captain John Ireton, sometime of his Majesty's Royal Scots Blue and late of her Apostolic Majesty's Twenty-ninth Regiment of Hussars?"

It was but an euphism of the time, this formal preamble, declaring that his errand had to do with the preliminaries of a private quarrel between gentlemen. Yet I could scarce restrain a smile. For these upcroppings of courtier etiquette have ever seemed to march but mincingly with the free stride of our western backwoods. None the less, I made shift to match his bow in some fashion, and to say: "At your service, sir."

Whereupon he bowed again, clapped hat to head and tendered me a sealed packet.

"From Sir Francis Falconnet, Knight Bachelor of Beaumaris, volunteer captain in his Majesty's German Legion," he announced, with stern dignity.

Since my enemy had seen fit to come thus far on the way to his end in some gentlemanly manner, it was not for me to find difficulties among the formalities. In good truth, I was overjoyed to be thus assured that he would fight me fair; that he would not compel me to kill him as one kills a wild beast at bay. For certainly I should have killed him in any event: so much I had promised my poor Dick Coverdale on that dismal November morning when he had choked out his life in my arms, the victim first of this man's treachery, and, at the last, of his sword. So, as I say, I was nothing loath, and yet I would not seem too eager.

"I might say that I have no unsettled quarrel with Captain Falconnet," I demurred, when I had read the challenge. "He spoke slightingly of a lady, but I did but——"

"Your answer, Captain Ireton!" quoth my youngster, curtly.

"Let it be to-morrow morning at sunrise in the oak grove which was once my father's wood field, each man with his own blade. And I give you fair warning, Master Jennifer; I shall kill your bullyragging captain of light-horse as I would a vermin of any other breed."

"If you can," he qualified. "Will you give me bite and sup before I mount and ride again? 'Tis a long gallop back to town."

Here was my fresh-hearted Dick Jennifer back again all in a breath; and I made haste to shout for Darius, and for Tomas to take his horse, and otherwise to bestir myself to do the honors of my poor forest fastness as well as I might.

There were presently a bit of cold deer's meat and some cakes of maize bread baked in the ashes to set before the guest. And afterward, though the evening was no more than mountain-breeze cool, we had a handful of fire on the hearth for the cheer of it. Then Jennifer unburdened himself of the gossip of the day in Queensborough.

"Have you heard the newest? The war has shifted from the North in good earnest at last, and we are like to have a taste of the harryings the Jerseymen have had since '76. Mr Lord Cornwallis is come as far as Camden, they say; and Colonel Tarleton has crossed the Catawba."

"So? Then Mr. Rutherford is like to have his work cut out for him, I take it."

"Grif Rutherford is a stout Indian fighter; no West Carolinian will gainsay that. But he is never the man to match Cornwallis. We'll have help from the North."

"De Kalb?" I suggested.

"Nay, John Ireton, you need not fear me, though I am just now this redcoat captain's next friend. You know more about the Baron de Kalb's doings than anybody else in Mecklenburg."

"I? What should I know? What are they saying?"

"That you come straight from the baron's camp in Virginia—to see what you can see."

"A spy, eh? 'Tis cut out of whole cloth, Dick, my lad. I've never took the oath on either side."

He looked vastly disappointed. "But you will, Jack? Surely, you have not to think twice in such a cause?"

"I had never thought to hear your father's son say the like!"

"And why not, pray? The king's minion, Tryon, hanged my father and give his estate to his minion's minion, Gilbert Stair. So, in spite of your declarations and your confiscations and your laws against alien landholders, I come back to find myself still the son of the outlawed Roger Ireton, and this same Gilbert Stair firmly rodged in my father's seat."

"Gilbert Stair—for sweet Madge's sake I'm loath to say it—blows hot or cold as the wind sets fair or stormy. And I will say this for him: no other Tryon legatee of them all has steered so fine a course through these last five upsetting years. How he trims so skillfully no man knows. A short month since, he had General Rutherford and Colonel Sumter as guests at Appleby Hundred; now it is Sir Francis Falconnet and the British light-horse officers who are honored. But let him rest: the cause of independence is bigger than any man, or any man's private quarrel, friend John; and I had hoped——"

I laid a hand on his knee. "Spare yourself, Dick. My business in Queensborough was to learn how best I might reach Mr. Rutherford's rendezvous."

For a moment he sat staring at me as if to make sure that he had heard aright. Then he clipt my hand and wrung it, babbling out some boyish brava that I made haste to put an end to.

"Softly, my lad," I said; "'tis no great thing the Congress will gain by my adhesion. But you, Richard; how comes it that I find you taking your ease at Jennifer House and hobnobbing with his Majesty's officers when the cause you love is still in such desperate straits?"

"I did go out with the Minute Men in '76, if you must know," he said, "and smelt powder at Moore's Creek. When my time was done I would have 'listed again; but just at that my father died and the Jennifer acres were like to go to the dogs, lacking oversight. So I came home—and—and——"

"Nay, out with it, Dick. If I am not thy father, I am near old enough to stand in his stead. 'Twas more than husbandry that rusted the sword in its scabbard, I'll be bound."

"You are right, Jack; 'twas both more and less," he confessed, shamefacedly. "'Twas this same Margery Stair. As I have said, her father blows hot or cold as the wind sets, but not she. She is the fiercest little Tory in the two Carolinas, bar none. When I had got Jennifer in order and began to talk of 'listing again, she flew into a pretty rage and stamped her foot."

I had a glimpse of Jennifer the lover as he spoke, and the sight went somewhat on the way toward casting out the sullen rage that had possessed me since first I had set returning foot in this my native homeland.

"Dost love her, Dick?" I asked.

"Aye, and have ever since she was in pinafores and I a hobbledehoy in Master Wytheby's school."

"So long? I thought Mr. Stair was a later comer in Mecklenburg."

"He came eight years ago, as one of Tryon's underlings. Madge was even then motherless; the same little willful prat-a-pace she has ever been. I would you knew her, Jack. 'Twould make this shiftiness of mine seem less the thing it is."

"So you have stayed at home a-courting while others fought to give you leisure," said I, thinking to rally him. But he took it harder than I meant.

"'Tis just that, Jack; and I am fair ashamed. While the fighting kept to the North it did not grind so keen; but now, with the redcoats at our doors, and the Tories sacking and burning in every settlement, 'tis enough to flay an honest man alive. Jack! I'll go; I've got to go, or die of shame!"

He sat silent. By and by he harked back to the matter of his errand, making some apology for his coming to me as the baronet's second.

"'Twas none of my free offering, you may be sure," he added. "But it so happened that Captain Falconnet once did me a like turn. I had chanced to run afoul of that captain of Hessian pigs, Lauswoulter, at cards, and Falconnet stood my friend—though now I bethink me, he did seem over-anxious that one or the other of us should be killed."

"'Tis a common courtesy, and you could not well refuse. I love you none the less for paying your debts; even to such a vilain as this volunteer captain."

"How care you to quarrel with him, Jack?"

Now even so blunt a soldier as I have ever been may have some delicacy where the truth might breed gossip—gossip about a tale which I had said should die with Richard Coverdale and be buried in his grave. So I evaded the question.

"The cause was not wanting. If any ask, you may say he trod upon my foot in passing."

"And for that you struck him? You hold your life carelessly. Do you happen to know that this volunteer captain of light-horse is accounted the best blade in the troop?"

"Who should know that better than ——" I was fairly in the brink of betraying the true cause of quarrel, but drew rein in time. "I care not if he were the best in the army. I have crossed steel before—and with a good swordsman now and then."

The Child as an Asset.

There is undoubtedly a very grave problem connected with the birth rate. The church in past times furnished a religious motive for large families, and this tended to counteract the natural tendency of the birth rate to decline from economic causes as the period of infancy came to be prolonged in an advancing civilization, says a writer in the Springfield (Mass.) Republican. If the religious motive be destroyed, the economic forces making for fewer children must enjoy freer scope, and as the cost of living rises and the financial burden of rearing and educating children through a long series of years becomes heavier for the average parent to bear the scare over race suicide is likely to be the more pronounced. Making the child, however, once more a pecuniary asset of the parents at a tender age would be suicidal to civilization itself.

Fine Sample of Roman Villa.

The beautiful villa unearthed at Pompeii is situated, writes the Naples correspondent of the London Daily Mail, near the house of Diomed. It consists of a row of rooms of great elegance, the largest having a marble floor and frescoes on three walls.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

While hunting near Evansville Frank Walsh, aged 14 years, shot Tony Welcht in the shoulder, inflicting a fatal wound.

Little Maude Bollinger, aged 10, and daughter of Henry Bollinger, of Henryville, found a dynamite cap, and while playing with it, the cap exploded. Her thumb and two fingers were later amputated.

John Downing, commissioner of Jackson county, has in his possession a short spear that was found in plowing up a gravel road in Hamilton County. It is believed that the old spear is an Indan relic and has been buried beneath the road for thirty years. The blade is double-edged and pointed, and is about two inches in width.

Frank Barnet and C. P. Newberg, both of Indianapolis, believe they hold the cold weather record for the season at hook and line work. During the recent cold snap they went to Lake Maxinkuckee and in two days landed thirty-two black bass, two salmon and one straw bass, the average weight of which was two pounds fourteen ounces.

The Ratless Club has been organized by a number of young women at Converse. The club met last week at the home of Miss Lora Carmichael and denounced the use of rats in hair dressing. Twelve girls are members of the club and, as they belong to the circle that sets the fashion in Converse, it will not be long before Converse is a ratless town.

Oliver Elliott sold to John Graves, a stock buyer of Carmel, what is said to be the largest hog raised in the State this year. I. N. Beeson, a butcher, bought the hog of Graves, paying $60.75. It weighed 810 pounds and sold for more than an ordinary steer at $5 a hundred would bring. It was so large it had to be quartered before it could be taken through the door of the butcher shop. One shoulder weighed 103 pounds.

Mrs. George Lynas, of Logansport, has returned from Pittsburg and Rochester, N. Y., where she entered four cats in the cat shows, held in those cities. She carried away a total of twenty-five ribbons. At Pittsburg her cat, Rob Roy, which was exhibited in the chinchilla class, won first prize. Judges said the exhibit was the finest ever made in this country. Her Queen won the first prize for novices of the blue-eyed class. Because of illness she was unable to exhibit her cats at the New York and Washington shows, which will be held soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Carter celebrated the sixty-second anniversary of their wedding in a quiet way at their home in Plainfield. They were both born in North Carolina. In the early life they came to Indiana, and were married December 15, 1847, in the old spring meeting house near Amo, according to the custom of Friends, as both are birthright members of that church. Mr. Carter has been preaching for more than forty years and has traveled extensively. He is 84 and she is 83 years old. Only two persons are now living who attended the wedding sixty-two years ago.

Elmer Mills, of Muncie, found, half-frozen and almost helpless, a strange bird, unlike any fowl ever seen there, and although many persons have tried to identify it, none has succeeded as yet. It is as large as a full-grown chicken, and is the color of a quail save for two long black streaks, one on either side of its body. It has a long, sharp beak, which it snaps viciously when approached by anybody but Mills, and it emits sounds similar to the growl of a dog. After being warmed it became active in the storeroom where it was placed, but it did not attempt to fly, and contented itself with stalking around the room. It is believed the bird is a native of a warmer climate, and was driven out of its habitat by storms.

The wounded eagle held in captivity at the home of Henry Mauck, living north of Owensville, has found a kind friend in the person of A. Metzer, of Evansville. Metzer wrote to Richey Summers, of Owensville, and asked him if the bird of prey would be liberated in the event a fund was raised for the purpose. Metzer inclosed $1 as his contribution toward the liberation of the eagle and expressed much sympathy for the confined bird and stated that if he had as much money as Rockefeller or Carnegie, he would buy all the animals held in captivity in the zoological parks of the country and give them their freedom. The eagle was captured several days ago after it was wounded and at least until it recovers the eagle will not be liberated.

Samuel W. Lory, aged 30, son of County Clerk Louis W. Lory, of Madison, died last week after three days' illness, brought on, it is thought, by excessive smoking. He had been in apparently good health.

The Indiana Lighting Company, of Fort Wayne, has received a twenty-five-year franchise from Bluffton to furnish artificial gas from Fort Wayne at $1.00 a thousand feet. In natural gas days Fort Wayne drew gas from Bluffton.

Charles Hubbard has sold a fresh water pearl for $600 at Corydon. He found the gem in a mussel shell in the Ohio rived, along Harrison County.

Clarence Stonecipher, of Corydon, having discovered bees going into a hole in a limb of a poplar tree, cut down the tree and obtained sixty pounds of wild honey.

In a quarrel at Evansville over the quality of whiskey they had purchased in a bottle, George Cline, aged 19, was stabbed to death by Owen Logsden, aged 18, who was arrested.

Adolph Melzer, millionaire soap manufacturer of Evansville, is building a large stable, where he will this winter feed the horses of poor people who are too poor to properly care for them.

Henry Garrett, a wealthy farmer from Posey County, was sandbagged and robbed of $50 at Evansville. His skull was fractured and he may die. The police are looking for his assailant.

Daniel Cosby, aged 23, living near English, has been rejected at the Evansville recruiting station, because he was unable to write his own name. It has been his life ambition to be a soldier.

Orville Horn was sent to prison for from one to eight years because he kept a purse containing $65 which he found in a Terre Haute restaurant, where he was a waiter, and knew whose it was.

The Rev. F. L. Hardly, pastor of the First Baptist church of Columbus, has recovered from an attack of hiccoughing which continued for forty-eight hours. His friends were alarmed but a physician finally succeeded in stopping the hiccoughs.

Workmen building a sidewalk in Clinton, near the Chicago & Eastern Illinois right-of-way unearthed an interesting book, in a fair state of preservation, bearing the minutes of the Town Board from 1867 to 1873. At that time Clinton had a population of three hundred.

W. C. Hart, aged 86, who lived n Evansville, is dead of lockjaw, caused in a peculiar way. While slicing a piece of tobacco off his plug, a few days ago, Hart cut his finger slightly and paid no attention to it until it began to swell and tetanus developed. Hart's body was shipped to Hartford, Ky., where he formerly lived.

The last request of Anderson Hogston, aged 76 years, a wealthy farmer, was not complied with. It was his desire to have his body cremated, but his relatives did not favor his plan and his body was buried at the Odd Fellows' cemetery at Marion. His home was near Reeseburg, and he had gained fame by raising watermelons.

Much comment has been aroused at Greencastle by the action of Ralph T. Moss, who represents the Fifth Indiana district in Congress, in attacking the custom of distributing free seed packages to farmers. Representative Moss, who is himself a farmer, declares that it costs the Government 40 cents to purchase and send out a package of seeds, which any one can buy at a cross roads store for 5 cents.

Two double weddings on the same day, two sisters figuring in one and a brother and sister in the other, have just been celebrated at Muncie. Miss Margaret Drown and Elbra Rowe, and Miss Nola Drown and Floyd A. Artip were principals in the first, and were married by the Rev. W. A. Bartlett. The principals in the second wedding were Carl Forkner and Miss Alma Powell, and Mis Eva Forkner and Roy Lashure, the Rev. J. P. Chamness officiating.

The body of Andrew Hall, aged 80, who lived with his daughter, Mrs. Johnson, on the Lee Hudelson farm, east of Dunreith, was found floating in Buck creek, near Newcastle, by a searching party. Hall's coat and hat were found on the bank of the stream, which was swollen from recent rains. The aged man's body was found two miles down stream from the point where his coat and hat were found. Hall was almost blind and frequently expressed a wish to die.

Marks, a coon dog, owned by L. R. Worth, who lives in the Kankakee marsh country, had the fight of its life a few nights ago, with the result that it will probably do no more hunting this winter. Soon after dark the dog strolled to the woods just back of the house. In a few minutes sounds of a fierce struggle were heard. When Worth arrived on the scene, armed with a club, he found Marks mixed up with a large wolf, and seemingly the under dog in the fight. The wolf would probably have killed him had not Worth used his club and finally landed a blow that partially stunned the wolf. Marks had sufficient strength left to finish the wolf, but the dog was so badly used up it had to be helped home. Its ears are in shreds and it may lose one eye, if not its life.

A novel scheme for keeping chickens at home has been tried at Owensville with success. The chickens are fed kernels of corn to which are tied shipping tags bearing the following notice: "Keep your chickens at home."

James Dushane, of Chicago, was fined $30 and costs at Fort Wayne for selling adulterated butter. He says he sold 600 pounds, made of oleomargarine lard and coloring matter. He will be turned over to the Federal authorities.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Chicago Trade says: "Indications of the usual year-end slowing up business are confined wholly to concerns preparing for their annual inventories and necessary repairs. All other activities testify to expanding efforts to increase production. Many deliveries have to be completed within the next two weeks and extra pressure is placed upon facilities in metal and woodworking. Finished products and general merchandise figure to an exceptional extent in freight forwarding. There is also an increased movement of live stock and some of the principal raw materials, but the recent stormy weather caused decreased marketings of breadstuffs.

"The general demand for seasonable needs reflects a stronger purchasing power. This is conspicuous in the leading retail lines here and in the interior. Estimates of the Christmas trade compare favorably with all previous records. Buying remains good for spring merchandise and the outlook is exceedingly good for wholesalers of dry goods, woolens, clothing, footwear and food products. Operations in the leading industries reflect sustained strength. New enterprises increase in number and capital investment, and include another large plant at Gary and extensive additions in mercantile lines on State street. Payments through the banks reflect steady expansion in commerce. Money is in wider request and there is little prospect of an earlier discount rate.

"Bank clearings, $296,590,746, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 12.7 per cent, and compare with $239,420,482 in 1907.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number 28, against 20 last last week, 41 in 1908 and 28 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 10, against 7 last week, 13 in 1908 and 12 in 1907."

NEW YORK.

The retail and holiday trade has been helped by seasonable weather and the approach of Christmas and makes good comparisons with preceding years, a few markets, in fact, reporting a record turnover for the season. Jobbing trade reports are cheerful, with special stress laid upon the volume of reassorting demand to fill broken stocks. The wholesale trade and the demand from manufacturers tend to become quiet as the stock-taking period approaches, but order books for future delivery are well filled. Industrial operations are still active on old orders.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with Dec. 16 were 273, against 259 last week, 311 in the same week of 1908, 300 in 1907, 227 in 1906 and 235 in 1905.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 33, which contrasts with 30 last week and 31 in the same week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

The Misses Mary and Gleona Fowler of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, are here this week the guest of Henry Hull and other relatives in this vicinity.

Hiram Reasoner and wife and Alvin Reasoner and family, visited over Christmas with Wilbur Potter and family and Jerry Carmer and family at Ft. Wayne.

Wm. Baron, of Newville, while attending his chores, Monday evening of last week, was seriously kicked by one of the horses on the head which caused him to loose conscious and did not revive until Tuesday noon. The doctor thinks although he is seriously hurt that he will recover nicely.

Daniel Morr, one of our farmer friends residing near Concord, drove to the city this morning and when near the Jenkins & Mochamer grocery his horse slipped on the icy streets and fell. In doing so its head came in contact with the frozen ground and one of its teeth was broken off. Others no doubt were loosened as it bled profusely. No other damage was done save one of the thills to his buggy was broken.—Thursday's Auburn Courier.

If you are suffering from billousness, constipation, indigestion, chronic headache, invest one cent in a postal card, send to Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Iowa, with your name and address plainly on the back, and they will forward you a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Sold by H. M. Milliman, St. Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

A fine showing of practical and efficient heroism is made in the annular report of the Life Saving Service. It shows that during the past year there have been 1,376 marine disasters, imperilling the lives of 8,000 persons, with only thirty lives actually lost, and also of property saved worth $13,316,815. Of the exertions, perils and self-sacrifice of those who did the work no report could edequately tell.

DAY—WARSTLER

At the home of the bride's parents, Miss Kate May Warstler and Julius Day, of near Newville, were quietly married on last Thursday. A big wedding dinner was served and the guests present had a most enjoyable time. Some nice and useful presents were received by the happy couple. In the evening the bridal couple were given an old fashioned belling, and when the boys were invited into the home they were treated to a fine luncheon and cigars. Those present besides the immediate family were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Parleton, of Garrett, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rinehold and son, Eli Joseph.—DeKalb County Herald.

Why Is It So?

Apples from Canada are in greater demand in England than apples from the United States according to a consular report recently published. The only reason given by the buyer who goes to Liverpool to make his purchases is that when he takes a case or barrel of Canadian apples he knows what he is securing. When he takes American apples there is usually more or less uncertainty. When Canadian apples are packed for exportation they are carefully sorted and only one variety is put into a barrel. Moreover, so much care is exercised in grading that the contents of a barrel are uniform. Less trouble is taken with apples from the United States. Occasionally, when a barrel is opened half a dozen varieties will roll out and the apples near the middle will be found hardly fit for cider. Many fruit growers in Ontario are members of an association and send their apples to a central packing place under its management. After the fruit has been sorted, graded and packed the associations, label is placed on the package and is a guarantee that if the contents are not what they purport to be the buyer will be reimbursed. Why cannot similar methods be adopted in this country? The reputation of a hundred honest packers suffers when one such trick as that just referred to is practised on an unknown consumer.

Some Interesting Figures.

Draw a line from Baltimore to Indianapolis, and from Indianapolis north to Traverse Bay, in northern Michigan, then east to Ottawa; the Canadian capital and back to Baltimore, you have then enclosed an area equivalent to that of Saskatchewan. The province of Saskatchewan is 760 miles long by 360 miles wide. A pretty big grain field. The population of the province in 1906 was 260,000 it is now estimated at 325,000. The area of wheat growing in 1898 was less than three hundred thousand acres; in 1908 it was nearly four million acres. In 1898 the wheat yield was less than five million bushels; in 1908 it was more than fifty million bushels. The total grain yield this year will reach 150,000 bushels. The six million acres of soil under crop are but 3 per cent of the total area of the province. The number of farms in the province is about 75,000, as compared with less than 15,000 in 1900. There are nearly two million head of livestock on these farms. The school enrollment of the province is about 35,000.

Both oil and gas have been found in northwestern Canada in abundance. At Medicine Hat a huge gas well which had been accidentally set on fire burned for days, although every expedient was used to extinguish the flames. Finally a man from Indiana told the Canadians how to extinguish the blaze by the use of steam, which cut the flame in two, and a few days ago it was shut off. The biggest gas well in the world roars in the wilderness far north of here, and has been wasting fuel by the million cubic feet every day for a dozen years—pretty good evidence of the need of a propaganda for the conservation of natural resources in Canada, but not surprising in view of the fact that the Hudson Bay company was enabled for a quarter of a century to hold back the tide of immigration to millions of acres of arable lands, for the reason that settlers would scare away the minks and the muskrats! Canada's aspirations are now agricultural rather than industrial. Despite free fuel, it will be a long time before manufacturing interests are largely developed. The talk one hears here, on the trains, in the hotels and on the trails is of the soil and the crops. Canada is centering her thought today on the realization of her agricultural possibilities. The Laurier government is alive to the growing power of the Canadian Northwest. All that legislation can do for the betterment of the condition of the farmer is being done. The government of this province and of Alberta as well, is certain to have strong agrarian leanings, for the rural population will vastly outnumber the urban population for many decades to come. An American is surprised to find how far the government has gone in the equalization of freight rates, in the acquisition of telephone lines, in the policing of the rural as well as the urban districts, in the delivery of mail and along other paternalistic lines—all calculated to make rural life inviting.

The agricultural experiment stations are doing great work in showing the farmers what to do and how to do it. At the government station at Indian Head the following remarkable yields per acre have been produced: Wheat, 67 bushels; oats, 147 bushels; potatoes, 646 bushels; flax, 22.40 bushels; barley, 68.36 bushels. These, of course, are remarkable results, brought about by intensive culture, but they represent a wonderful high water mark, the like of which is probably not to be found elsewhere in the world.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

FESTIVAL OF JOY AND GLADNESS

Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis.

Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy.—Luke 2:10.

Once more the hallowed, gracious Christmas time is upon the earth. At last the long year of toil is all but ended. The Christmas festival, dedicated to happiness and goodwill, has fully come. This morning has wakened to quadruple joy. The very atmosphere of our earth is rosy, stained with the rich colors of ors of the heart. All windows are bright with holly and evergreen. Parents have discovered that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Joys run riot in the heart of little children. Youth overflows with animal spirits. Suddenly the aged have shed their years and become young again. Before the light had fully dawned, the carols had begun to be heard in the churches. And every passing hour will behold larger multitudes thronging to these temples of the soul. All feel that no flowers are sweet enough, no songs bright enough, no gifts rich enough for the Christmas Day. For once all strife and enmity have disappeared from the market place. To-day all swords are sheathed. This morning misers have become generous, pessimists have become optimists, while generous natures glow and effulge like the sun. Verily, Christmas lies like a bar of sunshine across the face of our dark earth.

REV. HILLIS.

To-day, if some visitant from a celestial realm were to draw near to our earth for the first time, to go away again when darkness falls, the angel would carry with him the conviction that there is one sunny planet among the host of worlds where all childhood is rich and happy, knowing no care or sorrow. And it is literally true that this era of happiness for children is distinctly traceable to the Christmas event and the Christmas spirit. All children do well to celebrate the Manger Child, because it was Jesus who discovered childhood. When rulers and titled men questioned Him, Jesus placed a child in the midst of them and said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Every lover of childhood must rise up to speak for that Christ who took a child in His arms, whose love brooded over the child as the stars looked down upon the little town of Bethlehem, and who sent down through the ages this word, "Suffer little children to come unto me." Jesus said, "Take heed that ye offend not one of my little children," and "Their angels do always behold the face of my Father," and hope dawned for childhood. From that hour Jesus' disciples began to make life happy for children.

Christ's estimate of the value of childhood has conquered the world. His thought of childhood is the very heart and genius of Christian civilization.

Because Christmas stands for the child, as the father of the man and for the cradle, as the one point where futurity is vulnerable, it will yet usher in the Golden Age. To produce an ideal world we need only one thing—a Christmas that last all the year. When the sun rises it throws its beams of sunshine forward a half hour in advance of the orb of fire. When the sun sets the light lingers long in the clouds. And the Golden Age means that the approaching Christmas will cast its generous beams forward toward July, and that when the Christmas Day has passed its peace and good-will will linger to lend light to those months that end with June. To-day parents give gifts to their children, the prosperous help the poor, the happy stretch out friendly hands toward the widow and the fatherless—the Christmas spirit has transformed selfishness into service. This morning, without changing a single law, economic or political, lo! the Golden Age is come. It seems that to produce an ideal world, without sorrow or strife or sin, it is only necessary that the beams that stream from this bright day should encircle our old earth, not in robes of frosty selfishness, but with the sweet blossom of the heart.

Little wonder that in the far-off forest and valley and plain, in the frozen North and in the sunny South, in the innumerable homes of Christendom, all people, young and old alike, through gifts and song and good will, celebrate this greatest day and the greatest event that has ever befallen our earth. The civilization that advances and rolls forward like a golden flood represents a spirit that set forth from Bethlehem. Universal happiness and wisdom and peace will come to our earth when the Christmas comes to stay all the year.

GOD'S LOVE.

By Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D.

The Bible takes especial pains to assure us of the everlastingness of God's love. In one passage, for example, it is declared that while even the mountains shall depart, God's loving kindness suggests all that is sweet, tender and comforting in love. There are men who love and are not kind. They would give all they have to help a friend, and yet they lack gentleness. They are stern, severe, brusque. They have not a gracious manner. They are not kind. Kindness is love's best. It not only gives, but gives in a way that adds a hundredfold to the value of the gift.

Kindness in this passage is made still tenderer by the qualifying word loving—loving-kindness. There may be kindness that is not loving. It is a great comfort to know that God's power shall not depart, is eternal. Nothing ever can sweep away our refuge in the almighty strength of God. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble, therefore we will not fear, though the earth do change, and though the mountains be shaken into the heart of the seas."

But power is cold—it lacks heart. The word loving-kindness means far more. It suggests affection, tenderness, all that is warmest, tenderest and most comforting.

The assurance is that the loving-kindness of God shall not fail. There never will be a day or an hour when He will not be kind. Can He be a father and not be kind to His children? The Bible is full of the most exquisite revealings of God's kindness. "Like as a father pitieth his children, so Jehovah pitieth them that fear Him." As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort thee." "The mountains may depart—but my loving-kindness shall not depart from thee." It is also in the Old Testament that we find another exquisite picture of the divine loving-kindness. In his farewell address Moses said to his people: "Underneath are the everlasting arms." There is a comfort in the embrace of a father's or a mother's arms. But we are not sure that we shall have these arms very long; no human arms are everlasting. The arms of God, however, will never unclasp their hold. Then they are ever underneath. We cannot fall out of their clasp. However low we may sink in weakness or in pain, these arms will always be underneath us.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

By Nahum Tate.

[Nahum Tate (Dublin, 1652—London, Aug. 12, 1715), one time poet laureate of England, succeeding Shadwell in that office, was not, despite his descent from a celebrated clergyman, precisely the man who might have been expected to produce one of the best of all Christmas hymns. But since it was published in the supplement to Tate and Brady's Psalms, in 1702, this song steadily has held a high place in popular favor. It has been translated many times into classic Latin and is sung in almost every tongue on the globe. Among all the carols which will ring out on the frosty air on Christmas eve in England none will find a warmer welcome than this.]

While shepherds watched their flocks by night,
All seated on the ground,
The angel of the Lord came down,
And glory shone around.

"Fear not!" said he, for mighty dread
Had seized their troubled mind,
"Glad tidings of great joy I bring,
To you and all mankind.

"To you, in David's town, this day
Is born, of David's line,
The Savior, who is Christ the Lord;
And this shall be the sign:

"The heavenly babe you there shall find
To human view displayed,
All meanly wrapped in swathing bands,
And in a manger laid."

Thus spake the seraph; and forthwith
Appeared a shining throng
Of angels praising God on high,
Who thus addressed their song:

"All glory be to God on high,
And to the earth be peace;
Good will henceforth from heaven to men,
Begin and never cease!"

SERMONETTES.

Rules may be tutors into principles.

This would be a foolish world but for its fools.

Next to deserving praise the greatest privilege is to give it.

No man has the gospel unless his neighbors are glad of it.

The trouble with many who boast of being square is that they have so many angles.

Gossip is the power to put two and two together and make twenty-five out of them.

A man always comes to a standstill when he thinks he occupies an axial position in the universe.

The more men prate of their faith in God the less willing they are to trust Him with the universe.

They who would find perfection without pain are looking only to put an edge on a sword of lead.

A TRAGIC BLUNDER

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

Author of "In a Grass Country," "A Daughter's Heart," "A Sister's Sin," "Jack's Secret," Etc., Etc.

He had died, but he had died happy! He believed her to be staunch and true, and he knew nothing in his last moments of that terrible letter it had taken her such hours to write, and in which she had told him that she had seen once more at a distance the face of the man she loved, and that having seen it she felt she could never, never give herself to any other on the face of the earth.

To her dying day Irene never ceased to be thankful that he had not read it, for had poor Joe Taunton opened that letter, she would have felt herself to be guilty of his death. As it was, he died loving her, trusting her, believing in her, and his last action after leaving her the previous day, had been to sign his name to a will that left to her everything belonging to him that was not strictly entailed upon his cousin, the heir-at-law.

He had left her a clear forty thousand pounds, absolutely and entirely, besides the Cottage at Chatswell which he had already given to her; she had in addition the many beautiful jewels and ornaments he had lavished upon her. Moreover, he had left to Lady Garland a legacy of four hundred and fifty pounds, presumably to clear those trousseau bills which had been run up by her so ruthlessly on Irene's account.

Yet Irene was for a long time very inconsolable, and for some months her health suffered severely. Her aunt, who was in no hurry to get rid of her now that she was an heiress, persuaded her to leave town almost immediately; and, throwing up her own engagement to stay with her daughter, she accompanied her to a quiet seaside place on the south coast of Devonshire, where for many months the two ladies lived in the strictest retirement. And it so happened therefore, quite naturally and without any effort of hers, that Irene never happened to hear of the death of Rupert Carroll's wife until long after.

One day, wandering by herself along these sands at low tide beneath the red sandstone cliffs, Irene suddenly met a lady and gentleman walking arm and arm towards her. Even now, although she knew that she was mistaken, and that this man was not her Rupert, his extraordinary likeness to him startled her once more and made her heart beat violently. Almost involuntarily she stopped, and Lord Netherville, recognizing her, instantly stopped too—he smiled and lifted his hat.

"Miss Garland! I think it is time I claimed acquaintance with you on my own account," he said, pleasantly, "though I am not the man I believe you take me for. Will you let me present my wife—Lady Netherville—we were married yesterday in town, and have come down here for a breath of sea air and a little quiet honeymooning," and Irene found herself shaking hands with the very lady with the yellow hair whom she had so often seen with him before.

"Lord Netherville thinks you must have taken him for his cousin, Miss Garland," explained the bride, who seemed to have softened down her rouge, and looked all the better in consequence. Happiness had improved her in every way. She was quieter both in dress and in manner.

"Pray, tell me, Lord Netherville," inquired Irene, blushing very much, "how it is that you resemble Mr. Rupert Carroll so extraordinarily?"

"He is my first cousin, as my wife says, and our mothers were twin-sisters, whose resemblance to one another was, I believe, very remarkable. This, I suppose, accounts for the likeness between their sons."

After a little pause, Irene found courage to say: "And Mr. Carroll?—he is quite well, I hope?"

"He was quite well when last I heard of him, thanks," he answered; but he did not volunteer any further information about Rupert, except to mention the death of his wife, and Irene was too shy to pursue the subject.

CHAPTER XXVII.

It was a lovely morning in the last week in April; the trees were all robing themselves in haste with that fresh and tender greenery that heralds the approach of early summer; the lilacs and laburnums were bursting into flower; the apple blossoms in the orchards scented the air with their delicate perfume; the garden borders were gay with tulips and hyacinths, and the birds were singing thanksgivings in every bush and from every tree top.

The old cottage at Chatswell was awake and alive betimes this lovely morning. Billy had been sweeping and weeding, and rolling the gravel paths with assiduous diligence for a week past. Clean white curtains had been put up in the diamond-paned windows all over the house. And one little bedroom in particular had been newly scrubbed and cleaned and furbished up with special and loving care.

In the garden, as in the house, the six little pale-faced London children were working hard; some were helping the cook; some were gathering rhubarb and parsley in the kitchen garden, or picking large bunches of pansies and of wallflower to decorate the house, and that one little upper bedroom in particular. There was a general air of happy bustle and excitement over the whole establishment. For Miss Garland, their beloved benefactress, was expected to-day to come and stay with them.

Miss Gibbs, the matron, alone was anxious and preoccupied; for Irene had given her to understand that her visit might very likely be prolonged indefinitely, in which case she imagined that Miss Garland would take up the duties of matron herself in the little home, and that her own services might be no longer required. This thought made Miss Gibbs very sad, for she was fond of the place and the children, and she had no wish to leave it. Her heart beat anxiously when Irene alighted at the gate from the fly which had brought her from the station.

Irene had never looked more lovely. Not all the gay, fashionably-made gowns that she used to wear when she was reckoned the smartest as well as the prettiest girl in London society, set off her beauty one-half so well as did this simple dress of Quaker grey, guiltless of fringes and trimmings, and all of those wonderful combinations of cut and of drapery in which town dressmakers are wont to display their skill.

Irene had surely gained some deeper experience, some wider sympathies, some graver perceptions of life. There was a tender and serious womanliness about her now, that had been lacking in her of old. The very way she met poor Miss Gibbs' tremulous questions showed how mindful she was of the feelings of others.

"Turn you out, Miss Gibbs? What an idea!" she exclaimed, in gentle surprise. "Oh, indeed, I should not treat you so ungratefully! I am only trying to arrange for the purchase of those three cottages across the road in order to turn them into another home—in that case we should be able to take in twelve or fourteen children instead of six, and I should put you in charge of the new house, and retain the supervision of this one myself, but I should not think of losing your services altogether, and for the present, I have only come to talk over this new idea, and to stay with you a little while—as a guest."

Miss Gibbs breathed anew and thanked her effusively for her kindness, and Irene went on to talk to her little pensioners.

Presently, when the children had all gone into the house for their dinner, Irene wandered down by herself to the river side. A stout iron fence had been set up at the end of the garden, lest any of the children should stumble into the water, but she opened the locked gate with the key she had brought with her. A narrow pathway ran outside along the side of the river. She sat down close to the edge amongst the rushes that bordered the path. It was all very still and peaceful. The quiet stream flowed placidly past her, the willows opposite mirrored their drooping boughs in the tranquil water; there were no lilies yet, neither the golden buds of the yellow ones, nor the regal crowns of the white ones; it was too early in the year for them, but on the island opposite, the king-cups were spangling the ground, and a bright-breasted kingfisher sat motionless on a willow bough watching for his prey.

There was neither skiff, nor canoe, nor punt, belonging to the Cottage now. A longing came over Irene to go upon the water—to those who love boating, the river becomes a positive worship, and the sensation of floating upon the ever moving and varying stream, with its shadows and its green reflections, is one of purest and keenest delight.

"It is all changed!" thought Irene with a sigh. "It is like myself—the same—yet something quite, quite different! The past never renews itself—never!" But all the time she experienced the same almost childish longing to be out upon the rippling water.

At that moment her ears caught the distant sound of a sharp and regular click. It was out of sight, and yet it came nearer and nearer. Irene knew that sound well. It was the ring of the punt pole as the iron strikes down amongst the stones on the bed of the river. She experienced a vague excitement as it drew nearer, and she bent eagerly forward to watch the opening of the back-water. Presently she saw a punt glide out of the shadows round the far end of the island. A man stood in it. The punt swung round and came towards her. The man was facing her—she sprang to her feet, then stood stock still, trembling violently, yet motionless, waiting for him with a wildly beating heart.

He was quite close to her now, she could see his face plainly; the dark eyes that flashed with joy, the lips that smiled a welcome, the grey hair that curled crisply beneath the straw hat.

Was she dreaming? Was she mad and was this an hallucination of her brain—or was she dying, and was it her last vision of the lovely world she was leaving forever? Then he came quite close, and the punt grated upon the shore; he held out his hand to her.

"Irene, my love! Irene!" he said, and she knew his voice, and that it was himself, at last, and no vision or dream.

"It is you! it is you!" she repeated, bewilderedly. "How are you here?—what miracle has brought you back to me?"

Then he laughed happily, and grasped her hand and drew her down into the punt by his side.

"You did not see me in your train this morning? I followed you from town. I came home from America only yesterday, and I went at once to your aunt's house. When I heard from the servants that you were coming to Chatswell to-day, I determined to follow you here, Irene; I thought that it would be as sweet to you as to me that we should meet again here—here, on the very spot where we parted on that happy moonlit night, so long ago! Come, let us go up to the lasher together, my love, whom I lost so miserably, but have found again at last; never to lose again. We have so much, so very much to say to each other! Come out on the dear old river with me, and let me tell you all."

So she went with him to the old place under the weir, and there, in sight of the tumbling waters, where long ago he had told her of his love, the strange and tragic story of all that had parted them, was made clear to her at last.

* * * * * *

There is not a happier couple now in all England than Mr. and Mrs. Carroll; they live entirely in the country, in a charming house they have bought about three miles from Chatswell, whose gardens slope down to the river's edge.

The Cottage Convalescent Homes have increased and multiplied, and Miss Gibbs reigns supreme over eighteen pale-faced London children who are now their constant inmates, whilst Billy Watson has been promoted to the proud position of head gardener, with a boy to order about under him.

Lady Garland is dead, she succumbed to influenza last winter abroad, but Louise Carroll is very well, and is a frequent visitor to her brother's house; she has become very fond of her new sister-in-law as she used to be of poor Agatha, and by-and-bye when a small Louise and a yet smaller Harold have been added to the family group, she developed into the most abjectly devoted maiden aunt in the world.

The Nethervilles, too, often come down to stay with their cousins; as they have no children of their own, little Harold, as heir to the title, comes in for a good deal of attention from Lord Netherville.

But Irene often says to her husband: "After all, I cannot think why I ever mistook Netherville for you, Rupert; he is not half so good-looking!"

"But then his hair is not grey!" he replies, laughing.

"No, but that only makes you all the handsomer!" she retorts, fondly.

(The end.)

ROYAL SPORT OF THE MALAYS.

One of the items of the program of the Governor's visit to the federated Malay States, says the Malay Times, is that of "meng-gulunchor," or a water-sliding game. This is a tobogganing game which is peculiar to Malays of Perak and is known to be of ancient origin. The game is arranged as follows:

A party of rapams or chiefs having decided to indulge in this form of amusement, warn their followers of their intentions. As it is a game which abounds with much merriment and fun, several hundreds of men, women and children soon busy themselves in making preparations for the picnic which is usually part of the program. A spur of hills from where leaps a waterfall and at the base of which is a pool is then selected. On the way appointed all instructed overnight wend their way toward the foot of the hills. After climbing up the hills until the pleasure seekers reach a great rock on which they can accommodate themselves comfortably a halt is made. Fires are then made and the business of cooking started by the women folks.

The game of meng-gelunchor then commences. It is to slide, and the game is to "toboggan" down the waterfall into the pool below. Little boys first do the sliding. They go to the top of the fall, sit down on one of the cascades, with feet straight out in front of them, and with a hand on either side to support themselves they glide down the 10-odd feet of height to the valley below. They follow each other incessantly, those behind coming on the top of those who have reached the base. The men and lastly the women then join the sliders, and the frolicsome game soon becomes as fast and exciting as on a switchback railway. Occasionally a slider slips himself and loses his balance. The fun then commences. The frantic attempts made by the awkward slider to grasp hold of something, his tumbling and bumping as he descends, and final plunge into the pool are a sight which will provoke laughter from the gravest of judges.

The exercise is continued until about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, by which time every one is tired, and a hungry crowd does justice to the meal. After an hour spent in gossip and smoking the picnic is at an end and the pleasure-seekers return to their homes.

The novelty and charm of the exercise is that there are so few casualties in the game. Beyond a few scratches and bruises the sliders do seldom get the least hurt. Most of the sliders are, of course, trained men and used to the game. Sometimes the cough flower sheaths of the Pinang and Niblong palms, called by the natives "Upeh," are used to help them in the sliding, but they are generally done away with, physical pain being a thing that excites little or no sympathy from most Malays. In fact, it is the marvelous pluck and endurance of the tobogganists that lends an interest to the game of meng-gelunchor.

Temperamentally Affected.

"Clothes make a great difference in people," said the thoughtful woman.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Flimgilt, "I have known one of my new gowns to change my husband into a perfect bear."—Washington Star.

SORE EYES CURED.

Eye-balls and Lids Became Terribly Inflamed—Was Unable to Go About—All Treatments Failed—Cuticura Proved Successful.

"About two years ago my eyes got in such a condition that I was unable to go about. They were terribly inflamed, both the balls and lids. I tried home remedies without relief. Then I decided to go to our family physician, but he didn't help them. Then I tried two more of our most prominent physicians, but my eyes grew continually worse. At this time a friend of mine advised me to try Cuticura Ointment, and after using it about one week my eyes were considerably improved and in two weeks they were almost well. They have never given me any trouble since and I am now sixty-five years old. I shall never fail to praise Cuticura. G. B. Halsey, Mouth of Wilson, Va., April 4, 1908."

Sun Cooking.

A German, Baron Tehernhausen, was the first sun cook. He began in 1687 to boil water, and in 1688 he had very good success in boiling eggs. Sir John Herschel and Buffon are other famous names associated with sun cooking. Sun cooking—roasting and boiling by sunlight instead of coal or gas—has been going on for three hundred years. There are sun stoves that roast a sirloin or boil a soup to perfection. They are only used, however, by scientists.

"Hark," he said to the clown, "there has been a sad accident in the side show."

"How so, governor?" the clown asked as he jumped through a paper hoop.

"A poor man," said the distinguished ringmaster, "visited the side show with his twin boys, plump little fellows, and the cannibals got loose and ate philopena with them."

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel (600 miles north of the International boundary). Your vacant land will be taken as a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly

SILHOUETTES OF WESTERN CANADA.

The man from Iowa began to talk land before the train was well out of the C. N. R. depot in Winnipeg. The talk began in rather wide circles. The rush to the land, the bumper crop, the system of summer fallowing pursued in the semi-arid districts, were all discussed, and then, with a sort of apologetic smile, the Iowa man said: "I'm a bit interested in this country myself. Some of the men down home got a few sections up here along this line, and I'm going to have a look at them. Never been up in Canada before" (it is curious how these mid-Western Americans pronounce the name of the Dominion as if it was "Can'dy"), "but if it looks good we will be up to stay next fall."

"You see, it's like this," said the man from Iowa, quite manifestly continuing an argument that had been going on in his mind for some time. "Back in our State land has become dear. Anybody wanting to sell can get $70 or $80 an acre for it, and every farm that's offered is snapped up. In Saskatchewan we have just as good land that cost us $11 and $12, so that a man can take up five or six times as much there as in Iowa on the same investment of money.

"It isn't the money, though, that brings most of us up from Iowa. I'm not sure that money would be enough. The 'invasion' is a family affair. We have no chance of keeping our sons around us back home. They have to leave the farm and go into the big cities of the neighboring States to get work. To keep them on the farm and in touch with us, we come up here and make little colonies with the children around us, on homesteads or bought land. This makes it easier for the farmers back there in Iowa to get land for the stay-at-homes. The families that come to Canada are kept together and the families that buy the farms they leave are kept together, too. There won't be any slackening of the rush, either, for they still raise big families back in Iowa."

One could almost see the mental process of this typical American farmer in defending a step that meant a new flag, a new allegiance, a new land, and new associates. To abandon "Old Glory" and the Declaration of Independence for a good thing in cheap land would hardly be playing the game, but to go out into Saskatchewan to "keep the family together" was another and a quite higher motive.

Why seek too closely to analyze the reasons for the greatest land trek in the history of America? It is enough to know what the sons of the frontiersmen of Iowa, and Kansas, and Minnesota—the best blood of the mid-West—are pouring into the Canadian West in an ever-increasing stream, and are learning that "God Save the King" and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," are sung to the same tune.—Toronto (Ontario) Globe.

In the gray light of early morning the traveler in Scotland faced the night clerk resolutely. "You gave me the worst bed in the inn!" he began, indignation in his voice and eyes. "If you don't change me before to-night, I shall look up other lodgings."

"There is no difference in the beds, sir," the clerk replied, respectfully.

The traveler smiled ironically.

"If that is so," he said, "perhaps you wouldn't mind giving me the room on the left of mine."

"It is occupied, sir."

"I know it is. By a man who snored all night, and was still at it ten minutes ago. His bed must be better than mine, or he couldn't sleep at a maximum capacity of sound sight hours on a stretch."

"The beds are all alike sir. That man has been here before, and he always sleeps on the floor, sir."

TWO SISTERS DEAD; SUICIDE?

One Recluse Is Found Hanged, Other with Hatpin Near Heart.

Two aged spinster sisters, Frances and Isabel Ritchie, were found dead in their home in Newark, N. J., under most mysterious circumstances.

The sisters had lived quietly and alone for the past twenty years in the same house. Their source of income was as mysterious as their secluded life, but they kept their house in order and paid their bills regularly. The elder woman, Frances, was 56 years old; the sister a few years her junior.

Frances was found dead, lying on the floor, while the body of the sister dangled from a piece of clothesline made fast above a door leading from the dining-room to the kitchen. The first indications were that Frances had died from natural causes and that Isabel had hanged herself in a paroxysm of grief. This theory was dispelled when a small box was found in the dining room, on the cover of which had been written these words: "Frances hung herself at 2½ Sat. Me too."

This led to the belief that the two old women had carried out a suicide pact, Frances hanging herself, first and the body being cut down by the sister. But further investigation brought to light more grewsome details. Underneath her clothing and sticking in the breast of Frances was a hatpin, buried in the flesh up to its black head. The pin had been driven close to the heart to a depth of about four inches. Similar wounds, but of not such a serious nature, were found on the other body, which leads to the belief that the sisters may have quarreled and fought.

Whether Frances deliberately hanged her sister, then killed herself with the hatpin, or whether the sister found hanging stabbed the other and then ended her life will perhaps never be known. The hands of the body on the floor were carefully crossed and the head rested on a sofa cushion.

There is a possibility that both were murdered, but the house shows no trace of having been entered by strangers. The women had lived alone since the death of their mother, more than fifteen years ago, with a large dog as their sole companion. Recently the dog died, and since that time the women had been despondent.

COREAN PREMIER IS STABBED.

Head of National Cabinet Fatally Wounded While in Seoul.

Premier Yi, the head of the Corean Cabinet, was stabbed and fatally wounded the other day by a Corean, Yie Chamm Yong. Premier Yi was formerly Minister of Education in the Corean Cabinet. He became Prime Minister in May, 1907, when a reconstruction of the Cabinet followed a five hour audience that Marquis Ito, the Japanese resident, had with the Emperor. Yi was regarded as a firm and competent officer, but his efforts to carry out the policy of the new administration met with determined opposition from his political adversaries. The attack occurred at 10 o'clock in the morning. The assailant was a Christian who was for many years a resident of the United States. The Premier was riding in his jinrickshaw when the assassin came up with a long knife in his hand. He drove this twice into the abdomen of the Premier and once into the latter's lung. The assassin then turned on the Premier's jinrickshaw man, whom he stabbed and instantly killed. The assassin was immediately arrested. He is a youth of about 20 years and is believed to be a member of a political secret society.

FIVE PROBABLY PERISHED.

Fireman Also Killed in Destruction of Building at Philadelphia.

At least five girls employed in the six-story building occupied by Schrack & Sherwood, manufacturers of undertakers' supplies, which was destroyed by fire in Philadelphia, are missing and it is feared they lost their lives. Joseph Toner, a fireman, was killed. He gave up his life in searching for the missing on the lower floors of the building while the upper part of the structure was aflame. A score of persons sustained burns and other injuries. About twenty women were at work on the fifth floor when the fire was discovered on the floor below. With the assistance of policemen and firemen the majority escaped, but some were carried out unconscious from the smoke.

BIG CINCINNATI BANKS MERGED

First National Absorbs Merchants'—Combined Deposits $26,000,000.

By action of their boards of directors the Merchants' National Bank is absorbed by the First National in Cincinnati. To accomplish the merger the First National increased its capital stock from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000, and it now has a surplus and undivided profits of $2,100,000 and deposits of $26,000,000. The First National becomes the largest bank in the Ohio valley. W. S. Rowe, president of the First National, continues in that office. M. E. Ingalls, president of the Merchants' National, retires.

Texas Eight-Hour Law Invalid.

The first court of civil appeals of Galveston handed down a decision the other day which declared the eight-hour telegraphers' law, passed by the Texas Legislature last year, unconstitutional, as it conflicts with the Federal statutes, which allows nine hours as a working day.

PROF. MUNYON'S PHILANTHROPY

Giving to the Nation a Prize That Money Cannot Buy.

"I would rather preserve the health of a nation than to be its ruler."—Munyon.

This motto, written by Prof. Munyon about sixteen years ago, was the real cornerstone of his medicine business. He felt that the people of the nation were neglecting their health owing to lack of money. With the one thought in view of helping humanity, he started in the medicine business, paying large sums of money to eminent specialists for known and tried formulas that were known to have been successful in curing diseases. After carefully compounding these formulas and putting them up in a marketable condition, he offered them to the public for a few pennies, easily within the reach of the poorest family. He hired eminent specialists at large salaries and offered their services absolutely free to the public to diagnose their cases and advise them what remedies to take. After giving the public all these benefits he was still unsatisfied and offered further to those who were not in reach of the offices which he established throughout the country; he advertised, asking them to write to his specialists for free medical examination, and to-day Prof. Munyon is still following out this policy, and whenever he hears of a new drug or a new formula that is more effective than those that he is at the time compounding, he purchases them regardless of cost.

Prof. Munyon puts up a separate cure for almost every ill, and these remedies can be had at all druggists, mostly 25 cents a bottle. In taking these remedies, you are taking what might be called a sure thing, for he guarantees them to produce satisfactory results or he will refund your money. This is a remarkable man and a remarkable institution, manifestly fair to all, and a firm that we do not hesitate to recommend to our readers.

One Successful Case.

"Doctor, you're not so foolish as to think you can make people good by performong operations on them, are you?"

"That depends upon what you call making people good. You can check their disposition to commit crime."

"As, for example"—

"Well, I once knew a man who was cured, by a simple operation, of a tendency to rob banks and hold up railway trains."

"Did you perform it, doctor?"

"No; I was merely called on to verify the result after the operation was over."

"Well, who did perform it?"

"A frontier sheriff."—Chicago Tribune.

Clip This Out.

At the first sign of rheumatic pains or backache, or a feeling of being generally run down and weakened, the following simple prescription should be used:

"One ounce compound syrup Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris compound; half pint high grade whiskey. Mix them and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time. The bottle must be well shaken each time.

Any druggist has these ingredients or he will get them from his wholesale house.

A Joke of Mark Twain's.

Probably few people are aware that the theatrical godfather of that famous actor, William Gillette, was Mark Twain, who was a fellow townsman and a friend of his father. Mark Twain, in referring to the matter, said that when he used his influence to get young Gillette on the stage he thought he was playing a great joke on the management, for he did not think Gillette had the slightest aptitude for acting. But it turned out to be no joke after all. "I don't know," said Mark Twain, "which I like better—having Gillette make a tremendous success or seeing one of my jokes go wrong."

What's in a Name?

An amusing story has been told concerning Mr. Phillips' classic drama, "Ulysses." When it was being played in America, two young girls were sitting together in the stalls at a matinee performance, and before the curtain rose the following conversation was heard: "Say, Maude, I know this play is going to be funny." "What makes you think so?" asked Maude. "Why, anybody could tell that from the name!" was the reply.—M. A. P.

FASHION HINTS

Smart little frocks for semi-dressy occasions are numerous and the very popular top coat makes it possible to wear them right along through the winter.

Homespun is a good material for the more tailored dresses, but silky crepes and satins are adorable for the much kilted ones, and Irish or cluny lace makes a charming neck finish.

No Trouble Otherwise.

Miss de Muir—O, no, professor; I never have any difficulty in understanding him. The only trouble I have is to find out what he is driving at.

An Experiment.

The Rev. Clarence Godfrey, on retiring one night, determined that he would try to "telepath" a phantasm of himself to a lady living in another part of the city, tells H. Addington Bruce in Success Magazine. For about ten minutes he endeavored, in thought, to appear to her. At the end of that time he fell asleep.

About four hours later the lady on whom he had been "exerting his will" awokewith an impression that she had heard a curious sound. She felt nervous and uneasy, and thought that if she went downstairs and took a drink of soda-water it might have a quieting effect.

Coming back, she was astounded to see the form of Mr. Godfrey standing on the staircase. He remained standing there for three or four seconds, while she stared at him in horrified amazement. Then, as she approached the staircase, he disappeared.

J. C. Hull, superintendent of the M. P. Sunday School was given a post card shower last Sunday. Many beautiful cards were received for which he feels very grateful. The school appreciating his efforts to make the school a success desired to express their good will in this manner. Mr. Hull has been superintendent of the school for the past six years.

France is far from being the childless country that some writers picture it. The recent census shows no fewer than thirty-five thousand families in that country which rejoice in ten or more children each, and over one and one-fourth million families having at least five children each. That is in sympathy with the Roosevelt theory. But then a man must be a lover of children in order to endure it.

Cleveland school children bid fair to become the champion spellers of the country. They are required to learn only two new words a day, or ten words a week. At the end of every eight weeks they are tested in a spelling-bee, and aim at every child spells the words correctly. This system is based on the truth enunciated in the chorus of the song, "Every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more." Spelling is one of the essential things in an education. One may be ever so well educated but if he has neglected this one thing he will be ashamed of himself when it comes to writing. Spelling is needed more in our schools today than any one subject but it is the most neglected one.

A New Old Year.

Whether we phrase our emotion for the last day of December with the poet, with the penitent, or with the practical man of affairs, we arrive at the same minor chord. The poet sings, "Ring out the old!" The penitent recalls remorsefully things done and left undone in the past three hundred and sixty-five days. The practical man exclaims, "Good riddance to bad rubbish! Make past history as soon as possible of the troubles of 19 9!" So the Year, depicted as a tottering old man, is hustled off the stage.

Who set on foot the legend that our friend, The-Year-Just-Past, is a decrepit old fellow, whose scythe, when it is not cutting down beauty and grace, is used as a staff for his shrunken and trembling limbs? The Old Year is better pictured as a robust, deep-chested woman, poising on her shoulder a basket of ripe corn, and gathering in her full skirts the brilliant wealth of orchard and garden, the treasures of the months, poured out by the glad earth as a reward for man's ardent toil. Not the feebleness of old age but the vigor of maturity, is the fit symbol of the year's end.

As the wise physician no longer practises blood-letting as a preparation for health, so the philosopher no longer looks back with tears upon the failures of the year. He heartens himself rather for the future by recounting his mercies, his successes, his experiences of love and compassion. If there have been storms and dark days, there have been also gracious sunshine and warm showers, and all have been wrought by a divine alchemy into the fruits of the season.

As the laborer looks back upon his toil, he sees the harvest of corn in the ear—not the blight nor the canker. He remembers that the gifts of experience, whether of pain or pleasure, come like the kindly fruits of the earth—"so that in due time we may enjoy them!"

Five Years

of Heart Trouble Cured by Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had pains in my left side, and under my shoulder blade, could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath the least exertion would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. When I had taken six bottles I was cured."

MRS. C. C. GORKEY,
Northfield, Va.

If there is fluttering or palpitation it is an indication of a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the heart. It is not necessarily diseased—just weak from over-work. The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. You can make a weak heart strong by taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy. Get a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Halley's Comet.

Many persons seem to be interested in Halley's comet which makes its appearance this year but no one seems to know just when and where it will be visible to the naked eye. According to the Scientific American the earliest date that the comet will be visible without the aid of a telescope, will be a short time after the twenty-fourth of March, when it can be seen in the morning sky before dawn. "The earth and comet will now rapidly approach each other and the latter will greatly increase in brilliancy. About April 20th., it will pass its nearest point to the sun, and on May 18th., will again disappear in the sun's rays.

The transit will not be visible in the United States as it will occur after sunset here. On the night of May 18th., the earth and comet will rush past each other and the earth will probably sweep through the tail of the comet. They will be only 12,000,000 miles apart. After May 18th., the comet will attain its maximum of splendor in the evening sky, and in a few days thereafter its glory will rapidly fade."

Election Notice

At the regular meeting of the K. of P's. on Wednesday evening, January 29, 1910, there will be an election of two trustees. One for four years and one for five years, and hereafter at the regular annual election as heretofore except that the term will be for five years instead of three.

Called by Death.

Another resident of old DeKalb has been called by the Grim Reaper, Henry Jenkins answering the call early Friday evening at his home, north of town. Mr. Jenkins has been a sufferer of Brights' Disease for the past year but he would not give up until about the first of December he became serious and Dr. Bowman was called to his assistance. As Mr. Jenkins was up in years it was hard to build him up as the disease had a firm grasp on his life. For weeks death was expected at any time, and on Friday night his troubles were ended and his spirit went to the God who gave it.

HENRY JENKINS

Henry Jenkins was born May 1st., 1834 in Knox County, Ohio, and died at his home in this vicinity Jan. 7th., 1910, Age 75 years, 8 months, 6 days. He was the second son of John and Margaret (Hull) Jenkins. When he was ten years of age his parents moved to DeKalb County, Indiana, and settled on a tract of wild land now owned by his son. His youth was spent in helping his father clear and make the new home in the forest. He received a common school education in the district which they lived. Remaining at home until his marriage Febuary 1st., 1860 to Martha J. Johnson, daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Dragoo) Johnson.

Then they bought 106 acres of land, which is their present home this land he cleared all but about five acres. He was always a hard-working and industrious home builder ever ready to aid with his labor or moneys, any worthy cause that might be presented to him.

To him and his wife have been born six children, three of whom died in infancy, those living are Emma, wife of T. H. Elson of Concord Township, Fredrick A., whom married Maude Maxwell, and lives on the original homestead, and Clara B., wife of Edward Leighty of St. Joe, Ind.

He whom we are about to lay in the earth was gentle, kind and loving in his life. He was ambitous only to live with those he loved. He was hospitable, generous and sincere. He loved his friends, and the friends of his friends. He returned good for good. He lived the life of a child, and died without leaving in the memory of his family the record of an unkind act with assurance and without fear we give him back as it were to nature the source and mother of us all. Friend, husband, father fare thee well.

He leaves a wife, two daughters, one son, two grandchildren, Marie Leighty and Fred Elson; three sisters, the Meddames Jacob White, Frank Herrick and Joseph Koch besides a host of other relatives and friends.

The funeral services were held from the St. Joe M. P. church, Tuesday forenoon at 10:00 o'clock. Rev. Coomer officiating. Eliza Kinsey, funeral director. Burial in Riverside cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS.

We heartily thank all who assisted us during the illness and death of our dear father and husband and we also express our gratefulness to Ballard Bowen for his faithful service.

THE FAMILY.

Wash Thompson Dead

The following clipping was taken from the New Haven Register, of the death and burial of Mr. G. W. Thompson, who formerly lived at this place and worked in the handle factory. He will be remembered by most of the St. Joe people, who will be sorry to learn of his death.

Death with his sickle keen seemed to be unusually active in this vicinity the past week. The last person upon whom he laid his icy hand was G. W. Thompson who departed this life at his home, in this place, at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning.

George Washington Thompson was born at Newville, DeKalb county, Indiana, July 4, 1836, and was married to Miss Mary Morrow in 1881, to which union one daughter, Leoma, was born. In 1888 he united with the Christian church, at Hicksville, Ohio, but upon removing to Fort Wayne, he affiliated with the West Jefferson street Christian church. On January 28, 1908, the deceased underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Lutheran hospital, but the immediate cause of his death was cancer of the bowels.

Mr. Thompson was a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a citizen of genial disposition who enjoyed the esteem of a large circle of acquaintances, and as his friends and neighbors follow his remains to their last resting place, none but good words will be spoken of him.

The funeral was held from the M. E. church Thursday afternoon, in charge of the Odd Fellows, Rev. Grant W. Speer, pastor of the Central Christian church of Toledo, officiating, assisted by Revs. King and Avery. Interment in local I. O. O. F. cemetery

Local Items.

Fresh oysters at Kagey's.

Mrs. Maude Bishop was the guest of her parents, last week.

Rev. Stephen Hitchner of Xenia, Ohio, will preach in the Lutheran church at Spencerville, Sunday morning and in the Lutheran church at St. Joe, Sunday evening, Jan. 16th. 1910.

W. H. Randall and wife took a load to Spencerville, Sunday evening to attend church. Those in the load were O. A. Patterson and wife, Jacob Sechler and wife, Mesdames H. C. Hathaway, W. O. Patterson and S. W. Tustison.

Merritt Barney declares that he has as many boils as Job but the question has arose in our mind whether he has the patience of Job. He has been carefully nursing them for the past week until the painful part is nearly past. Just wait Merritt you will probably have a chance to laugh at the other fellow and get even.

Frank Lothamer returned Monday from Payne, Ohio, where he had been for the past week. He reports having received a large number of Xmas presents while there, although it was a little late Frank appreciated them just the same.

Daniel Shearer and wife of Guthrie Center, Iowa, who has been visiting relatives at this place, and Mrs. Jno. Betz and daughter Galen, visited over Sunday with Ft. Wayne relatives, from there Mr. Shearer and wife will leave for their home.

A rather peculiar scene was witnessed by the early risers of the town Monday morning. Harry Milliman and Leon Sechler were starting out early to enjoy a hunting trip, the latter taking with them a wheel-barrow while Harry carried the gun. About noon they were seen coming up the alley with two of the bunny tribe. It was probably too cold for the rabbits to run.

Settlement Notice

As I have sold my drug store I desire to close all open accounts by February 1. Some satisfactory settlement must be made.

All accounts can be paid at the drug store and will be receipted.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

Bereaved Humorist Goes to Bermuda.

Far from good health, and grief stricken at the recent sudden death of his daugther Jean, Samuel L. Clemens, better known as Mark Twain, sailed from New York for Bermuda. Mr. Clemens said that the ailment of which he complained on his arrival from Bermuda two weeks ago had returned. He attributed the pain in his left breast, however, to indigestion, "and that is not the sort of ailment that causes people to die," he added, with a faint touch of his old-time levity. He expects to stay away at least a month.

Heroic Fireman Saves Train.

Although scalded in the wreck of his engine, so terribly that he may die, Fireman Guy Cameron ran down the track to warn an oncoming train which the engine had expected to pass on a siding at Vallejo, Cal., and fell unconscious just as his mission was accomplished. The engine, which was running backwards, jumped the track, scalding the engineer, Charles Rossini, to death.

Cook's Data En Route to Washington.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook's polar data is on its way to Washington, D. C., to be examined by the National Geographic Society. According to information sent to Prof. J. H. Gore, the documents were started from Copenhagen on Dec. 21. Prof. Gore, Rear Admiral Pillsbury and Dr. W. M. Hayes, of the geological survey, will examine the papers and make a report early this month. Prof. Willis S. Moore, of the society, let it be known that he will not be a candidate for re-election. Some see in this the reflections of the polar controversy. Prof. Moore has been president of the National Geographic Society five terms. In his letter declining a further election he expressed the hope that a successor would be chosen before the polar fight became an influence in the politics of the society.

Traction Cars Crash.

Five persons were seriously injured, two probably fatally, in a head-on collision between two limited interurban cars on the Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern line at Philadelphia, four miles west of Greenfield, Ind. The cars were the New Castle Limited, west-bound, and the Dayton Limited, east-bound. They met at a siding as the west-bound car was preparing to enter the switch. The Dayton Limited was said to be running at full speed when it crashed into the west-bound car. So great was the impact that both cars were telescoped for a distance of ten or twelve feet. Both motormen stuck to their posts in vain attempts to stop their cars. While the blame for the accident has not been fixed, there was such a heavy fog that the motormen could see but a short distance ahead of them.

Wabash Train Burned Up.

A fast freight train composed of oil tank cars and cars of merchandise, on the Wabash railroad, was destroyed by fire near Logansport, Ind. The train ran off the track and took fire. Several oil cars exploded and blazing oil was thrown over the rest of the train. The fire department could do nothing against the fire, which for a time threatened the neighboring part of the city.

GOVERNOR MARSHALL SAYS

THOMAS R. MARSHALL

A prominent magazine addressed letters to some of the Governors of the great interior States recently, asking them to state briefly what in their opinion are the greatest needs of the commonwealth over which they preside, and what are some of the services that those commonwealths can render the nation at large.

"A man who expresses an opinion today is much like the discoverer of a patent medicine—he is quite sure that it will cure all ailments. Indiana needs many things. I hope the time will never come when all its needs have been supplied. Just now, from my viewpoint, its greatest need is contentment. By that I mean that it should possess a body of citizens who are content to do a day's work for a day's wage; who are willing to pay a day's wage for a day's work; who are unwilling to shirk work and gain wages by cunning; who are unwilling by enforced employment to increase profits; who believe more in the common good than in the larger good; who would rather be buried in a pine box wet with genuine tears than to have a rosewood casket guarded by detectives; who really feel that Indiana is the land of opportunity, individuality and manhood, and not the land of knavery, trickery and cunning; who believe he is not wise who is not just, and that justice is as much the other fellow's right as his own. Maybe a majority of Indiana's citizens are such. I hope so."

Two Score Fishermen Missing.

Forty-two fishermen are missing and many have perished in the blizard that has been raging for twenty-four hours at Canso, N. S. Fourteen men are known almost certainly to have been lost and the remaining twenty-eight already are being mourned, their chances for escape being regarded as small.

Three Killed, Nine Hurt in Explosion.

Three men were killed and nine were frightfully burned in an explosion and fire which destroyed the plant of the Buffalo Cereal Company in Buffalo, N. Y. Of the twelve men employed in the elevator, not one escaped injury. At the hospital it was said that eight of the injured men have but slight chances for recovery. The financial loss is placed at $75,000.

Nine Killed by Peaches.

Nine persons are dead and two others are not expected to survive as the result of eating canned peaches containing ptomaine poison, at Sawtelle, Cal., a suburb of Los Angeles. All are members of a family which was the first to settle in Santa Monica.

Octogenarian Brothers Die.

John and Daniel Utsler, brothers, 85 and 80 years, respectively, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed their little one-room log cabin in Indiana County, near New Florence, Pennsylvania.

Hadley Leads Agricultural Board.

The Indiana State Board of Agriculture re-elected Oscar Hadley, State Treasurer, as its president, thereby overturning a long established precedent. It has always been the custom of the board to elect a new president each year.

Aeronaut is Killed During Flight.

Grounded Wire Kills Fireman.

Louis Hensel, hoseman employed at No. 1 engine fire station in Fort Wayne, Ind., was shocked to death while responding to an alarm of fire from the rear of the Wolf & Dessauer dry goods store. Howard Garman, a truckman from the same station, received a severe shock but was dragged to a place of safety in time to save his life. A number of firemen who answered the alarm were victims of minor shocks but the death of Hensel was the only fatality. The grounded electric wire had charged the ice ice coated pavement with the deadly electricity, and when the firemen who were not shod in rubbers stepped upon the pavement, they received the full force of the shock.

Train Rolled Down Bank; Few Hurt.

A through passenger train on the Rock Island main line jumped the track and rolled down a ten-foot embankment near Minoka, Ill., but no one was killed and few were hurt. A cylinder head of the locomotive blew out, it is said, throwing the rails apart and upsetting the train, which consisted of several sleeping cars, a couple of day coaches and mail and bagge cars.

Chief of Ben Hur Order Dead.

Left $70,000 for Horses and Dogs.

A fund of $70,000 to care for favorite horses and dogs, and over $35,000 left to household servants are among the bequests of Charles Francis Wright, who died in Boston, Mass., a few days ago.

Killed When Train Hits Auto.

Louis D. Cone, of Chicago, Ill., and his wife were instantly killed when their automobile was hit by a northbound Illinois Central train.

RAY LAMPHERE DIES, PLEADING INNOCENCE

HIRED HAND ON MURDER FARM

Passes Away Without Making Confession Hoped for by Indiana Authorities.

Ray Lamphere, who was charged with the murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and subsequently convicted of arson in connection with the burning of the home on her "murder farm," near Laporte, died at the State penitentiary in Michigan City, Ind., of tuberculosis.

The man, suspected of assisting the supposed arch-murderess in slaying the ten victims whose bodies were found buried about the farm after her disappearance in April, 1908, made no statement to the prison officials.

In the past few weeks State's Attorney Ralph Smith, who prosecuted Lamphere, and officials of the penitentiary have sought to obtain from the prisoner a statement. To all questions, however, Lamphere has steadfastly replied that he knew nothing which might throw further light on the wholesale murders.

Lamphere was 38 years old, and for three years prior to the disappearance of Mrs. Gunness and her three children had been employed as a field hand at the "murder farm."

The crimes, ruthlessly premeditated and diabolically executed, rivaled the famous Holmes Castle murders in Chicago and the Bender murders in Kansas. Whether Mrs. Gunness was a party to these crimes, and whether she escaped or was burned to death in her house in April, 1908, never has been satisfactorily explained. She formerly lived in Chicago and went to Laporte after her first husband had died under circumstances said to have been suspicious.

After establishing herself on the farm, just outside Laporte, the woman is said to have been a frequent correspondent wth matrimonial agencies in various parts of the country. She thus formed the acquaintance of a number of men. At least six of them went to Laporte, all of whom disappeared. Later, when the yard back of the farmhouse was excavated, the oodies of some of these admirers were identified among the ten which were found. Lamphere was arrested the day following the burning of the house. He had been seen in the vicinity of the building the night it burned.

MONEY INSTITUTIONS COMBINE.

Morgan Engineers Record Merger of Three Trust Companies.

J. Pierpont Morgan, head of the money trust, acomplished another of his tremendous coups the other day, merging three New York trust companies into one of the greatest banking institutions in the country, a $200,000,000 assets concern, to be known as the Guaranty Trust Company. The companies concerned are the Morton Trust Company, the Fifth Avenue Trust Company and the Guaranty Trust Company.

While not so officially announced, this merger is currently reported to have been brought about by Mr. Morgan purchasing the stock interests of Thomas F. Ryan and the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Two months ago he purchased the holdings of the late E. H. Harriman in the Guaranty Trust Company, so that he already had control of the central institution in this new consolidation.

The merger marks the following out of a policy outlined some time ago for the consolidation of many of the large financial institutions of New York City and calls attention in the most forcible way to the dominant influence of the Morgan interests in the financial world. It marks the acquisition by Mr. Morgan and his associates of two financial institutions at one time controlled by other powerful interests, for the Guaranty Trust Company was dominated by the late E. H. Harriman and the Morton Trust Company was the headquarters of Thomas F. Ryan.

MRS. COOK MAY SEEK DIVORCE.

Wife of Arctic Explorer Said to Be Hiding Under Assumed Name.

Mrs. Frederick A. Cook, wife of the discredited Arctic explorer, is hiding near New York under an assumed name and awaiting an opportunity to make a financial settlement for money advanced to Cook since their marriage, according to information obtained.

An effort to establish the truth of a rumor that Mrs. Cook intends to seek a separation from her husband was not successful, further than the statement of friends that she felt keenly the humiliation that followed Cook's failure to establish his claims to having reached the north pole and running away under fire. She has, it is said, the most valuable parts of Cook's diary, accumulated on his last trip to the frozen North, which she intends to retain until a satisfactory arrangement shall have been made.

THE BIG ONES ALWAYS GO FREE.

FRISCO TO RUN CARS.

San Francisco the other day took the first step toward municipal ownership of its street railway lines when by a vote of 31,000 to 11,000 the people carried a bond issue to the amount of $2,020,000. The funds raised by the sale of these bonds are to be used in the construction of a municipal electric line along Geary street and other thoroughfares from the heart of the business district to the ocean beach, a distance of about nine miles. This proposition has been submitted to the voters of the city four times, the other three polls being against the bonds.

The present Geary street car line is an obsolete cable system. It is operated under a special permit granted to a private company by the supervisors after the franchise of the original company had expired. The causes leading to the voting of these bonds by a decisive majority after the same proposition had been three times defeated are numerous and complex. Possibly more than anything else the vote represents an expression of dissatisfaction with the methods and service of the United Railroads. The car system of the city under the present private monopoly admittedly is not good.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

The Senate has passed the Cullom resolution pledging support for additional rescue stations to be placed in the dangerous mining fields.

The Harmon presidential boom is said to have hit Washington hard. The recent two days' visit of Ohio's Governor to the United States capital has installed him in popular favor and placed him in a new light regarding the coming presidential candidacy.

It leaked out how Andrew Carnegie and Secretary of State Knox had a sharp, wordy encounter during the dinner given at Washington by John Barrett, director of the Bureau of American Republics, to the diplomatic representatives of the Latin countries to the south of us. Carnegie was eulogizing the peace work of Secretary Root, and began to compare it with the "shot-gun policy" of the present administration, when Knox jumped up and told the laird he was butting into affairs that he knew nothing about. Again, later, when Carnegie deprecated the present handling of the Nicaraguan affair, Knox angrily demanded that Carnegie stop.

That Congress will take official notice of the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy by ordering a sweeping investigation of the Interior Department and the Forest Service was assured, when Senator Flint of California submitted to the Senate a resolution calling for all the papers in the case of Glavis against Ballinger. This was passed, and then Senator Jones of Washington announced that he would move an investigation after the holidays if no one else did, and read a letter he had received from Secretary Ballinger, in which that official insisted that if Congress were to investigate his department the inquiry should also include the Forest Service, since he had "reason to believe that the pernicious activity of certain of its officers has been the source of inspiration of these charges." Mr. Ballinger goes on to say: "I therefore court the widest and fullest inquiry by Congress." Senator Gore would have had the Senate at once order an investigation, but on objection from Aldrich the matter went over until documents should be in possession of Congress.

ANDREE BALLOON HEARD OF.

The reported finding of Andree's balloon at Reindeer Lake in the arctic circle, 900 miles north of Prince Albert, Sask., is given thorough credence by the trappers and prospectors, many of whom have spent a lifetime in the northern wilds. They know that when such a story is circulated among the Indians there must be a considerable amount of truth in it. The other day there arrived from the north a Hudson's Bay Company trader from Fort Goodhope, and he adds many interesting details which are so confirmatory that a party will be sent up to bring back the relics. According to the stories told by the Indians around Fort Goodhope the balloon was seen drifting from the direct north, so it is possible that Andree and not Peary was the first to reach the pole.

This trader says the Indians have several books which were found in the basket of the balloon, possibly the records kept by Andree of his trip across the frozen Northland. Some Eskimos visited Fort Goodhope two years ago, and when they saw a large single-bore gun they said in their own language: "That looks like the thing the white man had," but what happened to the man in question or what he was they were unable to say, but some of them connected him with the "large white house covered with ropes, which fell from heaven."

Reindeer lake, where the remains of the balloon are now lying, can only be reached by dog sled in the winter and canoe during the summer.

WALL KILLS FOUR FIREMEN.

Falling Debris of Factory Crushes Life Out of Milwaukee Fighters.

Fire in the Milwaukee plant of the American Bridge Company the other night caused the death of four firemen who were buried under a falling wall, and a financial loss of about $250,000. It was at first thought that the entire engine company No. 4 had perished, and not until the debris had been removed was it determined that there were no other bodies in the ruins. Several firemen were injured and several suffered frost-bitten noses and ears while fighting the flames. The engine company which suffered all the casualties was first to arrive and took its station under the main wall of the factory, a long two-story brick structure. Without warning, the wall tottered and fell upon the men, and it was thought by the spectators that all of the members of the company met death. The fire was under control in an hour. The structure was nearly solid brick and the flames swept through rapidly, destroying the truss-work which knit the walls and roof together.

ARRESTED ON MURDER CHARGE.

White and Colored Men Held at Cincinnati—Hair May Offer Clew.

Henry Cook, white, and James Fields, colored, have been arrested in connection with the murder of Anna Lloyd, secretary and general manager of a lumber company, whose body, with throat cut, was found in the marshes off Hopple street, Cincinnati. Cook is a butcher, who lives in the Cumminsville section, near the scene of the murder. It is alleged that he and Fields have been seen together, and the police assert that black hair, evidently torn from a man's mustache, found in the woman's hand, resembles that of Cook.

CONFESSES WRECKING TRAIN.

Vernol Plessinger, 18 years old, of Anderson, Ind., was arrested at Dawn, O., charged with having opened a switch and wrecked the Knickerbocker train on the Big Four at Dawn, O., Saturday night. Plessinger confessed, the police say, and gave his motive that he wished to rob the passengers and go to some seaboard town, where he could "join the navy." Plessinger related, the police said, that he had opened the switch when he saw the train coming by breaking the lock, and then had climbed up a signal tower and put out the light.

When he saw the locomotive crash into a building at the side of the track and the passengers climb out of the coaches he ran to the house of his grandfather in the town. Later he returned, he said, and helped take the engineer and fireman out of the wreckage of the locomotive cab. Plessinger held out under the examination for five hours, the police said, but finally screamed, "I done it; I done it!"

BOYCOTT AS A FOOD-PRICE CURE

Movement of Nation-Wide Scope Started at Washington Meeting.

Plans for a national boycott of those combinations that increase the cost of living were laid in Washington the other night, when the National Anti-Trust League was launched. Members of Congress are interested in the new movement and immediate steps will be taken toward perfecting State organizations. Then, when prices soar, the league members by stopping the use of such articles or commodities as have gone above legal level will put them back again by refusing to furnish a market. The plan was one that was tried in Germany a few years ago and which, according to a report, broke up a combine in coffee that had raised the price of the bean to almost prohibitive prices.

Officials of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, with headquarters in Cleveland, formally notified the various divisions of about seventy-five railroads east of the Mississippi River that the 75,000 members of the brotherhood would on January 2 make demand for an increase in wages amounting to from 5 to 40 per cent. The existing agreement necessitates a notice before such a demand can be made. Then the trainmen will wait until January 16 for their answer. President Lee of the trainmen does not expect a strike, but says it will come if the demands are not granted.

The Block Signal and Train Control Board, which was authorized by Congress some three years ago to investigate the whole subject of passenger train control and protection, has now reported to the Commerce Commission. It severely criticises certain roads for the character of the signal system, and says that inexperienced operators were found all over the country. Others who have the experience are lacking in reliability, and still others are too young. The board has examined 238 inventions of protective devices offered, and of these only twelve were deemed worth testing at government expense.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"Trade generally closed the year's activities in a strong position. Annual balances, inventories and necessary repairs now monopolize attention in the leading industries. The results have been equal to the expectations in various prominent branches and the outlook based upon the accumulations of forward orders is highly encouraging for the future.

"Weather conditions during the week favored an extended absorption of heavyweight apparel and other needs, but the storms impeded freight movements, crop marketings and outdoor work. Wholesalers had large reorders in dry goods, clothing and footwear, and the demand for spring goods was well sustained. Winter stocks in dealers' hands have been comfortably reduced.

"Banking returns testify to largely augmented deposits at interior points. Manufacturing discloses little decline in operations with the year end. Money sustains a decidedly firm tone at 5 to 5½ per cent for choice commercial paper. Mercantile collections here and at Western points are satisfactory. Trading defaults furnish a favorable comparison with previous experience.

"Bank clearings, $225,970,322, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 4.8 per cent, and compare with $175,127,532 in 1907.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number 19, against 34 last week, 43 in 1908 and 28 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 4, against 11 last week, 11 in 1908 and 7 in 1907."

NEW YORK.

Quiet has followed the preceding week's rush of business in retail lines, while in wholesale lines salesmen are in from the road and inventorying is general. All obtainable information points to a satisfactory—in many sections, indeed, a record—volume of business done in the year just closed, and the feeling is general that a still more satisfactory twelvemonth faces the country's commercial and manufacturing interests.

The best reports as to the year's results come from the West and Northwest. In wholesale and jobbing lines a large if not, indeed, record spring business has been booked.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Dec. 30 were 256, as against 264 last week, 299 in the like week of 1908, 185 in 1907, 220 in 1906 and 278 in 1905.—Bradstreet's.

At a meeting of directors elected at Pittsburg a practical monopoly of the American glass market was assured when all but six of the independent window glass manufacturers closed the final business looking to the consolidation of the independent glass plants throughout the country, valued at $6,000,000.

CUMMINS TALKS DEFIANTLY.

In a notable address delivered before his political friends in Des Moines the other evening, Senator Cummins of Iowa sounded the battle cry of the progressive wing of the Republican party. Not only were Senator Aldrich, Speaker Cannon and the rest of the standpat group reviewed and condemned by the Iowa Senator, but war was declared upon the remaining standpatters and Cannon adherents in the Iowa delegation in the national House of Representatives. Senator Cummins specifically expressed approval of the efforts to prevent the renomination of Capt. Hull as a member of Congress from the Des Moines district. He also indicated that the group of which he is the leader will strive to control the State convention of the Republican party and to nominate progressives for the offices that are to be filled.

If Senator Cummins succeeds in his fight to make Iowa entirely progressive in its representation in Washington another thing naturally will follow which was not directly discussed at the Des Moines meeting. The Iowa Senator will probably become the leader of the progressive forces of the nation and presumably will be the choice of that group for the Republican nomination for the presidency.

In his Marquette Club address in Chicago Senator Cummins pointed out the line of cleavage between the progressives and the reactionaries of the Republican party. In his Des Moines talk he went further and pointed out the line of battle. The fights in the Iowa districts still represented in Congress by friends of Cannon doubtless will be duplicated in many other districts in the West.

The present contest between Cummins and the progressive group on one side and the Cannon-Aldrich coterie on the other for supremacy in the Republican party is likely to be one of the memorable episodes in American politics, is the opinion of a prominent Western paper.

WIFE TO SEEK MORSE'S PARDON

Spouse of Condemned Banker Will Follow Husband to Atlanta.

Mrs. Charles W. Morse, who follows her husband from New York to visit him in his cell at the federal prison there, will take up at once and in earnest the fight for his freedom. Mrs. Morse continues to declare her belief that a crying injustice has been done the former banker and refuses to believe that he will be compelled to serve out his sentence of fifteen years' confinement.

"To-day," said Mrs. Morse, "I go to Atlanta. In a short time I shall come back and work for a pardon. If there is a chance of seeing my husband once more I shall stay and wait for it. But they tell me that fort nightly visits only are allowed to convicts in that prison."

Mrs. Morse's efforts in behalf of her husband will be warmly seconded by his counsel, Martin W. Littleton, who reiterated his declaration that he had by no means given up his fight for Morse's liberty. The attorney, however, was not yet ready to say what his next step would be.

BOY SHOOTER FINED $300.

Youth Who Wounded Marshal on Mother's Behalf Gets Jail Term.

Austin Miller, aged 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Miller of Jacksonville, Fla., pleaded guilty to the charge of assault and battery and was fined $300 and sentenced to jail for ten days. On the night of Aug. 1, 1909, young Miller shot and wounded Alonzo Howe, marshal at Winona Lake, a summer resort near Wabash, Ind., because, as Miller alleged, the officer had made remarks casting reflections on the name of Mrs. Miller, the youth's mother, a guest at the summer resort.

Pension to 800 Rail Men.

Eight hundred employes of the New York Central lines were retired from active service under a pension order which became effective last week. An annual distribution of $225,000 will be made under the new plan, which requires that all employes attaining the age of 70 years in the service of the road shall be retired on pension.

The Master of Appleby

CHAPTER III.

True to his promise, Richard Jennifer met me in the cool gray birthlight of the new day at a turn in the river road not above a mile or two from the rendezvous, and thence we jogged on together.

"So Falconnet is on terms at Appleby Hundred, is he?" I asked.

"Oh, surely. Gilbert Stair keeps open house for any and all of the winning hand, as I told you."

The thought of this unspoiled young maiden having aught to do with such a man made my blood boil afresh; and in the heat of it I let my secret slip, or rather some small part of it.

"So?" queried Jennifer. "Then this is not your first knowing of him?"

"No." So much I said and no more.

"Tell me what you know of him, and what it was he said of Madge," he entreated. "You can't deny me now, Jack."

"I can and shall. It matters not to you or to any what he is or has been. I shall present run him through, and so his account will be squared once for all with all men—and all women, as well."

From that we fell silent again, being but a little way from the rendezvous, and so continued until, at a sudden turn in the road, we came in sight of a rude barricade of felled trees barring the way. Jennifer saw it first and pulled up short, loosing his pistols in their cases as he drew rein.

"'Ware the wood!" he said sharply, and none too soon, for even as he spoke the glade at our left filled as by magic with a motley troop deploying into the road as to surround us.

"Now who are these?" I asked; "friends or foes?"

"Foes who will hang you in your own halter strap; Jan Howart's Tories—the same that burned the Westcotts in their cabin a fortnight since. Will your horse take that barricade, think you?"

"Aye—standing, if need be."

It needed but the word and we were in the thick of it. A line of the ragged horsemen strung itself awkwardly across the road to guard the flimsy barricade, and at this we charged, stirrup to stirrup. In the dash there was a scattering volley from the wood, answered instantly by the bellowings of Jennifer's great pistols; and then we came to the steel.

It was my first fleshing of the good old Andrea, and a better balanced blade I had never swung in hand-to-hand mellay. As we closed with the half-dozen defenders of the barrier, Jennifer reined aside to give me room to play right and left, and in the midst of it went nigh to death because he held his hand to watch a cut and double thrust of mine.

"Over with you!" I shouted, pricking the man who would have mowed him down with a great scythe handled as a sword.

Our horses took the barrier in a flying leap, straining themselves for the race beyond. When we had pulled them down to a foot pace we were safely out of rifle shot and there was space to count the cost.

There was no cost worth counting. A saddle horn bullet-shattered for me, and the back of Jennifer's sword hand scored lightly across by another of the random missiles summed up our woundings. Dick whipped out his kerchief to twist about the scored hand, while I glanced back to see if any Tory cared to follow.

"Dick, you passed this way an hour ago; was that breastwork in the road then?" I asked.

"Not a stick of it."

"Then this was a trap, meant to stop or delay us, and I'll wager it was the baronet who set and baited it. It would please him well to be able to say what our failure to come would give him warrant for. Let us gallop a bit, lest we be late and so play into his hand."

For all our swift speeding we were yet a little late at the rendezvous under the tall oaks. When we came on the ground the baronet was walking up and down arm in arm with his second, a broad-shouldered young Briton, fair of skin and ruddy of face.

If Falconnet had set the Tory trap for us he veiled his disappointment at its failure. His face, dark and inscrutable as it always was, was made more sinister by the plasters knitting up his broken cheek, but I was right glad to make sure that my blow had spared his eyes. Richly as he deserved his fate, I thought it would be ill to think on afterward that I had had him at a disadvantage of my own making.

There was little time wasted in the preliminaries. When Falconnet saw us he dropped his second's arm and began to make ready. I gave my sword to Jennifer, and the seconds went apart together. There was some measuring and balancing of weapons, and then Richard came back.

"The baronet's sword is a good inch longer than yours in the blade, and is somewhat heavier. Tybee has brought a pair of French short-swords which he offers. 'Will you change your terms?'

"No; I am content to fight with my own weapon."

Falconnet was removing his coat, and I stripped mine. The seconds chose the ground where the turf was short and firm, and yet yielding enough to give good footing. We faced each other, my antagonist baring an arm which, despite the bejeweled hand, was to the full as big-muscled as my own. My glance went from his weapon, a rather heavy German blade, straight and slender-pointed, to his face. He was smiling as one who strives to make the outer man a mask to cover all emotion.

The seconds fell back, but when Jennifer would have given the signal I stopped him.

"One moment, if you please. Sir Francis Falconnnet, you know me?"

The thin-lidded eyes were veiled for an instant, and then he lied smoothly.

"Your pardon, Captain Ireton; I have not that honor."

"'Tis a small matter, but you do lie this morning as basely as you lied to Richard Coverdale nine years agone," said I; and then I signed Jennifer to give the word.

"Attention, gentlemen! On guard!"

My enemy's sword leaped to meet mine, and at the same instant I heard another click of steel betokening that the seconds had fallen to in a bit of byplay between themselves, as was then the fashion. After that I heard nothing for a time save the sibilant whisperings of the Ferara and the German long-sword, and saw nothing save the fierce eyes glaring at me out of the midst of the plaster-marred smile.

Recreant though he was, I must do my adversary the justice to say that he was a skilful master of fence, agile as a French dancer, and withal well-breathed and persevering. Twice, nay, thrice, before I found my advantage he had pricked me lightly with that extra inch of slender point. But when I had fairly felt his wrist I knew that his heavier weapon would shortly prove his undoing; knew that the quick parry and lightning-like thrust would presently lag a little, and then I should have him.

Something of this prophecy of triumph he must have read in my eyes, for on the instant he was up and at me like a madman, and I had my work well cut out to hold him at the blade's length. I was so holding him; was, in my turn, beginning to press him slowly, when there came a drumming of hoofbeats on the soft turf, and then a woman's cry.

I looked aside, and to my dying day I shall swear that my antagonist did likewise. What I saw was Mistress Margery Stair riding down upon us at a hand-gallop, and I lowered my point, as any gentleman would.

In the very act—'twas while Jennifer was clutching at her bridle rein to stay her from riding fair between us—I felt the hot-wire prick of the steel in my shoulder and knew that my enemy had run me through as I stood.

Of what befell afterward I have but dim memories. There were more hoof-tramplings, and then I felt the dewy turf under my hands and soft fingers busy at my neckerchief. Then I saw swimmingly, as through a veil of mist, a woman's face just above my own, and it was full of horror; and I heard my enemy say: "'Twas most unfortunate and I do heartily regret it, Mr. Jennifer. I saw not why he had lowered his point. Can I say more?"

How Richard Jennifer made answer to this lie I know not; nor do I know aught else, save by hearsay, of any further happening in that grassy glade beneath my father's oaks. For the big German blade was a shrewd blood-letter, and I fell asleep what time my lady was trying to stanch with her kerchief the ebbing tide of life.

CHAPTER IV.

When I came back to some clearer sensing of things, I found myself abed in a room which was strange and yet strangely familiar. I tried to remember what had befallen. In the deep bay of the window was a great chair of Indian wickerwork, and a woman sat in it.

Now of a truth I had seen this woman's face but twice; and once it wore a smile of teasing mockery and once was full of terror; but I thought I should live long and suffer much before the winsome challenging beauty of it would let me be as I had been before I had looked upon it. I stirred and she came quickly to my side.

"You have slept long and well, Captain Ireton," she said; "may I fetch you anything?"

"I fear the madness of the moment must still have been upon me, for I said: 'Since you are here yourself, dear lady, I need naught else.'

As a flash I had my whipping in a low dipped curtsy and a mocking smile like that she had flung to Falconnet.

"Merci! mon Capitaine," she said, and for all my wincings under the sharp lash of her sarcasm I was moved to wonder how she had the French of it. And then she added: "Is it the custom for her Apostolic Majesty's officers to come out of a death-swound only to pay pretty compliments?"

"'Twas no compliment," I denied; and, indeed, I meant it. Then I asked where I was, and to whom indebted, though I had long since guessed the answer to both questions.

"You are at Appleby Hundred, sir. 'Twas here they fetched you because there was no other house so near, and you were sorely hurt. Richard Jennifer and my black boy made a litter of the saddle-cloths, and with Sir Francis and Mr. Tybee to help——"

I think she must have seen that this thrust was sharper than that of the German long-sword, for she stopped in mid-sentence and looked away from me. And, surely, I thought it was the very irony of fate that I should thus be brought half dead to the house that was my father's with my enemy and his second to share the burden of me.

"But your father?" I queried, when the silence had grown over-long.

"My father is away at Queensborough, so you must e'en trust yourself to my tender mercies, Captain Ireton. How came you to go about picking a quarrel with Sir Francis?"

"'Twas not of my seeking," I returned. "They say I struck him without sufficient cause. I am content to let it stand so."

"Nay, but you should not be content. Is there not strife enough in this unhappy land without these causeless bickerings?"

"I knew Sir Francis Falconnet in England," said I, hoping by this to turn her safe aside.

"Ah; then there was a cause. Tell it me."

"Nay, that I may not."

"'Tis most ungallant to deny a lady, sir. But I shall know without the telling; 'twas about a woman."

After this I saw her no more for six full circlings of the clock-hands, and grew fair famished for a sight of her sweet face. But to atone, she, or some messenger of Richard Jennifer's, brought me my faithful Darius, and he it was who fetched me my food and drink and dressed my wound. From him I gleaned that the master of Appleby Hundred had returned from Queensborough, and that there were officers in red coats continually going back and forth, always with a hearty welcome from Gilbert Stair.

Now, though the master of my stolen heritage had little cause to love me, I thought he had still less to fear me; so it seemed passing strange that he came not once to my bedchamber to pass the time of day with his unbidden guest, or to ask how he fared. But in this, as in many other things, I reckoned without my enemy, though I might have known that Sir Francis would be oftenest among the red-coated officers coming and going.

But stranger than this, or than my lady's continued avoidance of me, was the lack of a visit from Richard Jennifer. Knowing well my dear lad's loyalty to the patriot cause, I could only conjecture that he had finally broken Margery's enforced truce to go and join Mr. Rutherford's militia, which, as Darius told me, was rallying to attack a Tory stronghold at Ramsour's Mill.

With this surmise I was striving to content myself on that evening of the third day, when Mistress Margery burst in upon me, bright-eyed and with her cheeks aflame.

"Captain Ireton, I will know the true cause of this quarrel which, failing in yourself, you pass on to Richard Jennifer!" she cried. "Was it not enough that you should get yourself half slain, without sending this headstrong boy to his death?"

"Has this fiend incarnate killed my poor lad?" I groaned.

"No, he is not dead," she confessed, relenting a little. "But he has the baronet's bullet through his sword-arm for the sake of your over-seas disagreement with Sir Francis."

I could not tell you that though my quarrel with this villain was but the avenging of poor Dick Coverdale's wrongs, Richard Jennifer's was for the baronet's affront to her. So I bore the blame in silence, glad enough to be assured that my dear lad was only wounded.

"Why don't you speak, sir?" she snapped, flying out at me in a passion for my lack of words. "You should defend yourself, if you can. And you should ask my pardon for calling my father's guest hard names."

The last I will do right heartily. 'Twas but the simple truth, but it was ill-spoken in your presence, Mistress Stair."

At this she laughed merrily; and in all my world-wanderings I had never heard a sound so gladsome as this sweet laugh of hers when she would be on the forgiving hand.

"Surely any one would know you are a soldier, Captain Ireton. No other could make an apology and renew the offense so innocently in the same breath." Then her mood changed again in the dropping of an eyelid, and she sighed and said: "Poor Dick!"

Where He Had Seen Her.

"Where have I met you before?" he asked the young woman to whom he had just been introduced.

"I am quite sure we have never met," replied the stranger.

"I'm almost positive I've seen you a number of times," he persisted.

Boy Tortured by Eczema.

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching with his nails and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

"I took care of a friend's child that had eczema on its face and limbs and I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. I would recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone. Mrs. A. J. Cochran, 1823 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 20, 1909."

Prehistoric Remains Found.

In a deep cutting on the Grand Eastern line, near Ipswich, Miss Nina Layard, F. L. S., a well known lady scientist, has unearthed, at a depth of thirty feet, a strange assortment of bones of the mammoth, horse, gigantic ox, bear, wolf; red deer and a bird, with a few flint implements of paleolithic type, the London Standard says. In her opinion, these are from the pleistocence deposits in the gravels of the original course of the River Gipping, when the present site of Ipswich was beneath its waters.

The remains of the horse prove to be of peculiar interest, as up to this discovery it was generally assumed that the early horse was of small size. According to Prof. Ridgeway's estimate, however, the horse here found must have been the size of a modern car horse. The gigantic ox became extinct in England during the stone age, but remained on the continent until the time of Julius Cæsar.

Fifty American colleges have voted for the retention of football as a college sport with the elimination of pass plays and other dangerous features of the game. The rules committee will undoubtedly recognize this expression as the consensus of the best college opinion in the country, and will recognize it as a duty imposed on them to make such amendments to the rules of play as will render the game less dangerous and make it acceptable to the public. Reform in the rules must be actual not nominal. Amendments must be effective and the public, who are the real backers should continue their activity in the reform. No rules will be effective that do not have the public strongly in sympathy with them.

Hints for Stock Owners

Nowadays draft horses must be matched to sell well.

Choose for the breeding mare a solid color,—dark bay, black or chestnut.

Horses off color and with peculiar markings never sell so well as those of solid colors; besides they are more difficult to match.

Look out for bad habits in your colts. It is so much easier to keep them out than it is to get rid of them if they once get a hold on the young horse.

All good farmers watch the condition of their colts when put into winter quarters. A colt allowed to lose its colt flesh and become thin, will never make the horse he would if kept growing from the start.

We are unable to state what caused his sudden death, as none of his relatives knew of him being ill. At the time of his death he was engaged in traveling for a Cincinnatti firm. His wife, formerly, Miss Libby Philley is well known here also.

The DeKalb County Association of Rural Mail Carriers met in Butler on Jan. 1, 1910. About fourteen members were present. They met in the Grand Army hall, and at noon repaired to the Waverly hotel where a fine dinner was served. In the afternoon they met for the transaction of business, electing the same officers for the ensuing year. The county was organized for the betterment of the service and to make a more mutual relationship between the carriers and patrons of the routes. The rural service is growing and becoming better each year and is a great factor in the education of the country.—Ex.

Shot by Mistake

A shooting affair took place here last Thursday night, and as a result Benjamin Baltz received injuries. The particulars of the matter are that Mr. Baltz had been on a spree for the last week and at times had been in bad shape. On Thursday evening at about 10 o'clock he made his way across the street to the home of Mr. Rectenwal. The dog hearing the noise began to bark and Clyde arose to see what was the matter. In a short time the form of a man appeared and Clyde ordered him to stop but he paid no attention and came on toward the house. Mr. Rectenwal fired several shots in the air and the man still came near, this of course frightened Mr. Rectenwal, and he fired one shot at the man striking him in the hand, the ball passing through and into his body but with slight injuries. Soon after the shot was fired he came into the light so he could be recognized and Clyde took him in and had washed his hand off by the time the doctor arrived. Had Mr. Baltz replied to the words spoken to him this would have been averted, but as he was so completely soaked with booze he failed to realize what he was doing. This same experience might have come to others and the same action would have been taken as in this instant. One would naturally think that it was a burglar. Mr. Rectenwal had retired early as he was not feeling well and his wife had gone to club. Mr. Rectenwal feels very bad about the matter but one can't blame him for his action. As he is Wabash agent, he no doubt had some money of the company and thinking that the man was coming to rob him he was prompted to do what he did. This should be a warning to those who are in the habit of getting into such a condition as that accustomed to by Mr. Baltz.

A Vicious Assault

Silas Grats Charged with Hitting Wife with a Hammer.

And Threatening to Kill Her, Drove Her Back into House with Kicks and Blows.

Alleging that on Tuesday night her husband came to their farm home in CedarCreek township and without any provocation in a fit of drunken frenzy attacked her with his fists and then seized a hammer and struck her three times, Alice Grats has commenced suit in the circuit court for divorce from Silas Grats. The couple were married in 1873 and in spite of the fact that thirteen children, of which number eight are living, were borne to the union, it is alleged that the husband has always treated his wife with inhuman cruelty and that on frequent occasions he addressed her in a vile and indecent manner. Mrs. Grats declares that on Tuesday night her husband, after knocking her to her knees with a hammer, chased her outdoors and then kicked and beat her all the time she was crawling thirty feet back into the house. He was restrained from killing her only by the intervention of the children and neighbors. The complainant asks alimony in the sum of $2,000 and the farm property and also prays a restraining order to prevent her husband visiting her home. A. E. Thomas filed the suit.—Thursday's Fort Wayne News.

TELLTALE PICTURES.

Paintings That Have Done the Work of Detectives.

BROUGHT CRIMES TO LIGHT.

An artist who had suddenly become almost famous by his production of a painting exhibited at the Royal academy was one day called upon by a man whose visit was productive of the most extraordinary and undreamed of consequences.

The picture represented a lonely stretch of beach, upon which the sea was beating in long, creamy rollers. In the foreground, bending over a dead body, was a man with a wild expression on his face and with a naked knife in his hand. A ship's boat, evidently just beached, was also in the picture, and by the side of the murdered man was a bag of gold. The picture portrayed the advent of two castaways upon a friendly shore. The one had murdered the other so that the treasure might be his.

The painter's visitor was a gray haired, wild eyed man.

"In heaven's name, sir," he gasped out, "how did you learn the dreadful story that you painted? I see you know all. I murdered my mate Bill to get the money that was his. I threw his body into the sea. I don't know what impulse led me to the academy. The first thing I saw was your picture representing the scene that took place thirty years ago."

Needless to say, the picture had been the outcome of imagination. Yet murder will out, and the guilty conscience of the man who had killed his comrade for lust of gold had convinced him that the painting was no coincidence, but was indeed the actual portrayal of a dastardly and unwitnessed crime.

There is probably no picture better known in England than "The Doctor," by Luke Fildes, yet there are probably very few people aware of the fact that that selfsame masterpiece was the means of bringing to light the perpetration of a crime that would otherwise never have been known.

A certain doctor in a large town committed suicide, and among his papers was a letter which ran as follows: "I have today seen Luke Fildes' 'Doctor.' The picture represents a medical man watching by the bedside of a child. It has so haunted me that I am going to take away my own worthless life and make a confession at the same time. When Arthur's"—his brother's—"boy died I came into money that my dead brother had settled on him. He died as all the world thought of acute pneumonia. Yet his life might have been saved had I acted, as Fildes' 'Doctor' is so evidently doing, with the use of all the skill that lay in my power. I hastened the boy's end and so got the money. I can bear it no more."

A well known artist was commissioned to paint the portrait of a lady in exalted circles who boasted the possession of a most unique jewel in the form of a pendant. The lady was very anxious that this heirloom should be included in her portrait. The artist, of course, complied with her request.

Shortly after the painting had been completed a daring burglary was perpetrated, with the result that the lady lost her heirloom, and no trace of the thief or thieves was forthcoming. Years passed by, and the lady gave up all hope of ever seeing the precious heirloom again.

Now, it so happened that the artist who had painted the portrait of the lady mentioned had occasion to travel in India.

In the course of his wanderings he came to Bombay and, as every visitor to that place does, strolled through the native bazaar.

Suddenly his attention was riveted by a piece of jewelry in a jeweler's shop that seemed familiar to him. It was a diamond and ruby pendant. Where had he seen it before? He ransacked his brain, but could not remember.

He returned to his hotel and happened to take from his portfolio a sketch of the portrait he had made years ago of the lady with the pendant.

In a moment the enigma was solved. The piece of jewelry he had seen was the peculiar pendant that his fair sitter had been so anxious he should include in his portrait.

He hurried off to the chief of police and told that worthy what he suspected—namely, that the bazaar he had visited contained the long lost jewel of the English lady. Inquiries were at once set on foot with extraordinary results. The jeweler in the bazaar confessed to having given years ago a quite insignificant sum for the jewel, which he had bought from a stableman in the employ of a neighboring rajah. The stableman was sought for and turned out to be none other than a famous English cracksman who had apparently turned honest, but who, nevertheless, confessed to having been the thief of the jewel that had been so miraculously discovered.—Pearson's Weekly.

SAFES IN BIG HOTELS.

Valuables Kept In Them by Guests For Years at a Time.

A woman walked up to the counter of a fashionable hotel and asked for a package of valuables which was in the safe.

"If I had not wanted one particular thing I suppose I should have left the package where it was for another three years," she said to the clerk.

"Yes," said the clerk in answer to a question after the woman left, "that packet had really been in our safe for three years. Why, we have all sorts of valuable papers, jewelry and even money that are intrusted to our keeping for years at a time. People seem to prefer a hotel safe to a safety deposit vault. One reason perhaps is that it costs nothing. Another is that the standard of hotel clerks has improved.

"It is astonishing the amount of jewelry that people keep in hotel safes. Of course the owners have originally stopped in the hotel, but they go away, leaving their valuables, and I have known such persons to be gone as much as two years and never make an inquiry about their property in that time.

"To show you how much confidence people have in hotels and their employees I might mention that the other day a man came in here and put four $1,000 bills in an envelope, wrote his name on the latter and asked me to put it in the safe. Not long ago another man actually did the same thing with seven $10,000 bills."

The clerks of several other hotels talked in a similar strain without any outside suggestion.

"I'll bet I have handled more than a million dollars' worth of jewelry today," said one. "Look here," and he opened the safe and plied six or eight big jewelry cases on the counter, but hurriedly put them back. "In one of those I know there is over $200,000 worth, and what I showed you was only a few of what the safe contains."—New York Sun.

A RESTRAINING HAND.

Its Action Followed by a Voice That Warned.

"Patrick H. McCarren once told me of a funny incident that happened in Rome," said a Brooklyn lawyer. "McCarren said that on his first visit to Rome, after he had seen the Coliseum and the Forum, he visited the Ara Coeli church, on the left of the Capitoline hill. He climbed the grand stairway leading to the church, the finest open air stairway in the world. He pushed back the heavy leather curtain, and, entering, he found a service in progress. So he put his hat on the marble floor at his side and took a seat.

"After ten minutes or so he decided he would go and reached down for his hat. But a restraining hand was laid on his, and he desisted. He knew, of course, that some churches don't like people to leave in the midst of a service.

"Ten or fifteen minutes more passed. The service still continued. Senator McCarren got impatient and again reached for his hat. But again the unseen hand restrained him from the rear.

"A little later, however, the senator quite lost patience. This was, he told himself, an important service, of course. Nevertheless he did not propose to miss his luncheon, and it would harm no one if he slipped out quietly.

"So a third time he reached for his hat, and the invisible hand a third time detained him. He persevered, however. The silent hand pushed, and his silent hand pushed against it. But just as he was conquering in the struggle a voice said in good American:

Could Prove It.

A few days ago an alderman was glancing over the register at one of the local hotels to see if a friend of his was registered there. Near him stood a man who was holding on to the desk for dear life in a semisuccessful attempt to maintain his balance.

"I s-s'pose you think I'm drunk?" said the stranger, looking belligerently at the alderman.

"No; not in the least," replied the alderman, anxious to avoid the possibility of a row.

"Well, you'd know I was if I let go this desk," answered the man.—Newark Star.

No Rest Day or Night

"I would lay awake for hours without any apparent cause, or dream terrible dreams which would bring on extreme spells of nervousness. After taking Dr. Miles' Nervine and Tonic for awhile I could sleep well, and the nervous spells have left me." MISS ALMA HUG, R. R, No. 4, Canal Dover, Ohio.

Without sleep the nervous system soon becomes a wreck, and the healthful activity of all the organs obstructed. Restful, body-building sleep accompanies the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine because it soothes the irritable nerves, and restores nervous energy. When taken a few days according to directions, the most restless sufferer will find sleep natural and healthful. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

President Helps Orphans.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of The Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this Institution for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth." It invigorates the vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. To strengthen and build up thin, pale, weak children or run-down people it has no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c at H. L. Dunkel's.

A Surprise

Miss Viola Hay was surprised upon returning to her home last Wednesday evening by finding a large number of her friends gathered to celebrate her seventeenth birthday. Miss Viola had spent the afternoon at Mr. John Mason's where she was invited to tea that evening and where she was entertained till about 8 o'clock. The evening was spent in playing games and music and at 11 o'clock light refreshments were served. Those present were the Misses Biona Wise, Myrtle Flatter, Mary Horn, Lelia Horn, Mary and Hallie Notestein, Ethel Vanzile, Beulah Vanzile, Ella Dix, Viola Sontchie, Rozella Pisch of Camden, Mich., Grace Hay of Warsaw and Messrs Jesse and John Smith of Antwerp, Clyde Boger, Ray Means, Chas. and Carlos Brattain, Levi Slaughter, John Steward, Jay Vanzile Ebert Grill, Lewis Treece, Melvin Miller, Jay Fales, Wm. Mason, Henry Brown and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mason.

Are Doctors Any Good?

Foolish question! Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently, trust him fully. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you. Ask your doctor. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Pills for constipation, biliousness, sick-headache, we would not offer them to you. Ask your own doctor about this.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE GREAT ESTIMATE OF JESUS.

By Rev. James Moffat.

When Jesus was sitting with His disciples at the last supper, He cast His thoughts backward as well as forward. He spoke of the future in order to encourage His followers. He assured them that He had control of it, and that they would have a place in it: "I appoint to you a kingdom." But He also turned His mind to the past. When a time of separation is at hand, people like to recall what they have been to one another in the old days; they go back upon their common experiences, grave and bright; it is the favorite hour for reminiscences. And so Jesus spoke for a moment of what lay behind Him and of the part which the disciples had played in the career which was now closing upon earth. "You are those who have stood by Me during My temptations." That is the great estimate of Jesus.

It is an estimate of His own life. We speak of the temptation, as if the threefold experience at the opening of His ministry were the only or the chief period of temptation through which He had to pass, till at the end He had to undergo His agony in Gethsemane. But the long interval between these crises had its own varied and continuous discipline. He was tempted by His enthusiasm and His fears, by His affections and His antipathies, tempted to lower His religion to the popular level, tempted to satisfy the craving for miracles or for political leadership, tempted even to avoid the shame of the cross. "He suffered, being tempted."

From one point of view, He could describe His life as "My temptations." He seldom spoke of His inward life to the disciples; the deeper a nature is, the less demonstrative it is, and it was from His disciples, as from His own family, that some of the subtlest temptations to His fidelity had arisen. Probably they did not realize this to the full, though they must have been conscious of the threats leveled against Him by His opponents. In any case, it must have been a surprise to them to hear Him speak of "My temptations." People do not often realize that the outside service of life may have to be carried on, while inwardly the soul is fighting a battle of its own against treachery and weakness of will. No one seems to have suspected that Jesus, underneath the quiet, strong exterior of His character, had repeatedly to overcome the shrinking from pain and the instinct for joy which are natural to our being, and which furnish the opportunity for some of our keenest temptations. But we have His word for it, and His word comes home to all who may feel, now and then, that life consists of little more than temptations, and that hardly any one realizes how much they have to try their faith and patience. Some difficulties are more or less public property. Our friends cannot help seeing us face to face with them, and the consciousness of their sympathy, spoken or unspoken, nerve us against the strain. We are the stronger for their intelligence. But how many temptations strike life of which outsiders, and even our intimate friends, are ignorant. The strong soul knows when to be reticent. The deeper spirits understand that they must keep "a brave front, although others may hardly suspect the extent or even the existence of their difficulties. But they have the comfort of knowing that Christ has been through that discipline, when the heart must forego sympathy from its fellows. He understands what men are obliged to bear in such dark passages.

The words of Christ also contain a generous estimate of His own friends. The eleven were at his side on that evening, and they might not have been there. Others, all over the country, had fallen away because the strain of loyalty proved too severe or because the novelty of the cause had paled, and one of the twelve at that very moment was hurrying along the dark street to betray him. Cowardice is an infectious spirit. But these men, though they had often questioned the wisdom of their leader and sometimes hesitated to follow Him, had never gone back. Their first impulse had settled down into a staunch, practical devotion, which Jesus, who knew what it meant for them to hold on, was forward to appreciate. It is true that their loyalty had not always been unbroken or intelligent. The range of Christ's temptations had been deeper than even the most intimate and thoughtful of His adherents realized. But their fidelity had been a support.

Jesus could stand alone. But He never disguised His sensitiveness to affection, and whenever His friends could offer Him not counsel, perhaps, but just unswerving loyalty. He welcomed it eagerly, as a proof of moral devotion. The great enemy of faithfulness is vanity. Many people will be loyal, but their devotion is really paid to an extension of their own interests and importance. These disciples of Jesus had overcome that temptation. They had mastered their prejudices and reluctance sufficiently to stay beside Him at all costs, instead of letting themselves be marred off by a thirst for praise or a fear of intimidation.

That is why faithfulness often covers many a defect of roughness or dullness in life. Jesus had just overheard the disciples quarreling like children over a question of precedence. But under all these defects Jesus saw, with the insight of generosity, that they retained the redeeming feature of loyalty, and He praised them for it. "Whatever else you have done or left undone, you have done one thing of which I am proud; you have lasted." Praise of this kind cannot have failed to make the disciples feel a trifle ashamed as they recollected how inadequately they had supported their leader, and how their loyalty had often covered secret misgivings and unworthy fears.

But, while the sincere heart almost shrinks from being praised, such words of Jesus serve to correct a mistaken estimate of the Christian vocation. They assure us that what God expects from us pre-eminently is fidelity. He prizes those who can be relied upon. We begin by putting a premium upon dazzling enterprises and striking deeds. But more and more, as the years pass, we understand the meaning of Christ's emphasis upon the power to last, and the satisfaction of being able to meet His demand for tenacity and steadfastness. Dr. Dale, in a letter to his brother, once wrote: "To do some great thing is the craving of early ambition; to do quiet duty honestly and without serious falls satisfies the heart when youth disappears." And it satisfies God. It is a great thing in His eyes—we might almost say it is the great thing—to be at your post, and to keep at your post, through all the vicissitudes and monotony of the long day. To get through the discipline without breaking down under the strain, or without breaking away from His control—who shall say that is a little thing? He will not.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

BEARING THE CROSS.

By Henry Francis Lyte.

[Many hymn critics think that this song outranks even the author's beautiful "Abide With Me." It was first published in 1824.]

Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave, and follow Thee;
Naked, poor, despised, forsaken,
Thou, from hence, my all shalt be!
Perish, every fond ambition,
All I've sought, or hoped, or known,
Yet how rich is my condition,
God and heaven are still my own!

Let the world despise and leave me,
They have left my Savior, too;
Human hearts and looks deceive me—
Thou art not, like them, untrue;
O! while Thou dost smile upon me,
God of wisdom, love, and might,
Foes may hate, and friends disown me
Show Thy face, and all is bright.

Man may trouble and distress me,
'Twill but drive me to Thy breast,
Life with trials hard may press me
Heaven will bring me sweeter rest!
O! 'tis not in grief to harm me,
While Thy love is left to me;
O! 'twere not in joy to charm me,
Were that joy unmixed with Thee.

Go, then, earthly fame and treasure!
Come, disaster, scorn, and pain!
In Thy service pain is pleasure,
With Thy favor, loss is gain.
I have called thee, Abba, Father!
I have staid my heart on Thee!
Storms may howl, and clouds may gather,
All must work for good to me.

Soul, then know thy full salvation,
Rise o'er sin, and fear, and care;
Joy to find in every station
Something still to do or bear.
Think what Spirit dwells within thee;
Think what Father's smiles are thine;
Think that Jesus died to win thee;
Child of heaven, canst thou repine?

Haste thee on from grace to glory,
Armed by faith, and winged by prayer!
Heaven's eternal day's before thee,
God's own hand shall guide thee there;
Soon shall close thy earthly mission,
Soon shall pass thy pilgrim days,
Hope shall change to glad fruition,
Faith to sight, and prayer to praise.

"Who was the fellow Pepys, and what is his claim to fame?"

"His claim to fame is well founded, my friend. He's the man who kept a diary for more than a year."—Kansas City Journal.

Apples as Omens.

In parts of England many quaint superstitions still center round the apple. Apples hung on strings and twirled before the fire are said to fall off in the order that the marriages of the various owners will proceed. An apple eaten before a looking glass is supposed to give a view of the inquirer's future husband, who will be seen peeping over milady's shoulder. Peel safely taken from an apple, tossed three times round the head and thrown to the ground unbroken forms the first letter of a future lover's name. A more recent, though hardly more serious custom necessitates a bowl of water in which are floating a number of apples. Mothers must drop forks into the bowl from a distance of about four feet. If the fork pierces an apple the feat is believed to protect the performer's children from catching cold.—London Scraps.

The use of barges in the coastwise trade is increasing enormously.

When Protection Is Needed.

"Do you regard protection as a business necessity?" demanded the inquisitive person.

"A necessity?" responded the other. "Say, you try running a 'speak easy' in this town without it and see where you land."—Philadedphia Ledger.

Where Is Worked.

"While we were on my honeymoon I always spoke French to my husband so that no one should understand us."

"So you went to France, did you?"—Fliegende Blaetter.

English Coffee.

An extract from the London Chronicle proves that the English can take a joke in a sportsmanlike way.

The American opinion of coffee as understood in the English home is not high, and how the coffee of the English lodgings is esteemed may be understood from the following traveler's tale:

It was his first morning in London "apartments," and his landlady came up with the breakfast, and as she set down his coffee cup she opened a slight conversation.

"It looks like rain," she said.

"It does," agreed the American, "and it doesn't even smell unlike it."

Mrs. Chillicon-Kearney—I hardly think so. Distance can only—er—lend enchantment, you know.

A Lesson for the Old.

"I hear, my boy, that you have lately told your mother several falsehoods. This grieves me to the heart. Always tell the truth, even though it may bring suffering upon you. Will you promise me?"

"Yes, father."

"Very well. Now go and see who is knocking at the door. If it's the collector, say I'm not at home."—Detroit News-Tribune.

Thought He Had.

Watt Smatter—Bought your Christmas presents yet?

Don't Weep At The Ice House.

It's an old trick of the leaders of the Labor Trust to twist facts and make the "sympathetic ones" "weep at the ice house." (That's part of the tale further on.)

Gompers et al. sneer at, spit upon and defy our courts, seeking sympathy by falsely telling the people the courts were trying to deprive them of free speech and free press.

Men can speak freely and print opinions freely in this country and no court will object, but they cannot be allowed to print matter as part of a criminal conspiracy to injure and ruin other citizens.

Gompers and his trust associates started out to ruin the Bucks Stove Co., drive its hundreds of workmen out of work and destroy the value of the plant without regard to the fact that hard earned money of men who worked, had been invested there.

The conspirators were told by the courts to stop these vicious "trust" methods, (efforts to break the firm that won't come under trust rule), but instead of stopping they "dare" the courts to punish them and demand new laws to protect them in such destructive and tyrannous acts as they may desire to do. * * * The reason Gompers and his band persisted in trying to ruin the Bucks Stove Works was because the stove company insisted on the right to keep some old employees at work when "de union" ordered them discharged and some of 'de gang" put in.

Now let us reverse the conditions and have a look.

Suppose the company had ordered the union to dismiss certain men from their union, and, the demand being refused, should institute a boycott against that union, publish its name in an "unfair list," instruct other manufacturers all over the United States not to buy the labor of that union, have committees call at stores and threaten to boycott if the merchants sold anything made by that union. Picket the factories where members work and slug them on the way home, blow up their houses and wreck the works, and even murder a few members of the boycotted union to teach them they must obey the orders of "organized Capital?"

It would certainly be fair for the company to do these things if lawful for the Labor Trust to do them.

In such a case, under our laws, the boycotted union could apply to our courts and the courts would order the company to cease boycotting and trying to ruin these union men. Suppose thereupon the company should sneer at the court and in open defiance continue the unlawful acts in a persistent, carefully laid out plan, purposely intended to ruin the union and force its members into poverty. What a howl would go up from the union demanding that the courts protect them and punish their law-breaking oppressors. Then they would praise the courts and go on earning a living protected from ruin and happy in the knowledge that the people's courts could defend them.

How could any of us receive protection from law-breakers unless the courts have power to, and do punish such men.

The court is placed in position where it must do one thing or the other—punish men who persist in defying its peace orders or go out of service, let anarchy reign and the more powerful destroy the weaker.

Peaceable citizens sustain the courts as their defenders, whereas thieves, forgers, burglars, crooks of all kinds and violent members of labor unions, hate them and threaten violence if their members are punished for breaking the law. They want the courts to let them go free and at the same time demand punishment for other men "outside de union" when they break the law. * * * Notice the above reference is to "violent" members of labor unions. The great majority of "unheard" union men are bright citizens. The not into office and great Labor Trust this kind of men.

In labor conventions and thus carry out the leaders' schemes, frequently abhorrent to the rank and file: so it was at the late Toronto convention.

The paid delegates would applaud and "resolute" as Gompers wanted, but now and then some of the real workingmen insist on being heard, sometimes at the risk of their lives.

Delegate Egan is reported to have said at the Toronto convention:

"If the officers of the federation would only adhere to the law we would think a lot more of them."

The Grand Council of the Provincial Workingmen's Ass'n of Canada has declared in favor of severing all connection with unions in the U. S., saying "any union having its seat of Gov't in America, and pretending to be international in its scope, must fight industrial battles according to American methods. Said methods have consequences which are abhorrent to the law-abiding people of Canada involving hunger, misery, riot, bloodshed and murder, all of which might be termed a result of the practical war now in progress in our fair province and directed by foreign emissaries of the United Miners of America."

That is an honest Canadian view of our infamous "Labor Trust."

(By the Associated Press.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10.—Characterizing the attitude of Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor in the contempt proceedings in the courts of the District of Columbia, in connection with the Bucks' Stove and Range Company, as "a willful, premeditated violation of the law," Simon Burns, general master workman of the general assembly, Knights of Labor, has voiced a severe condemnation of these three leaders. Mr. Burns expressed his confidence in courts in general and in those of the District of Columbia in particular.

APPROVED BY DELEGATES.

This rebuke by Burns was in his annual report to the general assembly of his organization. He received the hearty approval of the delegates who heard it read at their annual meeting in this city.

"There is no trust or combination of capital in the world," said Mr. Burns, "that violates laws oftener than do the trust labor organizations, which resort to more dishonest, unfair and dishonorable methods toward their competitors than any trust or combinations in the country."

Mr. Burns said the action of "these so-called leaders" would be harmful for years to come whenever attempts were made to obtain labor legislation.

"The Labor Digest," a reputable workingman's paper, says, as part of an article entitled "The Beginning of the End of Gompersism, many organizations becoming tired of the rule-or-ruin policies which have been enforced by the president of the A. F. of L."

"That he has maintained his leadership for so long a time in the face of his stubborn clinging to policies which the more thoughtful of the workingmen have seen for years must be abandoned, has been on account partly of the sentimental feeling on the part of the organizations that he ought not to be deposed, and the unwillingness of the men who were mentioned for the place to accept a nomination in opposition to him. In addition to this, there is no denying the shrewdness of the leader of the A. F. of L., and his political sagacity, which has enabled him to keep a firm grip on the machinery of the organization, and to have his faithful henchmen in the positions where they could do him the most good whenever their services might be needed.

"Further than this, he has never failed, at the last conventions, to have some sensation to spring on the convention at the psychological moment, which would place him in the light of a martyr to the cause of unionism, and ageite a wave of sympathetic enthusiasm for him which would carry the delegates off their feet, and result in his re-election.

"That his long leadership, and this apparent impossibility to fill his place has gone to his head, and made him imagine that he is much greater a man than he really is, is undoubtedly the case, and accounts for the tactics he has adopted in dealing with questions before congress, where he has unnecessarily antagonized men to whom organized labor must look for recognition of their demands, and where labor measures are often opposed on account of this very antagonism, which would otherwise receive support.

"There is no doubt but what organized labor in this country would be much stronger with a leader who was more in touch with conditions as they actually exist, and who would bring to the front the new policies which organized labor must adopt if it expects to even maintain its present standing, to say nothing of making future progress."

We quote portions of another article, a reprint, from the same labor paper:

"Organized labor, through its leaders, must recognize the mistakes of the past if they expect to perpetuate their organizations or to develop the movement which they head. No movement, no organization, no nation can develop beyond the intellects which guide these organizations, and if the leaders are dominated by a selfish motive the organization will become tinged with a spirit of selfishness, which has never appealed to mankind in any walk of life at any time since history began.

"It can be said in extenuation of certain leaders of organized labor that the precarious position which they occupy as leaders has had a tendency to cause them to lose sight of the object behind the organization. The natural instinct in man for power and position is in no small measure responsible for the mistakes of the leaders, not necessarily in labor unions alone, but in every branch of society. This desire for power and leadership and personal aggrandizement causes men who have been earnest and sincere in their efforts in the start to deteriorate into mere politicians whose every act and utterance is tinged with the desire to cater to the baser passions of the working majority in the societies or organizations and this is undoubtedly true when applied to the present leaders of the Federation. We mention the Federation of Labor particularly in this article because that organization is the only organization of labor which has yet found itself in direct opposition to the laws of the land. There are other organizations of labor whose leaders have made mistakes, but they have always kept themselves and their organizations within the bounds of the law and respected the rights of every other man in considering the rights of themselves and their constituency; whereas, the motto of the Federation is just the reverse, and unless the leaders conform themselves and their organization in accordance with the laws of the land, the leaders and the organization itself must be disintegrated and pass into history, for in America the common sense in mankind is developed to a greater extent than in any other nation on the earth, and the people, who are the court of last resort in this country, will never allow any system to develop in this country which does not meet with the approval of the majority of the citizens of the country.

"This must have forced itself upon the leaders of the Federation by this time. If it has not, the leaders must be eliminated. The organization which they head has done many meritorious things in times past and the people are always ready and willing to acknowledge the benefits which their efforts have brought to their constituency as a whole, but at the present time labor organizations in general, and the Federation of Labor in particular, stand before the bar of public opinion, having been convicted of selfishness and a disposition to rule all the people of the country in the interest of the few. The people are patient and awaiting to see if the object lesson which they have been forced to give to these leaders is going to be recognized and if they are going to conform themselves and their future work and actions in accordance thereto."

Let the people remember that comment, "The Federation of Labor in particular stands before the bar of public opinion having been convicted of selfishness and a disposition to rule all the people of the country in the interest of the few."

The great 90 per cent of Americans do not take kindly to the acts of tyranny by these trust leaders openly demanding that all people bow down to the rules of the Labor Trust and we are treated to the humiliating spectacle of our Congress and even the Chief Executive entertaining these convicted law-breakers and listening with consideration to their insolent demands that the very laws be changed to allow them to safely carry on their plan of gaining control over the affairs of the people.

The sturdy workers of America have come to know the truth about these "martyrs sacrificing themselves in the noble cause of labor" but it's only the hysterical ones who swell up and cry over the aforesaid "heroes," reminding one of the two romantic elderly maids who, weeping copiously, were discovered by the old janitor at Mt. Vernon.

"What is it ails you ladies?"

"Why, we have so long revered the memory of George Washington that we feel it a privilege to come here and weep at his tomb."

"Yas'm, yas'm, yo' shore has a desire to express yo' sympathy, but yo' are overflowin' at de wrong spot, yo' is weepin' at de ice house."

Don't get maudlin about law-breakers who must be punished if the very existence of our people is to be maintained.

If you have any surplus sympathy it can be extended to the honest workers who continue to earn food when threatened and are frequently hurt and sometimes killed before the courts can intervene to protect them.

Now the Labor Trust leaders demand of Congress that the courts be stripped of power to issue injunctions to prevent them from assaulting or perhaps murdering men who dare earn a living when ordered by the Labor Trust to quit work.

Don't "weep at the Ice House" and don't permit any set of law-breakers to bully our courts, if your voice and vote can prevent. Be sure and write your Representatives and Senators in Congress asking them not to vote for any measure to prevent the courts from protecting homes, property and persons from attack by paid agents of this great Labor Trust.

Don't sit silent and allow the organized and paid men of this great trust to force Congress to believe they represent the great masses of the American people. Say your say and let your representatives in Congress know that you do not want to be governed under new laws which would empower the Labor Trust leaders with legal right to tell you when to work, Where! For whom! At what price! What to buy! What not to buy! Whom to vote for! How much you shall pay per month in fees to the Labor Trust! etc., etc., etc.

This power is now being demanded by the passage of laws in Congress. Tell your Senators and Representatives plainly that you don't want them to vote for any measure that will allow any set of men either representing Capital or Labor to govern and dictate to the common people, who prefer to be free to go and come, work or not, and vote for whom they please.

Every man's liberty will disappear when the leaders of the great Labor Trust or any other trust can ride rough shod over people and mass their forces to prevent our courts from affording protection.

"There's a Reason."

REVIEW OF INDIANA

The Farmers' National Bank of Wilkinson is making preparations for a corn show, to be held February 2. A session of the Hancock County Farmers' Institute was held at Shirley January 5 and 6. The program included topics of special interest to farmers and farmers' wives.

The prevalence of pulmonary diseases in Connersville has led the local papers, in association with physicians, to publish prominently some rules of prevention. The precautions suggested amount at last to earnest advice to keep the windows of sleeping rooms open, to keep the temperature of homes and offices down to 80 degrees or less and to keep the feet dry.

At the tenth annual reunion of the Association of Survivors of the Battle of Stone River, recently held in Terre Haute, the following officers were elected, and it was decided to meet in Princeton, Ind., next year: President, Samuel F. Wilson, Neoga, Ill.; Vice President, J. K. Henby, Greenfield, Ind.; secretary, W. H. Dryden, Martinsville, Ind.; Assistant Secretary, Henry Wylie, Paris, Ind.

After he had been mourned as dead by his friends in Muncie, who read of his being killed in a railroad accident in the southern part of the State, Frank Pierson surprised them by walking in on his acquaintances and frightening several of them half out of their wits. Another Frank Pierson was killed, and the report that it was the Muncie man who met death was circulated by some one not fully acquainted with the circumstances.

Data just collected by Charles E. Talkington, superintendent of the Bartholomew County schools, shows that nineteen hacks are used in the county in the transportation of pupils to and from schools in the rural districts. The hacks cost the school funds of the county the sum of $26.84 a day, and the average daily cost of each hack is $1.94. The number of pupils transported is 309 and the average cost for each pupil a day is 11.8 cents.

A cat at the home of George Newton in Owensville has become a terror to rabbits. It does not run over an acre or two of ground in its search for rabbits, but takes a stand on the back yard fence and waits patiently several hours for a bunny to hop within jumping distance. When the rabbit ventures too close the cat springs from its perch and the fight begins. Sometimes when the cat lands upon the back of a rabbit the latter will run a great distance before it is finally killed.

Harry Fryen, George Fryen, Arthur Fryen and Karl Fryen, who have been spending a few days hunting near Lawrenceburg with friends, have returned to their home in Indianapolis with several valued trophies of their trip. They bagged 120 rabbits, 61 quails, a red fox, a small black eagle and a queer freak of nature, which is believed to be half cat and half rabbit. The freak was shot on the farm of Mrs. Mary A. Harrison, in North Hogan creek, my Harry Fryen.

Joseph H. Githens, whose death occurred suddenly at Indianapolis, was a pioneer hotel man of Richmond, conducting at various times the Huntington, the Grand and the Arlington hotels. He was one of the best known men of the city of Richmond, and because of the fact that when he left there a few days ago to spend Christmas with his daughter in Indianapolis he was in the best of health, apparently, the news of his death came as a great surprise to his friends. Mr. Githens was to have been married soon to Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

Charles W. Kleckner, who represented Cass County in the Indiana Legislature in 1907 and 1909, has been appointed sexton of Mt. Hope cemetery by David D. Fickle, who succeeded George P. McKee as mayor of the city of Logansport. Kleckner is a hod carrier by trade, and when in the Legislature took much pride in his vocation. He could have been returned to the Legislature had he so desired, but he decided that a good, steady four years' job under the city government is better than sixty days in the legislature every two years. He begins his new duties immediately.

Col. Isaac Brown, the "Bird and Bee Man," has struck it rich. He recently purchased fifty acres of land near Rochester from Indianapolis residents. In "brushing" the land it was discovered that there is a peat bed on it. The State Geologist who examined the find says it is fern peat, and that there is as much fuel quality in it as if the peat were that much anthracite coal. Colonel Brown declares that as the peat bed is overgrown with bushes in which hundreds of his little feathered friends nest they will not be disturbed by mining, as the birds are worth more to the community than the peat is to him.

Silas Anson, aged 40 years, employed as engineer in the plant of the Evansville Furniture Company, was killed by being struck by a flying piston rod. His wife's first husband was killed in a similar manner several years ago.

Mrs. Pauline Summers, a well-known resident of Valparaiso, was removed to the Christian hospital where an operation for appendicitis was performed. Mrs. Summers is past grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star in Indiana.

The farm recently purchased by the Evansville Anti-Tuberculosis Society with the $5,000 given it by Congressman John W. Boehne has been named the Boehne farm in honor of the representative in Congress from the First Indiana district.

Frank Flora has just completed what is thought to be the State record for corn husking, on the farm of Clarence Tansy, west of Flora. Flora worked for nineteen days, and husked and cribbed two thousand bushels of corn, for which he received 3 cents a bushel, making for his work $60.

The Delaware County Humane Society, under the direction of the humane officer attached to the Muncie police force, began an inspection of livery horses and animals used for heavy hauling. It is said that many horses have been overworked and mistreated since the recent heavy snowfall.

Melvin Myers, a farmer near Nashville, met with a peculiar accident which nearly cost him his life. He was driving a wild horse when the horse became frightened at a covey of quails flying past and ran away. Mr. Myers was thrown from the bugky, but held on to the lines and was dragged for a quarter of a mile through the snow.

Walter T. Carpenter, first superintendent of Earlham College, and one of Richmond's most esteemed men, was 99 years old last Saturday. He is in feeble health, though his condition is improved from that of a few weeks ago. Mr. Carpenter's wife died a short time ago, at the age of 86 years. They had been married almost seventy-five years.

The Crandall farm, three miles north of Newcastle, owned by Charles D. Mohler, county commissioner, has been sold to James Ginn, a Hendricks County man. It consists of 160 acres and the price was $20,000, which is regarded as a high price. The Lee Hudelson eighty-acre farm, along the National road, near Dunreith, was sold to Fred E. Hudelson for $12,000.

Dr. Felix W. Maxelwood is ill from blood poisoning at the New Albany city hospital, and it is feared amputation of his right hand may be necessary, and Mrs. Adolph Laden is suffering from septicaemia, caused by a house cat sinking her teeth deep into the back of her hand. Her condition is serious. Dr. Hazelwood's finger was cut while handling a glass phial which broke in his hand.

Tariff on socks and quinine has no terrors for Warren Backer, a farm laborer living northwest of Owensville. When the first biting frost appears Becker proceeds to give his feet a couple of coats of varnish. The process eliminates the necessity of wearing socks and taking quinine for colds. Becker makes the "dope" with which he paints his feet, and will not divulge the secret of its composition.

Usually very shy of any sign of habitation, the few coveys of quails that have escaped the hunters in Wayne County, this winter, are seeking barnyards of farmers in search of food. The thick blanket of snow, which has a thin but very tough coating of ice upon it, has proved a serious handicap to the quails, and some birds have actually died from starvation. In some parts of the county farmers are reported to be providing food for the birds.

The Rev. Cassius M. Carter, a Baptist minister, has broken all Muncie records for a long pastorate. He is in his thirteenth year of continuous service as minister of the First Baptist church there. The Rev. Mr. Carter was formerly editor of the Indiana Baptist, the official organ of the church in the State. He served as a trustee of Franklin College for fifteen years and is now a member of the executive committee of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League.

A box of bread shipped from Fort Wayne to the George H. Smith grocery was carried through Portland by the night train which regularly brings it, and it reached Richmond before its presence in the express car was discovered. There was no express train coming north again until afternoon, but a freight crew just leaving the station, consented to care for the box. It was roped on the engine, tied to the cowcatcher, and in this position reached Portland in time to serve the grocer's patrons at the noon hour.

"Wanted—At the Vendome hotel, a red-headed boy, from 15 to 18 years old." This was the want ad inserted in several of the Evansville papers by the management of the New Vendome hotel there. Manager Johnson of that hotel says he preferred red-headed boys around the hotel to any other kind; that one red-headed boy will put ginger in all the rest, and that blond boys pay too much attention to love affairs, while "brunettes are inclined to be lazy and lack enterprise." Mr. Johnson says if a hotel manager wishes a real bellboy, one who will fill the bill, he should pick some lad with a red head and he will not be disappointed.

DEVELOPMENT OF CENTRAL CANADA.

The Story of Big Yields of Grain Comes from Every Section.

When the man in the States was told that he could get 160 acres of land in Central Canada—comprising the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—that under cultivation would produce from 20 to 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, or if seeded to oats the yield would be 40 to 60 bushels, he was skeptical. The same story was told the man who wished to get nearer to existing lines of railway, and was only asked to pay $10 to $12 an acre. But many tried it, some one plan and some another. The man who accepted the 160 acres as a free gift, as a homestead, and was willing to put in the required residence duties of three years, has now a farm worth from fifteen to twenty dollars an acre. The man who chose to purchase, and did so, took up his residence just the same. He has land, that, in many cases, is worth twice the money he paid for it. Both have found that the story of splendid yields was verified. They have had crops exceeding that promised; they have seen oats that yielded 100 bushels to the acre, and have grown wheat that averaged 40 and as high as 50 bushels to the acre. Their wheat was not a 58 pounds to the bushel article, but 62 and 63 pounds. They have seen within the past year or two trunk lines of railway constructed through their district, and throwing out branch lines to the gates of their farm. They have seen schools established in their neighborhood and the government contributing largely to their expense. Churches have been erected, villages have been established, towns have sprung into existence, and cities are rapidly springing up, as if the magic hand of some unseen conjurer was at work. But it was not; it was the legitimate offering of the wealth of the field which made all these things come about, naturally, and easy. The prairie that three years ago was merely prairie, a patch of brown, just waiting for the ploughman, is to-day dotted with tilled farms and splendid homes. The line of elevators with their glistening metaled fireproof sides and roofs, indicate the location of the town and the railroad. There is the glow of newness about it all, but the elevator, the splendid store buildings and the comfortable hostelries denote wealth—not imported wealth—beyond that of the strength of the man who fashioned and built them, but the wealth of the soil, which means that the newness will be followed by a steady growth. The writer recently was a passenger over the Grand Trunk Pacific, the latest factor in this great marvelous field of development. The rapidity with which towns were being built up, the farmsteads occupied, was something even his experienced eye had not looked for. Everywhere along the line of this new transcontinental was the distinguishing mark of progress. There was not a mile of the length of the road from Winnipeg to Edmonton and west that did not bear token of its ability to pay tribute to the revenue of the road. Mention is made of this line, not because it is the last in the field, but because it is one of the best built roads on the continent and traverses one of the best districts of an excellent country. It is well operated, and already has gone into active service as another means of making it possible to secure more speedily transit from the grain fields to the shipping centers. It had been the intention in this article to have spoken of some of the yields of grain that have made the farmers of Central Canada contented this year, but space will not permit, so that delightful task will be taken up in another issue. In the meantime it would be well for the reader, if he is interested, to put himself in touch with some official of the Canadian government and get information that might be useful in making a selection for a home in Central Canada, and become one of those who will be instrumental in building up a great county to the north. In doing so, you will be assisting the United States. In a few years' time the United States will be a wheat importer. Canada will supply the wheat and you will be one of the producers.

FASHION HINTS

The one illustrated is most attractive and very easily made.

Pleasure and Sacrifice.

An alert little 5-year-old was visiting a city park with her mother for the first time. She had noticed the beautiful red and white swan boats as they passed through in the morning, and her mother had promised they should come back after the shopping was done and have a ride.

Shortly after dinner they stood on the bridge over the lagoon watching the boats below and listening to the cry of the barker as he tried to induce the passing crowds to patronize his swan boats.

But when her mother started toward the boat landing little Elsie declared very vigorously that she did not want to go at all and, as her mother urged her, broke forth in tears.

This sudden fear was so different from her former eagerness that her mother could not understand it until she noticed the boatman's call.

He was crying: "Come along! Come along! Ride clear round the pond. Only 5 cents for ladies and gents! Children thrown in!"

WESTERN CANADA

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Power

"The greatest need of this country [United States] in another generation or two will be the providing of homes for its people and producing sufficient for them. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are gone. Canada is to be the great wheat country."

Upwards of 125 Million Bushels of Wheat

were harvested in 1909. Average of the three provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be upwards of 23 bushels per acre.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3 per acre, are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured; mixed farming a success. WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y., and take the advice received and be well.

In Memory of Mother.

By S. Sylvester Knisely.

Mother is gone beyond the river,
To that bright and golden shore;
Soon we'll go to meet her, yonder,
There to dwell forever more.

Still, we can not wish her here;
For she's gone to that bright city
There to dwell with loved ones dear.

And, the smile that on the features
Glorifies this form of clay,
Shows the beauty of the spirit
That so lately passed away.

Soon, dear mother, we shall meet you
In that home beyond the sky.
You have gone to dwell with Jesus.
We can only say "Good-bye".

HIS NOSE WAS SAFE.

But His Nerves Were in a State of Cold Chill Collapse.

"I was sitting on the veranda of a mining town hotel one afternoon a good many years ago," said a veteran engineer, "and was lazily smoking one of the nicest meerschaum pipes you ever saw when out of the tail of my eye I saw that a bad man down at the other end of the veranda had his gun sighted at me. They were a wild lot around there, and I couldn't tell whether he meant to shoot me or the pipe. The chances were in favor of the pipe, however, and it seemed a good chance to test my nerve. I made up my mind to let him shoot and to pretend a careless air, but I'm telling you in the ten or fifteen seconds of waiting the sweat came out at every pore, and my heart pounded my ribs sore. I felt a sort of tick at the bowl of the pipe, heard the crack of the gun and knew that a bullet had passed through the pipe. I got a brace with my hands and feet and waited for a second bullet, and it went through the bowl after the first. I sat there until his fourth bullet had hit the pipe and knocked the bowl off the stem, and then the shooter sauntered up to me and laughingly said:

"'Excuse me, stranger, but I thought it was imitation.'

"'Same as you are,' I replied.

"My gibe hurt him, but he was man enough to tell everybody about my nerve, and the boys chipped in sufficient nuggets to buy me a new fifty dollar pipe. Say, do you know what happened to me when I made an excuse to go upstairs after my old corncob? I had no sooner got into my room than my knees gave out, chills galloped up my spine, and I'll be hanged if I didn't faint away and lie there for ten minutes. It had suddenly occurred to me that the bowl of that pipe was only six inches from my nose while the fellow was doing his shooting, and I have not yet got over touching my nasal organ now and then to see if it is safe."

A TIRED MUSICIAN.

How Strauss Once Snubbed a Russian Court Dignitary.

When Johann Strauss took his orchestra to Russia he had some unusual experiences not generally vouchsafed to those who live outside an autocratic government.

One day he received the czarina's commands to play before her at her summer resort and was told on arriving there that he would have to rehearse his program three times before the performance. He begged to know the reason for that, but no explanation was given him. These were her majesty's orders, and he could only comply. Still, his astonishment grew when he saw during the three rehearsals an empty court carriage drawn by a pair of horses slowly going back and forth in front of his orchestra.

Throughout the final performance the mysterious act was explained. The empress, having a sharp attack of gout, was obliged to recline in the carriage, her foot on a cushion, while the concert took place, and the object of rehearsal had been to accustom the horses to a full string band lest they should take fright and bolt with her.

At the end of the performance an exalted dignitary of the court bade Strauss follow him to a splendid grand piano, saying:

Although he was pretty fatigued by his three rehearsals and state performance, Strauss thought it expedient to comply, but after he had played continuously for over an hour he stopped, saying, "I presume that will be sufficient?"

"But I am!" said Strauss and rose from the instrument.

Word was received Saturday evening by Mrs. J. C. Hull, stating that her cousin Mr. C. A. Auten of Montgomery, Mich., had accidentally shot himself in the stomach that day while out hunting with his brother, and he was just alive. On Sunday evening word came that he had passed away about eleven o'clock Saturday evening. Mr. Auten had been home from the Standing Army about a month and was enjoying a three month furlough. On December 24th. he was united in marriage to a Montgomery young lady and on January 8th. he lay a corpse. His brother stated that the accident occurred so quickly that he does not know exactly how it happened but supposing him to have slipped, discharging the gun. Mr. Auten has been in the army service for over ten years and had been honored by the office of Colonel. Just before he came home he re-enlisted for several years more. He was a man of about thirty years and was getting to the front rapidly in the Army. The funeral services were held Tuesday morning at Montgomery. Mrs. J. C. Hull and daughter Lora, and Orson Quance were in attendance from here.

Music Class.

In last week's NEWS we suggested a music class and have met with so much encouragement that a preliminary meeting will be held in the Christian church to complete the organization, to-night at 7:00 o'clock. Now remember there will be no charge for this first meeting-everything free. Come everybody and sing we will try to interest you and feel that you may be induced to take hold of this very much needed line of education. Series of lessons will include: voice culture sight reading, chorus work and etc., and the term will finish with a grand concert in the opera house. Come for business. Don't forget the date and time—Thursday evening at 7 o'clock

On last Friday evening the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges held a joint installation at their hall. About one hundred twenty-five guests were present to enjoy the program that had been previously prepared. Refreshments were furnished by the brothers to which all did ample justice.

Last Thursday morning while in the act of getting breakfast, Susan Sechler, in going down cellar, fell from the top step to the floor causing a severe injury in her ankle. It will be remembered that at one time she had broken her ankle and the same has been weak ever since and at times gives away with her. The accident occured at the home of S. H. Maurer south of here. Help was summoned and Miss Sechler was carried from the cellar and medical aid was soon had. Her foot is swollen considerably but is someewhat improved. Avis Sechler is assisting in doing the house work.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

Prosperity is with the Farmer.

A picture which reflects the prosperity of the country and especially that of the farmer, is drawn in the statement of domestic experts for 1909 prepared by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C. Corn at 70c a bushel, wheat at $1.04 a bushel and about 12 cents for every pound of cotton exported is the record for 1909. More than $24,000,000 worth of corn and $48,000,000 of wheat went from American ports to feed the world last year. More than $460,000,000 worth of cotton went to foreign looms, and as these figures show only the exportations from the principal ports of trade, the detailed statements will be large. While there are some decreases shown from the year 1908 the showing is considered by the experts as highly satisfactory.

Boy Saved the Train.

Carl Wascher, a farmer boy 15 years old, stopped a B. & O. passenger train within ten feet of a burning bridge one mile west of Wellsboro, Ind., by signalling to the engineer with a red handkerchief. When the boy discovered that the bridge was burning he hastened down the tracks, remembering that train No. 17, west-bound, was due in a few minutes. As the engine came in sight he called lustily to the engineer but his cries were given no heed. Not until the lad began to wave his large red handkerchief did the man at the throttle put on the brakes and bring the train to a stop. Passengers flocked from the four crowded coaches and when they learned of young Wascher's deed made up a purse of about $100 for him.

Big Furniture Exchange Burned Out.

Fire originating in Young & Chaffee's furniture shipping room in the Shephard building, Grand Rapids, Mich., caused a total loss, approximating $375,00 to building and stock. It quickly spread to the Furniture Exchange, one of the five big furniture exposition buildings, and the latter was completely destroyed. The building was occupied by thirty-four sample lines of furniture, with losses ranging from $500 to $20,000. The Daily News was completely drowned out by water, and the loss on the plant will aggregate $20,000.

Fined for Shooting Pet Squirrel.

Samuel Amos, colored, was fined $43 and costs in Justice of the Peace Holmes' court in Indianapolis, Ind., for shooting a pet squirrel. The man lives in Brightwood and was charged with shooting a squirrel out of season. The squirrel was a neighborhood pet and had become so tame that it would come into the houses of the people in that locality and eat from their hands. When the man was sentenced he made the remark that "down in Kentucky they don't pinch men for shooting a little old squirrel."

Twentieth Century Nearly Wrecked.

The Lake Shore "Twentieth Century Limited" had a narrow escape from an accident at Kendallville, Ind., when a broken flange caused the wheels on the front trucks of the tender to leave the tracks for a short distance. The engineer managed to stop the train near the freight depot and another engine was used to take the train to Elkhart.

Ship Goes Down with 29 Men.

The steamer Czarina, from San Francisco to Coos Bay, was disabled while crossing the Coos Bay bar and the indications are that she will be a total loss. The Czarina has disappeared and it is believed that the crew of twenty-nine men and one passenger have gone down.

Three Men Killed.

Three men were killed and a team of horses blown to atoms when a nitroglycerine magazine at Brandon's ferry, Franklin, Pa., exploded. A house across the Allegheny river from the magazine was wrecked by the force of the explosion.

Re-Elected for Sixty-Fourth Time.

At a meeting of the Baptist Sunday School at Noank, Conn., Walter Palmer was re-elected superintendent for the sixty-fourth time. Mr. Palmer is 84 years old and is actively engaged in business.

CURB RAILROADS AND TRUSTS, URGES TAFT

CHECK ON SECURITY ISSUES.

Legislation Is Asked to Prevent Watering of Stocks and Other Kindred Evils.

WOULD RETAIN SHERMAN LAW.

Aims to Foster "Economizing" Features of Combinations and End "Monopolizing" Evils.

President Taft has sent to Congress his long delayed and much discussed message on interstate commerce and anti-trust legislation.

In it he strikes at the existence of holding corporations by which major trusts control their subsidiaries and at the watering of corporation stock.

To insure the more complete control of railroads by the government he demands the formation of a Court of Commerce, to comprise five judges, having power to act as a court of appeals from the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The President dips into railway employes' safety also, urging new features of the liability law.

State control of corporations is vigorously attacked; the President charges it with the responsibility for many corporation abuses, and he takes a firm stand for centralized power.

He demands that railroads be forbidden to control their competitors and would give the Interstate Commission sweeping increases in power.

Declaring distinction between good and bad trusts to be impossible, the President says emphatically that if the trusts are to be kept within the law new legislation creating national corporations under charter is urgently needed. This, the main provision of the anti-trust section, was announced sometime ago, as were many of the other terms of the message.

Such a move, the President points out, is not to afford the trust a refuge, as the Sherman law's repeal is not contemplated.

The proposed statute, according to the message, "is not to be framed so as to permit the doing of the wrongs which it is the purpose of that (the Sherman) law to prevent, but only to foster a continuance and advance of the highest industrial efficiency without permitting industrial abuses."

The President also includes a vigorous promise that the United States prosecution of trusts will be continued unremittingly.

President Taft's Message.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

What is of supreme importance is that a uniformity of decision be secured so as to bring about an effective, systematic and scientific enforcement of the commerce law, rather than conflicting decisions and uncertainty of final result.

For this purpose I recommend the establishment of a court of the United States composed of five judges designated for such purpose from among the Circuit Judges of the United States, to be known as the "United States Court of Commerce," which court shall be clothed with exclusive original jurisdiction over the following classes of cases:

(1) All cases for the enforcement, otherwise than by adjudication and collection, of a forfeiture or penalty, or by infliction of criminal punishment, of any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission other than for the payment of money.

(2) All cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul or suspend any order or requirement of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

(3) All such cases as under section 3 of the act of Feb. 19, 1903, known as the "Elkins act" are authorized to be maintained in a Circuit Court of the United States.

(4) All such mandamus proceedings as under the provisions of section 20 or section 23 of the interstate commerce law are authorized to be maintained in a Circuit Court of the United States.

In my opinion all litigation affecting the government should be under the direct control of the Department of Justice, and I therefore recommend that all proceedings affecting orders and decrees of the Interstate Commerce Commission be brought by or against the United States at nomine, and be placed in charge of an assistant attorney general acting under the direction of the attorney general.

I see no reason why the commission should not be authorized to act on its own initiative as well as upon the complaint of an individual in investigating the fairness of any existing rate or practice; and I recommend the amendment of the law to so provide; and also that the commission shall be fully empowered, beyond any question, to pass upon the classifications of commodities for purpose of fixing rates, in like manner as it may now do with respect to the maximum rate applicable to any transportation.

End Rail Combines.

I recommend that the law shall be amended so as to provide that from and after the date of its passage no railroad company subject to the interstate commerce act shall, directly or indirectly, acquire any interests of any kind in capital stock or purchase or lease any railroad of any other corporation which competes with it respecting business to which the interstate commerce act applies.

But especially for the protection of the minority stockholders in securing to them the best market for their stock, I recommend that such prohibition be coupled with a proviso that it shall not operate to prevent any corporation, which at the date of passage of such act, shall own not less than one-half of the entire issued and outstanding capital stock of any other railroad company, from acquiring all or the remainder of such stock.

I recommend the enactment of a law providing that no railroad corporation subject to the interstate commerce act shall hereafter for any purpose connected with or relating to any part of its business governed by said act, issue any capital stock without previous or simultaneous payment to it of not less than the par value of such stock, or any bonds or other obligations (except notes maturing not more than one year from the date of their issue), without the previous or simultaneous payment to such corporation of not less than the par value of such bonds, or other obligations, or, if issued at less than their par value, then not without such payment of the reasonable market value of such bonds or obligations as ascertained by the interstate commerce commission; and that no property, service, or other thing than money, shall be taken in payment to such carrier corporation, of the par or other required price of such stock, bond or other obligation, except the fair value of such property, services or other thing ascertained by the commission; and that such act shall also contain provisions to prevent the abuse by the improvident or improper issue of notes maturing at a period not exceeding twelve months from date, in such manner as to commit the commission to the approval of a larger amount of stock or bonds in order to retire such notes than should legitimately have been retired.

Such act should also provide for the approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the amount of stock and bonds to be issued by any railroad company subject to this act upon any reorganization, pursuant to judicial sale or other legal proceedings, in order to prevent the issue of stocks and bonds to an amount in excess of the fair value of the property which is the subject of such reorganization.

Would Prevent Evil Practices.

I believe these suggested modifications in and amendments to the interstate commerce act would make it a complete and effective measure for securing reasonableness of rates and fairness of practices in the operation of interstate railroad lines, without undue preference to any individual or class over any others, and would prevent the recurrence of many of the practices which have given rise in the past to so much public inconvenience and loss.

In addition to the foregoing amendments of the interstate commerce law, the Interstate Commerce Commission should be given the power, after a hearing, to determine upon the uniform construction of these appliances—such as sill steps, ladders, roof hand holds, running boards and hand brakes on freight cars engaged in interstate commerce—used by the trainmen in the operation of trains, the defects and lack of uniformity in which are apt to produce accidents and injuries to railway trainmen.

The question has arisen in the operation of the interstate commerce employers' liability act as to whether suit can be brought against the employer company in any place other than that of its home office. The right to bring the suit under this act should be as easy of enforcement as the right of a private person not in the company's employ to sue on an ordinary claim, and process in such suit should be sufficiently served if upon the station agent of the company upon whom service is authorized is made, to bond the company in ordinary actions arising under state laws. Bills for both the foregoing purposes have been considered by the House of Representatives and have been passed, and are now before the interstate commerce committee of the Senate. I earnestly urge that they be enacted into law.

Anti-Trust Law.

The increase in the capital of a business for the purpose of reducing the cost of production and effecting economy in the management has become as essential in modern progress as the change from the hand tool to the machine.

Monopoly destroys competition entirely and the restraint of the full and free operation of competition has a tendency to restrain commerce and trade.

The object of the anti-trust law was to suppress the abuses of business of the kind described. It was not to interfere with a great volume of capital which, concentrated under one organization, reduced the cost of production and made its profit thereby, and took no advantage of its size, by methods akin to duress, to stifle competition with it.

I conceive that nothing could happen more destructive to the prosperity of this country than the loss of that great economy in production which has been and will be effected in all manufacturing lines by the employment of large capital under one management. I do not mean to say that there is not a limit beyond which the economy of management by the engagement of plant ceases, and where this happens and combination continues beyond this point, the very fact shows intent to monopolize and not to economize.

Feared Universal Trust.

There are enough, however, of such successful combinations to arouse the fears of good, patriotic men as to the result of a continuance of this movement toward the concentration in the hands of a few of the absolute control of the prices of all manufactured products.

The question which I wish in this message to bring clearly to the consideration and decision of the Congress whether or to avoid business danger something cannot be done by which these business combinations may be offered a means, without great financial disturbance, of changing the character, organization and extent of their business into one within the lines of the law under federal control and supervision, securing compliance with the anti-trust statutes.

Many people conducting great businesses have cherished a hope and a belief that in some way or other a line may be drawn between "good trusts" and "bad trusts." Certainly under the present anti-trust law no such distinction exists.

Through all our consideration of this grave question, however, we must insist that the suppression of competition, the controlling of prices, and the monopoly or attempt to monopolize in interstate commerce and business are not only unlawful, but contrary to the public good, and that they must be restrained and punished until ended.

Asks National Corporation Law.

I therefore recommend the enactment by Congress of a general law providing for the formation of corporations to engage in trade and commerce among the States and with foreign nations, protecting them from undue interference by the States and regulating their activities so as to prevent the recurrence, under national auspices, of those abuses which have arisen under State control. Such a law should provide for the issue of stock of such corporations to an amount equal only to the cash paid in on the stock; and if the stock be issued for property, then at a fair valuation ascertained under approval and supervision of federal authority after a full and complete disclosure of all the facts pertaining to the value of such property and the interest thereby of the persons to whom it is proposed to issue stock in payment of such property. It should subject the real and personal property only of such corporations to the same taxation as imposed by the States within which it may be situated upon other similar property located therein, and it should require such corporations to file full and complete reports of their operations with the Department of Commerce and Labor at regular intervals.

Corporations organized under this act should be prohibited from acquiring and holding stock in other corporations (except for special reasons upon approval by the proper federal authorities) thus avoiding the creation, under national auspices, of the holding company, with subordinate corporations in different States, which has been such an effective agency in the creation of the great trusts and monopolies.

Sure of Opposition.

Such a national incorporation law will be opposed, first, by those who believe that trusts should be completely broken up and their property destroyed. It will be opposed, second, by those who doubt the constitutionality of such federal incorporation and even if it is valid, object to it as too great federal centralization. It will be opposed, third, by those who will insist that a more voluntary incorporation like this will not attract to its assistance the worst of the offenders against the anti-trust statute and who will therefore propose instead of it a system of compulsory licenses for all federal corporations engaged in interstate business.

The third objection, that the worst offenders will not accept federal incorporation, is easily answered. The decrees of injunction recently adopted in prosecutions under the anti-trust law are so thorough and sweeping that the corporations affected by them have but three courses before them:

First, they must resolve themselves into their component parts in the different states, with a consequent loss to themselves of capital and effective organization and to the country of concentrated energy and enterprise; or,

Second, in defiance of the law and under some secret treaty they must attempt to continue their business in violation of the federal statute, and thus incur the penalties of contempt and bring on an inevitable criminal prosecution of the individuals named in the decree and their associates; or

Third, they must reorganize and accept in good faith the federal charter I suggest. A federal compulsory license law, urged as a substitute for a federal incorporation law, is unnecessary except to reach that kind of corporation which, by virtue of the considerations already advanced, will take advantage voluntarily of an incorporation law, while the other state corporations doing an interstate business do not need the supervision or the regulation of federal license and would only be unnecessarily burdened thereby.

The attorney general, at my suggestion, has drafted a federal incorporation law, embodying the views I have attempted to set forth and it will be at the disposition of the appropriate committees of Congress.

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

It was against his will that Senator Hernando De Soto Money, of Mississippi, was chosen minority leader in the Upper House of Congress. He was the logical candidate on the retirement of C. A. Culberson, but, because of ill health, he would have preferred to pass the honor to Senator Bacon. His fellows, however, overruled his objections.

Senator Money is a native of Holmes county, Mississippi, and is 70 years of age. He has a university education and is a lawyer and planter. He served in the Confederate army from the beginning of the war until September, 1864, when defective eyesight forced his retirement. After serving in the House of Representatives for 14 years he was elected to the United States Senate, where he has remained since 1897.

SEA TRAVEL NEAR RECORD.

Transatlantic passenger travel for the year 1909 shows some improvement over that for 1908, but is below that of 1907, which was a banner year in the steamship business. A statement recently issued shows that west bound or incoming figures have returned to normal, except in regard to steerage passengers. In 1908 the east-bound or outgoing passengers were greatly in excess of the incoming, due to the industrial depression of the United States.

During the year 1909 all steamship companies operating from New York carried approximately 1,730,000 passengers, of whom 1,247,244 were west-bound and 482,756 east-bound.

The first cabin business during 1909 in both directions was nearly as good as in 1907.

More Steel Profit Sharing.

The United States Steel Corporation, with a great labor war confronting it, is believed to be depending largely upon the loyalty of those employes who in the past have bought shares of the common stock. It is expected that these men will resist the efforts of the Federation of Labor to bring them into the unions when the fight begins. In line with this so-called profit-sharing policy, the Steel Trust has now made public the terms upon which it will issue 34,000 shares of preferred stock for subscription by employes at $124 a share. In addition to this, $1,000,000 in stock is to be awarded to the employes as a bonus, this consisting of both common and preferred. As formerly, the employes have three years in which to pay for their holdings, the money being withheld from their pay envelopes month by month in proportion as they may designate, not to exceed 15 per cent. If they hold the stock for five years they are to get a bonus of $5 a share in addition to the dividend of 7 per cent, in addition to the bonuses of those others who do not hold on.

TAKE AN ELOPING HEIRESS.

Roberta De Janon, Who Fled with Servant, Is Arrested.

Miss Roberta B. De Janon and Frederick Cohen, who eloped from Philadelphia on Dec. 29 and who have been sought from end to end of the country, were arrested by the Chicago police the other afternoon in a cheap boarding house.

Miss De Janon is the granddaughter of Robert Buist, millionaire seed merchant of Philadelphia, and belongs to one of the most aristocratic families of the Quaker City. Cohen is a married man and a waiter.

The 17 year old girl and her 42 year old admirer who have successfully eluded the police of many large cities and scores of private detectives sent in search of the them by the young woman's relatives, were found in a $4 a week room at 68 West Superior street, Chicago, where they had been staying for four days. All of their money but $1.68 was gone.

DIES BY POISON; ACCUSES GIRL.

Indianian Leaves Notes Saying Stepdaughter Gave Him Mixture.

A young woman known in Terre Haute, Ind., as Effie Sellesberry, who is now supposed to be in New Orleans, is wanted by the police of the Indiana city as a witness in connection with the mysterious death of W. H. Helman, her stepfather, a jeweler. Helman was found unconscious in a room in a Terre Haute hotel, and died soon afterward, evidently from poison. Helman returned from Chicago the previous night. Two notes found in his room at the hotel after his death accused Effie Sellesberry of having administered poison to him in coffee that he drank in a restaurant in Chicago. The notes said the woman was with him on the train returning to Terre Haute, and continued on her way to New Orleans. One theory of the police is that Helman was demented and drank poison voluntarily.

CHICAGO WAS FLEECED.

Finding of Merriam Commission in Shale Rock Cases.

The report of the Merriam commission on the Chicago city hall "shale rock" exposure, soft in language but direct in fixing responsibility on men and methods, was sent to the city council the other night and ordered published. Those who had expected it to be a whitewash were dismally disappointed. It says that the city was fleeced when $45,084.20 was paid M. H. McGovern and his silent partner, Joseph Hanreddy, for the excavation of 22,992.1 cubic yards of "shale rock" in section D of the Lawrence avenue sewer. Geologically, it says, shale may have been encountered, although not to the amount paid for; but from an enginering standpoint no excavation should have ben paid for as rock. The commission asks that Corporation Counsel Brundage bring suit to recover the money paid.

ROBBERS KILL ONE; ARE TAKEN.

Suspected of a jewelry store burglary which occurred in Ypsilanti, Mich., the other night, two men who were taken into custody by the baggageman and ticket clerk at the Michigan Central depot there, drew revolvers and fought a desperate battle for their liberty. Baggageman Henry C. Miner was killed, Ticket Clerk Morgan Emmett was shot through the chest and probably fatally wounded and one of the suspects was shot in the leg. Three men are under arrest, their names being given as Robert McCormick of Detroit, formerly of Ypsilanti; "Winkie," a Detroit character, who is shot in the leg, and Carl Billings of Detroit, who is said to have accompanied the other two to Ypsilanti, but parted company with them before the burglary.

WERNERS ASK RECEIVERS.

$2,000,000 Publishing House Says Obligations Cannot Be Met.

The Werner Company, a $2,000,000 Akron (Ohio) book publishing and lithographing house, was thrown into a receivership in the United States District Court in Cleveland. Paul E. Werner and Edward P. Werner, holders of the majority of stock, asked for the appointment. Judge R. W. Taylor named the Superior Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland as receiver. The Werners assert the company is solvent, but recite that it cannot meet urgent present obligations. The company employs 700 people, produces an output yearly of $1,500,000 and spends $150,000 annually in advertising.

Mother Superior Murdered.

Sister Bernade Indave, mother superior of a Spanish benevolent institution in Mexico City, was shot and killed by Antonio Nadal Rius, reported to be an anarchist. The man had been cared for in the home and after the noon meal was told that he could no longer remain there, as it was known he had obtained work.

Burning Snow Fatal to Child.

Burning snow—the artificial Christmas tree variety—caused the death of Julia Karll, a 9-year-old Harlem girl. Julia was lighting her tree when a match dropped into a box of fluffy imitation snow. Her clothing caught fire and she died.

Mrs. John Wilson is dead at Traer, Iowa, aged 90. Mrs. Wilson was the stepmother of James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington.

The Week in Congress

The Senate Thursday was deeply stirred by the reading of a letter from Chief Forester Pinchot to Senator Dolliver warmly defending L. R. Glavis and Mr. Price, and Mr. Shaw, the minor officials connected with the Alaska coal lands cases, and upholding the criticisms of Secretary Ballinger. Mr. Pinchot went so far as to intimate that President Taft himself had acted under a misapprehension. The President's message transmitting Attorney General Wickersham's report defending Mr. Ballinger was received and the report was referred to the Committee on Public Lands. Senator Jones' resolution for investigation into this case was referred to the same committee. The Senate adjourned until Monday. In the House a resolution was adopted asking the revenue cutter service to show how much money had been spent in the recent search for John Jacob Astor's yacht Nourmahal. A resolution was introduced providing for a laboratory to study criminology. After declining to enter upon discussion of the joint resolution introduced by Mr. Humphrey the House adjourned.

The Senate was not in session Friday. In the House President Taft's special message recommending the curbing of the trusts and the regulation of railroads was received and read. The so-called "insurgent" Republicans won a victory over the conservative wing of the party, when 26 of them voted with the Democrats to take from the Speaker the right to name the House members of a joint committee that is to investigate Secretary Ballinger and Forester Pinchot. The vote stood 149 to 146.

The Senate was not in session Saturday. In the general debate on the army appropriation bill Representative Hull, of Iowa, chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, explained in the House that the bill carried an appropriation of $55,212,718 for the maintenance of the army in 1911, and stated that the estimates had been pared to the bone. Mr. Bartholdt indicated he would offer an amendment providing for the restoration of the army canteen. Mr. Kustermann, of Wisconsin, spoke in opposition to ship subsidy legislation. Mr. Smith, of California, spoke in opposition to the government exercising control over water power sites in the West. Mr. Goulden, of New York, spoke in favor of deeper water ways. Mr. Henry, of Texas, took the Republicans severely to task for violating the party's pledges in failing to give the country "revision downward." Adjourned until Monday.

The Senate, Monday, adopted unanimously the joint resolution providing for the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation, amended so as to let the House elect, instead of the speaker appoint, the members of the House Committee, thus preventing a reopening of the fight on Speaker Cannon. The bill relieving Assistant Treasurer Boldenweck of responsibility for the $173,000 Chicago subway theft was passed. President Taft's railroad and anti-trust message was read as a special compliment. The House almost concluded consideration of the army appropriation bill. Mr. Mann's amendment to cut the $1,300,000 appropriation for national guard encampments to $1,000,000 was defeated after a lively debate. Mr. Townsend introduced the administration bill amending the interstate commerce law. Mr. Selzer introduced a joint resolution recognizing General Estrada as president of the "legitimate government" of Nicaragua.

That the committee of the Senate have not taken up the work of the session in earnest was made evident Tuesday when, after a sitting of fifty-five minutes, the calendar was exhausted, and it became necessary for the Senate to adjourn for the day. After passing the army appropriation bill, carrying the sum of $95,200,000 for the maintenance of the army during the fiscal year of 1911, the House proceeded to consideration of one of the so-called "white slave" bills. Opposition developed to that portion of the measure reported by the immigration committee which makes it a felony for any person to assist another to go from one state to another for the purpose of engaging in prostitution. It was contended by Representatives Bartlett, of Georgia; Goebel, of Ohio, and Richardson, of Alabama, that such action would be an encroachment upon state's rights, as under the Constitution each state had the sole power to regulate its own morals. The bill still was under consideration when the House adjourned.

SHORT NEWS NOTES.

Five deaths resulted from the inauguration of the ice fishing season in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The farm value of the grain alone of the corn crop in our country is more than twice the value of the cotton crop, seed and lint included. If the value of the fodder on 100,000,000 acres of corn were added to the value of the grain the total would prove beyond a doubt that corn is king of our agricultural empire.

Sleeping with Feet Raised.

Among the pernicious things that we have all been doing without knowing it is sleeping with a pillow under our heads. No longer if we value health and happiness may we bury our weary heads in these soft and soothing depths. It is the feet that want elevation, not the head, says a German doctor, and a pillow isn't big enough to raise them to the required height. The doctor has the foot end of his bed elevated about eight inches and says that in this position his circulation is better and that his brain and nerves have profited thereby.

Stops Lameness

Much of the chronic lameness in horses is due to neglect.

See that your horse is not allowed to go lame. Keep Sloan's Liniment on hand and apply at the first sign of stiffness. It's wonderfully penetrating — goes right to the spot — relieves the soreness — limbers up the joints and makes the muscles elastic and pliant.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. G. T. Roberts of Reseca, Ga., R.F.D. No. 1, Box 43, writes:—"I have used your Liniment on a horse for sweeney and effected a thorough cure. I also removed a spavin on a mule. This spavin was as large as a guinea egg. In my estimation the best remedy for lameness and soreness is

Sloan's Liniment

Mr. H. M. Gibbs, of Lawrence, Kans., R.F.D. No. 3, writes:—"Your Liniment is the best that I have ever used. I had a mare with an abscess on her neck and one 50c. bottle of Sloan's Liniment entirely cured her. I keep it around all the time for galls and small swellings and for everything about the stock."

Sloan's Liniment will kill a spavin, curb or splint, reduce wind puffs and swollen joints, and is a sure and speedy remedy for fistula, sweeney, founder and thrush.

As ever when she was with me, my eyes were devouring her; and at the sigh and the trembling of the sweet lips in sympathy I found that curious love-madness coming upon me again. Then I saw that I must straightway dig some chasm impassable between this woman and me, as I should hope to be loyal to my friend. So I said: "He loves you well, Mistress Margery."

"Oh, you do amuse me mightily. But you are not to think that no one has seen the great world save only yourself. What would you say if I should tell you that I, too, have seen your London, and even your Paris?"

How is it that love transforms the once contemptible into a thing most highly to be prized? My eight years of campaigning on the Continent had given me the French speech, or so much of it as the clumsy tongue of me could master, and I had always held it in hearty English scorn. Yet now I was eager enough to speak it with her, and to take as my very own the little cry of joy wherewith she welcomed my hesitant mouthing of it.

From that we fell to talking in her mother's tongue of the hardships of the Huguenot emigrants, and when I looked not at her I could speak in terms dispassionate and cool of this or aught else; and when I looked upon her my heart beat faster and my blood leaped quickly, and I knew not always what it was I said.

After a time—'twas when Darius fetched me my supper and the candles—she went away; and so ended a day which saw the beginning of a struggle fiercer than any the turbaned Turk had ever given me. For when I had eaten, and was alone with time to think, I knew well that I loved this woman and should always love her; this in spite of honor, or loyalty to Richard Jennifer, or any other thing in heaven or earth.

CHAPTER V.

One morning in the summer third of June my lady came early and surprised me at pacing pack and forth. Whereat she scolded me as was her wont when I grew restive.

"Little one," I said, "for their own purposes my enemies have passed the word that I am here as the Baron de Kalb's paid spy. That is no mistake; 'tis a lie cut out of whole cloth. I came here straight from New Berne, and back of that from London and the Continent, and scarcely know the buff and blue by sight. But I am Carolina born, dear lady; and this King George's Governor hanged my father.

"Will you raise a band of rebels and come and take your own again?"

"You know I will not," I protested, gravely.

"And yet I fear that this is what my father fears. Surely there is cause enough," she added.

"Nay, you have changed all that, dear lady. Truly, I did at first fly out at him and all concerned for what has made me a poor pensioner in my father's house—or rather in the house that was my father's. But that was while the hurt was new. I have been a soldier of fortune too long to think overmuch of the loss of Appleby Hundred. 'Twas my father's, certainly; but 'twas never mine."

"And yet—and yet it should be yours, John Ireton." She said it bravely, with uplifted face and eloquent eyes that one who ran might read.

"'Tis good and true of you to say so, little one; but there be two sides to that, as well. So my father's acres come at last to you and Richard Jennifer, I shall be well content, I do assure you, Margery."

She sprang from her low seat and went to stand in the window-bay. After a time she turned and faced me once gain, and the warm blood was in cheek and neck, and there was a soft light in her eyes to make them shine like stars.

"Then you would have me marry Richard Jennifer?" she asked.

'Twas but a little word that honor bade me say, and yet it choked me and I could not say it.

"Dick would have you, Margery; and Dick is my dear friend—as I am his."

She heard the clink of horseshoes on the gravel and turned, signing to me for silence while she looked below. The window overhung the entrance on that side, and through the opened air-casement I heard some babblement of voices, though not the words.

"I must tell you," she said, "'tis now two weeks and more since Sir Francis Falconnet asked me to marry him."

And with these bitterest of all words to her leave-taking, she left me to endure as best I might the torment they had lighted for me.

It was full two days after the coming of the baronet and the factor-lawyer Pengarvin before I saw my lady's face near-hand again, and sometimes I was glad for Richard Jennifer's sake. I knew Sir Francis and the lawyer still lingered on at Appleby Hundred—indeed, I saw them daily from my window—and Darius would be telling me that they waited upon the coming of some courier from the south. I saw him walk abroad with Margery on his arm, pacing back and forth beneath the oaks and bending low to catch her lightest word with grave and courtly deference.

Brave deeds were to the fore, it seemed. At Ramsour's Mill, a few miles north and west, some little handful of determined patriots had bested thrice their number of king's artizans, and that without a leader bigger than a county colonel. Lord Rawdon, in command of Lord Cornwallis's van, had come as far as Waxhaw Creek, but, being unsupported, had withdrawn to Hanging Rock. Our Mr. Rutherford was on his way to the Forks of Yadkin to engage the Tories gathering under Colonel Bryan. As yet, it seemed, we had no force of any consequence to take the field against Cornwallis, though there were flying rumors of an army marching from Virginia, with a new-appointed general at its head.

It was fully dark when I had finished a plan of escape. There was the hazard of the weapon-getting. With full-blood health and strength I might have gone bare-handed; but as it was, I feared to take the chance. So with a candle I went a-prowling in the deep drawers of the old oaken clothes-press and in the escritoire which once had been my mother's and found no weapon bigger than a hairpin.

Taking post in the deep bay of the window, I set myself to watch for the lighting of the great room at the front. This had two windows on my side, and while I could not see them, I knew that I should see the sheen of light upon the lawn.

It must have been an hour or more before the sound of distance-muffled hoofbeats on the road broke in upon the chirping silence of the night. I looked and listened, straining eye and ear, hearing but little and seeing less until three shadowy horsemen issued from the curtain-wall of black beneath my window. There were sword-clankings as of armed men dismounting, and then a few low-voiced words of welcome. Followed quickly the closing of the door and silence; and when my eyes grew once again accustomed to the gloom, I saw below the horses standing head to head, and in the midst a man to hold them.

I swung the casement noiselessly and clambered out, with hand and foot in proper hold as if those youthful flittings of my boyhood days had been but yesternight. A breathless minute later I was down and afoot on solid ground; and then a thing chanced which I would had not. The man whom I had called a servant turned and saw me.

"Halt! Who goes there?" he cried.

"A friend," said I, between my wishings for a weapon. For this servant of my prefigurings proved to be a trooper, booted, spurred and armed.

"I think you lie," he said; and after that he said no more, for he was down among the horses' hoofs and I upon him, kneeling hard to scant his breath for shoutings.

It grieves me now through all these years to think that I did kneel too hard upon this man. He was no enemy of mine, and did but do his duty. But he would fight or die, and I must fight or die; and so it ended as such strivings will, with some grim crackling of ribs—and when I rose he rose not with me.

I stayed to knot the bridle reins upon his arm to make it plain that he had fallen at his post. That done, I took his sword as surer for my purpose than a pistol; and hugging the deepest shadow of the wall, approached the nearer window. It was open wide, for the night was sultry warm.

I drew myself by inches to the casement, which was high, finding some foothold in the wall; and when I looked within I saw a table, and round it five men lounging at their ease. Of these five two, the baronet and the lawyer, were known to me, and I have made known to you. A third I guessed for Gilbert Stair. The other two were strangers.

CHAPTER VI.

Seeing that I had taken a man's life for the chance of looking in upon a drinking bout, I went aghast and would have fled for very shame had not I heard a mention of my name. It was one of the late-comers who spoke it, a seasoned soldier by his look and garb.

"You say you've hanged this Captain Ireton? Who may he be? Surely not old Roger's son?"

"The same," said the baronet, shortly.

"But how came he here? The last I knew of him he was a lieutenant in the Royal Scots."

"So he was. But afterward he cut the service and levanted to the Continent."

"What brought him over-seas, Sir Francis?"

"What was it, think you, Mr. Stair?" asked Falconnet, passing the question on.

At this they all looked to the master of Appleby Hundred, and I looked, too. He was not the man I should have hit upon in any throng as the reaver of my father's estate; still less the man who might be Margery's father. He had the face of all the Stairs of Ballantrae without its simple Scottish ruggedness; a sort of weasel face it was, with pale-gray eyes that had a trick of shifty dodging, and deep-furrowed about the mouth and chin with lines that spoke of indecision.

"I know not why he came—how should I know?" he quavered. "Appleby Hundred is mine—mine, I tell you! His title was well hanged on a tree with his rebel father!"

A laugh uproarious from the three soldiers greeted his petulant outburst; after which the baronet enlightened the others.

"As you know, Captain John, Appleby Hundred once belonged to the rebel Roger Ireton, and Mr. Stair here holds but a confiscator's title. 'Tis likely the son heard of the war and thought he stood some chance to come into his own again."

"Oh, aye; sure enough," quoth the elder officer. "Of course he promptly 'listed with the rebels when he came? Trust Roger Ireton's son for that."

My baronet wagged his head assentingly to this; then clinched the lie on words.

"Of course; we have his commission. He is on De Kalb's staff, 'detached for special duty.'"

"A spy!" roared the jester. "And yet you haven't hanged him!"

Sir Francis shrugged like any Frenchman. "All in good time, my dear Captain. There were reasons why I did not care to knot the rope myself. Besides, we had a little disagreement years agone across the water; 'twas about a woman. He was keen upon me for satisfaction in this old quarrel, and I gave it him, thinking he'd hang the easier for a little blooding first."

Here the factor-lawyer cut in anxiously. "But you will hang him, Sir Francis? You've promised that, you know."

I did not hate my enemy the more because he turned a shoulder to this little bloodhound and quite ignored the interruption.

"So we fought it out one morning in Mr. Stair's wood-field, and he had what he came for. Not to give him a chance to escape, we brought him here, and as soon as he is fit to ride I'll send him to the colonel. Tarleton will give him a short thrift, I promise you, and then"—this to the master of Appleby Hundred—"then your title will be well quieted, Mr. Stair."

Having thus disposed of me, they came to the graver business of the moment, with a toast to lay the dust before it. It was Falconnet who gave the toast.

"Here's to our redskins and their king—How do you call him, Captain Stuart?"

"Oconostota is the Cherokee of it, though on the border they know him better as 'Old Hop.'"

They discussed a plot to make the blood run cold in my veins, or in the veins of any man who knew the cruel temper of these savages; and when I thought upon the fate of my poor countrymen beyond the mountains, I saw what lay before me. The settlers must be warned in time to fight or fly.

But while I listened, with every faculty alert to reckon with the task of rescue, I take no shame in saying that the problem balked me. Lacking the strength to mount and ride in my own proper person, there was nothing for it but to find a messenger; and would would he be in a region at the moment distraught with war's alarums, and needing every man for self-defense?

At that, I thought of Jennifer? True, he was wounded, too; but he would know how best to pass the word to those in peril. I made full sure he'd find a way if I could reach him; and when I had it simmered down to this, the problem simplified itself. I must have speech with Dick before the night was out, though I should have to crawl on hands and knees the half-score miles to Jennifer House.

The plotters had marked out the details of their campaign on a sheet of parchment. I hoped to make a shift to rob them of this map. It was a desperate chance, but in the frenzy of the moment I resolved to take it. Gilbert Stair and the lawyer sat fair across from me. Of the trio at the table's end, the baronet and the captain had their backs to me. The younger officer sat across, and he was staring broadly at my window.

My one hope hinged upon the boldness of a dash. If I could spring within and sweep the two candle-sticks from the table, there was a chance that I might snatch the parchment in the darkness and confusion and escape as I had come.

"It's an Ill Wind."

Some time ago there was a flood in British Columbia. An old fellow who had lost nearly everything he possessed was sitting on the roof of his house as it floated along when a boat approached.

"Hello, John!"

"Hello, Dave!"

"Are your fowls all washed away, John?"

"Yes, but the ducks can swim," replied the old man.

"Apple trees gone?"

"Well, they said the crop would be a failure, anyhow."

"I see the flood's away above your window."

Her Indorsement.

"I want to get this check cashed," said the fair young matron, appearing at the window of the paying teller.

"Yes, madam. You must indorse it, though," explained the teller.

"Why, my husband sent it to me. He is away on business," she said.

"Yes, madam. Just indorse it—sign it on the back, so we will know and your husband will know we paid it to you."

She went to the desk against the wall, and in a few moments presented the check triumphant, having written on its back:

"Your loving wife, Edith."

GIRL MOST TRAVELED CHILD.

Baby Has Covered 1,000 Miles for Each Month of Her Age.

Six thousand nine hundred and forty-five miles within a period of thirty days is the record made by little Nancy L. Fitch, the 6-months-old child of W. E. Fitch, western passenger agent of the Iron Mountain Railway, with headquarters in this city.

During the last thirty days Mr. and Mrs. Fitch decided to visit New York and the baby went along with them. They were gone ten days, and on their return the youngster had traveled a distance of 4,000 miles for the round trip.

A few days later Mr. Fitch was called on to attend the traveling passenger agents' convention to be held at Chicago, and he accordingly packed up wife and baby for another long journey. This time the baby had traveled a total of 2,414 miles for the round trip.

On their return from Chicago, Mrs. Fitch was anxious to visit the parents of Mr. Fitch at Mercedes, and baby was scheduled for another trip of 522 miles for the round trip in order to see its grandparents.

Railway men of the State who have heard of the remarkable trip made by the child say that it is the most traveled youngster in the world and has broken all previous records for one so young.

This record is based on the fact that the little girl, who is only six months of age, has made an average of over 1,000 miles for each month since it was born, or a total of 6,954 miles traveled.

Mr. Fitch is proud of the feat accomplished by his little daughter, and says that if the child does not beat other children for age, it certainly will for the distance traveled within a period of thirty days.

A WOMAN DOCTOR

Was Quick to See That Coffee Was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110. I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day a woman doctor told me to use Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned.

"So I began to drink Postum and I gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and continued to gain, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough to get the coffee poison out of my system.

"Since I began to use Postum I can gladly say that I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that made me well. Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years."

The Road to Fame.

A Southerner, noted for the liberality of his tips, stopped at a Baltimore hotel where colored porters predominated. His name was speedily known to every member of the serving fraternity, and his every wish anticipated. Soon after his arrival he sent his card to a friend who made his home in the hotel, but whose temperament happened to be quite the opposite of that of his open-handed caller—retiring, not given to "tipping," or any other form of sociability, and who therefore lived almost unknown to those about him.

The old "darky" who received the card studied it for a full minute.

"Scuse me, colonel," he said, "but I don't bleebe nobody by dat name come here dis mawning."

"This morning!" returned the other. "Of course not! Mr. Blank has lived here for months. You know my name well enough, and I haven't been here a day. Do you mean to say you can't remember a man who has made his home here since some time last winter?"

"Scuse me, colonel, sah," began the old man, deferentially, "but you must know, sah"—as if uttering the subtlest compliment—"dat dere's gemmans what can make demselves more notorious in one day, sah, dan odder gemmans does in a year, sah!"

Paul Witstach, the brilliant playwright, author and Mansfield authority, said of Mr. Mansfield at a dinner in New York:

"Mr. Mansfield's dignity was very great. He conducted himself toward others in a dignified way. He expected others to conduct themselves toward him in like manner. But once, in Chicago, Mr. Mansfield was touched on the raw by a manager. It was the first night of a Cyrano de Bergerac tour. The great actor, his delicate nerves aquiver, was making up with his dresser's help, when the manager rushed into the dressing room without knocking, slapped Mr. Mansfield heartily on the back and shouted:

"'The house is packed. There ain't even no more standin' room. Now, Dick, old man, sail in and show 'em what yer made of.'

"The dresser used to say if he hadn't hustled that manager out, Cyrano would have run him through with his sword."

The Cynics.

Cynics was the name applied to a school of philosophers founded by Antisthenes, a pupil of Socrates. The main tenet of the extreme cynics was that civilization is a curse, and true happiness can be obtained only by gratifying the most primary physical appetites which man has in common with brutes. The general attitude of the cynics as distinguished from that of the stoics, who regarded everything in the external world with indifference, was one of contempt. They were not an important philosophical school numerically, but attracted attention largely by their eccentricities and insolence. On account of their contempt for refinement their name came subsequently to be applied to any one who takes a mean view of human life. —New York American.

St. Joe will have a Farmers' Institute, February 7 and 8.

Miss Opal Koch is again on the sick list and is unable to attend school.

Wm. Anten and daughter Verl, of Elk Rapids, Mich., were Wednesday and Thursday guests of J. C. Hull and other relatives, last week.

Mr. Britton Freeburn is now located in Arizona after a few weeks stay in Colorado. He reported extremely cold weather in Colorado.

Mr. Chas. Jackson of Concord, is a new reader of THE NEWS. We are glad to welcome him and with this issue his name goes down on our large list of readers.

Mrs. Willis Baker ordered THE NEWS sent to Orm Sailer at Indianapolis for a year. Mrs Baker appreciates our efforts in giving our readers a good local paper and desires that others may know what is going on here.

Preaching Sunday evening at the M. P. church. Come.

Henry Milliman was the guest of St. Joe relatives, Sunday.

Did you drop any items into that "News" box at the post office?

Byron Widney and wife and S. L. Widney spent Sunday at S. H. Maurer's.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank White visited Mrs. White's parents at Hicksville, Sunday.

If some of our readers do not square their accounts with us, they will no doubt hear from us soon.

Mrs. Cora Smith and son Harry, of East Auburn, were guests of the former's mother, Mrs. Nancy Widney and family over Sunday.

We understand that The Dawn is going to be moved to Auburn and will be issued daily as a democratic paper. Improvements will be made that is necessary for the issuing of such a paper. The Dawn is the only paper in the county that espoused the "wet" side of the local option election, and its views so disgusted the public in general that it is our opinion now that very little attention will be given it in the election of 1910. The people don't stand for such things.

Have you a weak throat? If so, you cannot be too careful. You cannot begin treatment too early. Each cold makes you more liable to another, and the last is always the harder to cure. If you will take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy at the outset you will be saved much trouble. Sold by H. L. Dunkel, St Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

Protect your own town and thereby show that you are in favor of protection. If protection is good for the nation it is good for the town. As townspeople we should favor our town above every other, as the growth and development of it is what will enhance the value of all property both in and about it. Then buy your dry goods, groceries, hardware furniture, etc., at home; have your printing, blacksmithing, and shoe-making done at home, patronize home in every instance that you can. The success of our merchants and mechanics means new business houses and residences, additional demands for labor of various kinds. To the farmer a first class town affords a better market for his grain, a better trading point, and such a town is bound to increase the value of his land. Unquestionable "in union there is great strength." Let us protect our town.

Herbert S. Shirley of Toledo, was the guest of Dr. Bowmans', a few days last week.

M. T. Bishop and wife, J. D. Leighty and Sam Widney were at Auburn, last Wednesday.

Harry Milliman spent a few days last week, at Lafayette and South Bend looking up a location.

Marshall Bleeks has been busily engaged in cleaning crossings the past week. That's what we need.

The democrats of Concord township will meet in St. Joe, next Saturday afternoon, to elect precinct committeemen. All democrats are urged to be present. Committee.

Groundhog day will soon be here and if on that occasion the pesky varmint comes out and sees his shadow we shall simply follow him into his hole and murder him. Enough winter is enough.

Why not use envelopes with your name and address printed in one corner? Your letters will not then get lost, and besides it looks more business-like and makes a good impression on those to whom you write. We print 500 for $1 50 or 100 for 50c.

For over a week Wm. Curie had a drove of hogs in the old lumber shed near the stock yards and on Thursday morning he transferred them to the stock yard and within fifteen minutes the sheds fell in, caused by the great amount of snow that had collected on the roof. It was a narrow escape and Mr. Curie no doubt saved many dollars by taking the hogs out when he did.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a very valuable medicine for throat and lung troubles, quickly relieves and cures painful breathing and a dangerously sounding cough which indicates congested lungs. Sold by H. L. Dunkel, St. Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

John U. Koch has by his attorney, E. D. Dunten, filed a suit against the Wabash Railway company, in which he demands judgment in the sum of $500 for damage rendered to his property, alleged to have originated from a Wabash engine. The complainant alleges that on November 18, 1908, sparks from an engine belonging to the company ignited combustible material on their right-of-way and extended to his farm, destroying two hundred feet of line fence and burning an acre of muck land to a depth of six inches, rendering the same utterly valueless.—Courier.

Not a Happy Thought.

Evidently the proposal to pass a law raising the rates of postage on newspapers and magazines has not struck a very popular chord. Speaking of this project, the Pomeroy (O.) Independent says.

"Editors can no longer get deadhead passes on the railroads or extend credit to their honest subscribers, and now President Taft wants congress to pass a law raising the rates of postage on newspapers and magazines. Between Uncle Sam and the state legislatures the man behind the pencil is having about as much show as a countryman in the bad lands. Editor Sibley of the Gallipolis (O.) Tribune puts it right when he says that if the president would use his large brain to work on a plan to keep the railroads from soaking the goverment on mail carrying contracts he would stop a more prodigious graft than that enjoyed by the country publisher who gets his papers carried for a cent a pound."

The democratic county chairmanship is attracting considerable attention among politicians. Previous to the mass convention held here December 31, the names of Mr. Sharpless and Mr. Kircher of Garrett, had only been mentioned. At this time they launched the candidacy of Mr. Sharpless for district chairman thus sidetracking him for county chairman. Mr. Kircher's friends hoped this would settle the matter but other complications are presenting themselves other candidates are being discussed. The names of Wm. Curie of St. Joe, and W. H. Leas of Waterloo, are spoken of, Frank Seller of this city may be a candidate. He is now looking over the field with a view of entering the race if he finds things favorable.

It seems at present to be an uncertainty where the plum will fall.—Auburn Dispatch. The whole matter will be settled as soon as the committeeman are selected, which will be Saturday of this week. THE NEWS will be loyal to her town and say that Curie is the man for the place.

Hints for Stock Owners

The best feeds are clover hay, a mixture of oats, wheat bran, linseed-meal and roots.

The sheep barn must be dry and well ventilated. Foul odors and too much heat bring on pneumonia.

All straw, stalks, etc., used for litter in the sheep barn should be run through a cutter to increase the power of absorption.

A juicy wether hung up in a cold, dry place will provide choice dinners for the family until it is used up. Don't forget to have mashed turnips and butter with it.

That nice ewe is just as nice for you to keep as she is for the man who likes the looks of her to buy. Unless you are over-stocked, keep her; and if you are, better sell some other sheep.

A good rack for feeding sheep can be made by almost any sensible farmer. About all that is needed is a support for the hay so that it shall not fall to the ground and be wasted and also be handy for the sheep to get at.

Don't Get a Divorce.

A western judge granted a divorce on account of ill-temper and bad breath. Dr. King's New Life Pills would have prevented it. They cure Constipation, causing bad breath and Liver Trouble the ill-temper, dispel colds, banish headaches, conquer chills. 25c. at H. L. Dunkel's.

Mrs. Maggie Porter of near Leo, spent Sunday with Raymond Rhoads and family.

Eva Jane Reed and family and James Furnish and son, David, were Sunday guests of Lydia Jane Steward.

Wm. Rhoads returned from the hospital at Wayne last Saturday evening, with his condition much improved and he seems to be getting along fine.

Our farmer friends could assist in making THE NEWS more interesting if they would hand in bits of news occasionally. It will cost you nothing and will help us.

Burney Rhoads purchased the Frank Boger farm across the river of 74 acres last week. He expects to repair and make such changes as necessary to make the farm more valuable.

Miss Jennie Steward was compelled to loose last week's school on account of sickness. After going to Butler Sunday evening she became ill and on Monday, Miss Arminta was called to go and care for her. The physician said she had a severe attack of tonsilitis.

Mr. Henry Beams reports a very busy week, last week, with his undertaking department. On Monday he buried Mrs. Hutchinson. Wednesday morning he was called to Auburn by the death of Mrs. Bowen which was caused by water tumor. She was a lady of about 67 years. The funeral services were conducted from the Maurer church, Friday, and burial at Leo. Another was that of Chauncey Depew, 18, who died with consumption, southwest of here. Funeral at Cedar Chapel, Friday, Rev. Erick officiating. Master Frank Stuckey of near Leo was taken Home by membranous croup. He was three years of age. Burial took place at the Schlatter cemetery near the Viberg church.

Some of our citizens became alarmed last Friday at different times during the night by a flash light appearing in several windows. At about 1:00 o'clock Wm. Moore of west of here was aroused from his sleep by a light, which he supposed was caused by a passerby. In a moment the light appeared in another window and he immediately arose and when he appeared at the window the light was thrown into his face, which blinded him. In a short time the same light appeared at the house across the road and as it were the young man was just coming home and he saw two men making their escape. No cause for such actions can be accounted for unless it was some party trying to locate something. As Mr. Morr has a prize horse it was thought the men were attempting to locate the animal. Its pretty risky business and a shot would serve the culprets right.

Rink Saturday night.

Mary A. Shutt was at Wayne, Monday.

Take advantage of Beams' discount sale.

The young people enjoyed a skate at the St. Joe rink, Friday evening.

Mrs. Hattie Beams is again at work in the store after a couple of weeks illness.

The elevator shipped a car load of corn last week, and Mr. Steward reports having disposed of five car load of grain since his opening day.

Mrs. Chas. Lake is still numbered among the sick. Mrs. H. H. Grubb has been assisting in caring for her for a few weeks. She seems to improve very slowly.

Rev. Hitchner of Xenia, Ohio, was given a large audience at the Lutheran church, Sunday morning, and all seemed to be well pleased with the sermon and the appearance of the gentlemen. He preached in the evening at St. Joe to a fair sized audience.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy never disappoints those who use it for obstinate coughs, colds and irritations of the throat and lungs. It stands unrivalled as a remedy for all throat and lung diseases. Sold by H. L. Dunkel, St. Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

In some way the item regarding the fact that J. S. Hollabaugh and wife were rejoicing over the new girl that had come to brighten their home, had been overlooked by our Spencerville correspondents and we desire to herald the glad news although somewhat late.

A baby girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. U. Bowser, last Tuesday. Mrs. Bowser has taken a backset and is in a very serious condition, starting from having a severe chill. Drs. Bowman and Shook were called and all that physicians can do is being done for her. It is hoped that she may recover.

Sickness seems to prevail in many of our homes. Those who have been on the sick list for some time are: Mrs. Sam Steward, Fred Steward, Sam Markle, Mrs. Henry Murray and Mrs. Chas. Scott. The complaint seems to be general and is in the form of a fever, however, none are serious. Mrs. Murray has been a sufferer of lung trouble and is much better at this writing.

Telephone News

Hello—what's up? An awful accident caused by the bus team running away. Sled torn all to pieces, the extent of injuries one hundred per cent. So spread the news over the wires before any damage was really done.

The facts of the accident are that the driver and Miss Grace Shaner were driving through the south half of the new road and as it was hilly and the sled tongue being low the double trees struck the horses heels when the sled slipped up. The brown horse kicked the double trees off and they struck the hokes, this caused them to start. The driver braced himself and held the sled into position until they reached the north half of the new road. Here the tongue slipped to the ground, and the sudden stop threw the occupants out. The lines in some way caught one of the driver's feet and drug him quite a distance. The horses stopped by running against a tree.

The results were, the harness somewhat torn, the boy and girl a little sore next day, the sled went to protracted meeting that night.

Word has gone broadcast that this is a runaway team. But the horse which became unmanagable was the family horse and never did an unkind act before. Where is a man who would knowingly put a runaway team on a bus where seventeen little lives would at any moment be rushed into eternity? No one unless it would be the man who saw the accident and did not lend a helping hand or even inquire as to the occupants welfare.

Of course if a man had been at the lines it would have been an accident but as it was a boy it was a runaway. But I can truthfully say that not one in a dozen would have kept so level a head.

Not one of the patrons have complained so far to me, and if anything goes wrong I wish they would come to me instead of our worthy trustee and neighbors.

I deem this explanation due to the public, the trustee, driver and my team.

Washington Letter

From Our Regular Correspondent.

President Taft, like his predecessor, President Roosevelt, seems to be determined to keep Congress busy the balance of this session. One of the measures that he is vigorously urging is the enactment of a law for further, more theurough and effective federal control over railroads and other great inter-state corporations.

The way our railroads have been built in the past has produced a great and lasting evil. For instance, when a road is to be built that will cost $50,000,000, a company is organized, and stock is issued to that amount and sold. Out of this $50,000,000 received from the sale of stock, about $45,000,000 goes into the pockets of the promoters, which is nothing more or less than grafting. Then the Board of Directors has to issue bonds for that $45,000,000 in order to raise money, with which to build the road. When the road is completed, it must necessarily earn enough money to pay dividends on this $50,000,000 of stock, of which 90 per cent is water, and interest on the bonds.

In order to do this, the railroad has to charge double for the passengers and freight traffic, whereas, if the road had been built honestly, it would only have to pay dividends on the stock, and could of course transport cheaply. It is the iniquitous origin of the railroads of this country that has caused the people to take such violent action against them, and for this antagonism the railroads have no one to blame but themselves.

The State of Texas has developed the best railroad system of laws of any State in the Union. When a railroad is to be built in Texas, the promoters must submit their plans to the Railroad Commission of that State, who will not permit them to issue any larger amount of stock or bonds than is necessary to build the railroad, and when the stock is sold, the proceeds of the sale must be accounted for to the Railroad Commissioners. If the Legislature of every State in the Union had passed as wise laws as the State of Texas, the railroad evil would have been very much less than it is.

President Taft wants Congress to regulate the issuance of all stocks and bonds by railroads which cross state lines, and this will include, of course, every railroad of any importance in the country.

Every individual State should see to it that when the Federal authorities take control of railroads and such things, that the authority of each State is still undisturbed, so far as controlling the railroads that come within its borders.

Secretary Root, of New York, former Secretary of State under Mr. Roosevelt, has warned the States of this Union that they should see to it that their rights are not absorbed by the Federal Government, but the two should work in harmony with each other.

The Dismissal of Pinchot.

Washington has experienced the greatest excitement of a decade, in the last few days, which was occasioned by the dismissal of Gifford Pinchot, the Chief Forester of the Government. Mr. Pinchot is one of the purest patriots that ever lived, and he has demonstrated that he is one of the wisest statesman of our age. It was he who largely originated the idea of conserving our natural resources, which were going to waste. It was at his suggestion that Mr. Roosevelt called the Conservation Congress, over which he presided, and which was addressed by himself, by J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern Railroad, Andrew Carnegie, W. J. Bryan and others. That Congress marked a new era in our national life, and in the calling of that Congress, Mr. Roosevelt freely gave the credit for the same to the great Forester, Mr. Gifford Pinchot. Mr. Pinchot has openly charged Secretary Ballinger in his administration of the Interior Department, with acting as an enemy of conservation, and has made specific and general charges against the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. Taft considered this action, on the part of Mr. Pinchot, as such an act of insubordination as to necessitate the dismissal of Mr. Pinchot, which was done.

The matter is now in the hands of Congress, and it was the purpose of Speaker Cannon to appoint a Committee to "whitewash the Secretary" of the Interior, but the insurgents in Congress, who are the Republicans of the middle west, and the solid Democratic vote over-ruled Speaker Cannon, and decided to elect the Committee who would give a thorough and honest investigation, and ascertain the facts about the Secretary of the Interior, so that the country might know the truth.

Blow to Cannon.

This is the greatest fall that Speaker Cannon has ever had since he became Speaker, and it is the first time the House ever threw him down, and it is freely predicted that his end as Speaker is in sight, and that the death knell of Cannonism has been sounded.

Gifford Pinchot for President

One effect of these proceedings has served to bring Mr. Pinchot to the front as a Republican candidate for the Presidency two years hence.

It is freely predicted on all sides that he will be a formidable power in the future. He is a man of unlimited wealth and in his valuable services to the Government, he has demonstrated the incorruptibility of his character, the honesty of his motive, the purity of his patriotism and the greatness of his statesmanship. It is further freely predicted on all sides that he would make as great a run as President Roosevelt made in 1904, and that he would carry a large block of the Southern States, which would recompense for a number of the big States in the middle West, which will very likely be lost to the Republican party in the next election on account of the injustice and trickery of the last Tariff bill.

President Helps Orphans.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of The Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this Institution for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth." It invigorates the vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. To strengthen and build up thin, pale, weak children or run-down people it has no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c at H. L. Dunkel's.

JUST PLAIN COMMON SENSE

It dosen't take an expert mechanical engineer to recognize the superiority of the Improved 1910 De Laval Cream Separator. Plain common sense will do that. Consider each and every part of the machine and not one single deceptive, freakish or non-sensical feature will be found.

At the top you find the DeLaval seamless, sanitary, globe-shaped supply can,—the most practical can ever designed for the purpose. Next comes the simple, compact, center-balanced De Laval separating bowl, extremely convenient to handle and washed as easily as a tea-cup. Inside the bowl you see the patented De Laval "Split-Wing-Disc" system of construction, which is common sense itself and today generally recognized as the only correct method of bowl construction. Next comes the bowl spindle, entirely separate and detached from the bowl, but which may be quickly and easily taken from the machine if desired. Supporting the bowl spindle top and bottom are the special De Laval bearings, ideally efficient and simple. Next you see the remarkably simple De Laval gearing consisting of only three wheels, which are so strong and so nicely adjusted that they are practically everlasting under daily use. You find no ball bearings or complicated nests of delicate gear wheels, and the whole machine may be completely unassembled by anyone within five minutes time.

The frame of the De Laval is remarkably artistic and convenient. It has adjustable shelves for the cream and skimmilk receptacles and a special drip shelf is a part of the frame, which prevents drippings of oil or milk from running to the floor. The base of the machine is open so that the floor beneath may be kept clean. Inside and out the 1910 De Laval machine is the result of merely plain common mechanical sense,

70 Years with Coughs

We have had nearly seventy years of experience with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. That makes us have great confidence in it for coughs, colds, bronchitis, weak throats, and weak lungs. Ask your own doctor what experience he has had with it. He knows. He can advise you wisely. Keep in close touch with your family physician. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Be well; be strong. You cannot if your bowels are constipated. The best laxative is Ayer's Pills, all vegetable. Ask your doctor if he agrees with us. Do as he says.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

A SUFFICIENT MOTIVE.

By Henry F. Cope.

One characteristic will certainly invariably mark the religion of the future. It will have, and, indeed, largely it will be, a passion for people, a love of humanity. Its ultimate word will be love, not a mawkish sentimentality, but an earnest striving after the highest and best in condition and character for all our fellows.

Religion will be the poetry and idealism of our modern social thinking. It will give to the barren, dried bones of the science of sociology the quickening breath of a mighty emotion; it will compel it with a sweep of passionate feeling and convert it from the dead theories and classified data to a regenerating saving power.

The religion that is all emotion, all feeling, is a paralyzing delusion. But the religion that is without feeling is a dead, helpless, deadening thing. It is worthless to us and to our world unless it have in it those ideals and principles which can awaken in us great tides of feeling, can stir our passions, kindle our enthusiasms, and claim our unreserved allegiance.

The fact that old forms of faith were philosophically absurd, historically inaccurate, and even ethically unsound makes little difference to the great mass of people so long as these faiths move their hearts, so long as they hold out hopes that awaken longing and stir up the sluggish spirit with visions of felicities to be enjoyed or of present wrongs to be righted.

The weakness of the modern and rational views of religion lies in the fact that, while they are eminently satisfactory to many thoughtful persons, especially to those of academic disposition, they seem to lack in vital significance to the many; they offer no great appealing program of action; they invite neither indignation, aspiration, nor endeavor.

You will never get a living religion so long as you limit it to reason alone, for, after all, reasoning is simply the power to record and classify, examine, and analyze your impressions. We must keep our feet on the rational, but our eyes must see the inspiration, that which will awaken the life of feeling, quicken the pulse, and nerve the heart, that to which we will answer, without conscious process of reasoning, saying, this is right and nothing else will satisfy my soul.

A new note is coming into modern religion which meets that need. It is the result of our social thinking. The new faith catches its vision in a liberated, glorified, perfected humanity. It turns from disputations over an ancient literature to ask, how can we make our modern living what it ought to be? It cares only for the history that is for the sake of the humanity that is to be.

The new faith is a faith in the future. Accepting the doctrines of our slow development from lowliest beginnings, it sees in this the prophecy of our greater growth, the hope of the coming man. It argues, if we have come so far we may yet go much farther. It believes in an ideal man and an ideal humanity, not in some distant star but with us and of us here.

When you begin to think of city streets where no wail of sorrow surges, of homes where no dwarfed lives, pinched faces, and bent backs may be found; when your religion turns to wipe the tears from the faces of the children, to lift the burdens from the weak, to set the bound free, and gives eyes to the blind and heart to the fainting, you may be sure it will lay hold of the deep places in man.

Such an idealism becomes a practical working creed. One man may hold its premises in the will of a loving God and another in the upward dynamic of humanity. The premises are not so important as the conclusion, the goal. The explanations may differ, but the ideal, the hope, the aim, and the passion will be one. Men will gladly give themselves for the new heaven and the new earth as a realizable fact.

Our modern theology springs out of our humanity. We believe in a deity with the best attributes conceivable for ourselves, and we believe in a universe that will bear as its highest fruitage not angels nor harps, but man in his ripe powers and a race living together in love, harmony, and growth into greater glory. And we come to believe in a law of life in which wrong to another is the greatest sin and helpful, kindly love the fairest virtue.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

By Junius B. Remensnyder.

Days should speak and multitudes of years should teach wisdom.—Job xxxii.7.

New Year's day is like a traveler reaching a summit on his path where he surveys the road he has left behind and looks ahead to that over which he has yet to go. These epochs are momentous in every life history and no wise person will fail at these periods to take his reckoning.

Most thoughtful persons are moved at this season to make resolutions; in fact, New Year's day is like a grand bazaar day, in which various fine and beautiful resolutions are spread out to view. But, alas, how many of these are only made to be broken! We are determined to turn over a new leaf in the book of life, and yet the fair, unspotted leaf is soiled almost in the very act of turning it. What then? Shall we give up making resolutions? Not at all. All effort is fragmentary. Because purposes miscarry is no reason why we should not form them. Were every New Year's resolution to be broken we would still have lived better for making them; and some of them will be kept, while the very endeavor will have lifted us to a higher plane and increased our self-respect.

We should, most of all, ask ourselves if we have a true life aim. No man can hit the mark if he is not aiming at it. Resolve to break off bad habits. We all have our defects of disposition and character. These we cannot help. But it is our voluntary self-indulgence that makes them our masters. Now is the hour to fight them, to resist them unto blood, to break them off at once and for all.

Look on the bright side. The world is full of beauty, and life sparkles with joy to the unblurred vision. It is our gloomy spirits that distort our view. The worst evils are imagined ones that never come to pass. Let us look for love and goodness and beauty and happiness, and we will tread a fragrant, embowered way.

Let us do better in the home. It is here, where we are often most thoughtless, that we need to do our very best. More depends on the atmosphere of home than upon all else. Resolve that those who love you most and sacrifice the most for you shall see only your most pleasing side—shall have only respect, gentleness, love. Oh, how much of the recuperative power needed for the strain of life's wearing duties depends upon the tempers, manners and habits of home!

If, then, you will wear a reassuring face and keep the eager unsullied heart of a child, be strict in your judgment of yourself and kindly in your judgment of others; be more eager to praise than to blame; note the harmonies of life rather than its discords, and set your mind upon duty and God, this new year will bring you no sorrow without its comfort and over and over again it will fill your cup with blessing.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

THE ASCENDING KING.

By Christopher Wordsworth.

[This is another of Bishop Wordsworth's fine compositions. It was written to be sung on Ascension Sunday. In the opinion of many this is Wordsworth's finest work in hymody; at all events it is popular in the churches.]

See the conqueror mounts in triumph;
See the king in royal state,
Riding on the clouds, his chariot
To his heavenly palace gate!
Hark! the choirs of angel voices
Joyful alleluias sing,
And the portals high are lifted
To receive their heavenly king.

Who is this that comes in glory,
With the trump of jubilee?
Lord of battles, God of armies,
He hath gained the victory.
He who on the cross did suffer,
He who from the grave arose,
He has vanquished sin and Satan;
He by death has spoiled his foes.

Thou hast raised our human nature,
On the clouds to God's right hand;
There we sit in heavenly places,
There with thee in glory stand;
Jesus reigns, adored by angels;
Man with God is on the throne;
Mighty Lord! in thine ascension,
We by faith behold our own.

Lift us up from earth to heaven,
Give us wings of faith and love,
Gales of holy aspirations,
Wafting us to realms above;
That, with hearts and minds uplifted
We with Christ our Lord may dwell
Where he sits enthroned in glory,
In the heavenly citadel.

So at last, when he appeareth,
We from out our graves may spring,
With our youth renewed like eagles',
Flocking round our heavenly king.
Caught up on the clouds of heaven,
And may meet him in the air—
Rise to realms where he is reigning
And may reign forever there.

SERMONETTES.

BACKACHE--A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

A WARNING THAT MUST NOT BE IGNORED

Pain in the back is the kidneys' signal of distress. If this timely warning is ignored, kidney disease silently fastens its deadly grip—for kidney sickness first shows itself in pains and disorders in other parts, and the real cause is too often hidden until fatal Bright's disease or diabetes has set in. Suspect the kidneys if you are rheumatic and nervous or have lame back, painful, too frequent or scanty urination, weak heart, dizzy spells, headaches, bloating or neuralgia. What you want is a special kidney medicine—not an experiment, but one that has stood the test for years. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve weak, congested kidneys—cure backache—regulate the urine.

A KIDNEY REMEDY OF 75 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS began curing lame backs and sick kidneys 75 years ago. The demand led a nearby druggist, James Doan, to prepare it for sale. From him the magic formula passed to the present proprietors. Now as in those early days, Doan's Kidney Pills are made from only the purest drugs and are absolutely non-poisonous. They are used and praised all over the civilized world.

Doan's Kidney Pills Make Lasting Cures

Mrs. Solomon Sawyer, 420 W. Jacison St., Brazil, Ind., says: "I do not think there is a better kidney remedy on the market than Doan's Kidney Pills. I suffered from kidney and bladder trouble for seven or eight years, and there was a constant, dull pain across the small of my back which was almost unbearable. Damp weather greatly aggravated the complaint, and there were other annoying kidney disorders that made me feel miserable. My health finally became affected and the doctors seemed unable to help me. Having my attention called to Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at F. W. Schultz's drug store and had taken them only a short time when I began to improve. Before long I was free from the trouble and my kidneys were restored to a healthy condition."

The above statement was made on Sept. 15, 1906, and on Jan. 4, 1909, Mrs. Sawyer said: "I have more faith in Doan's Kidney Pills than ever. I willingly confirm the statement I gave in their favor over two years ago, as they deserve all the credit that can be given them."

Charles Hansing, 524 Bouthillier St., Galena, Ill., says: "I am only too pleased to give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement, in the hope that other kidney sufferers will profit by my experience. For a month or more I suffered from a steady, dull ache across the small of my back, and if I sat down for awhile, it was all I could do to get up. Often I was compelled to place my hands on my knees as a support, so severe was the pain in my back. I did not rest with any comfort and any sudden movement sent sharp twinges through my kidneys. After plasters, liniments and various remedies which I took had failed to help me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and the contents of two boxes effected a cure. I have never lost an opportunity of saying a good word for this medicine since."

The above statement was given in Feb., 1907, and on Mar. 31, 1909, Mr. Hansing said: "During the past two years I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills, having been free from kidney complaint. I take pleasure in confirming all I have heretofore said regarding the merit of this remedy."

Primitive Mills in Brazil.

"In the interior of Brazil a primitive method of producing cornmeal by pounding instead of grinding is practiced. The instrument, known as a 'mojollo,' works automatically and consists of a tree trunk balanced on the bank of a stream, one end of the trunk being hollowed out to form a large cup, while the other end is in the form of a pestle. Water filling the cup depresses that end of the log, whereupon the water runs out and the other end falls back to its original position, the pestle striking the corn. Some modern corn grinders have recently been introduced, but there is a good field for a very small and inexpensive grinder to take the place of the 'mojollo' in the interior, where flour mills are rare and each family grinds its own corn."

Words as They Were Pronounced In Shakespeare's Day.

The innovation of pronouncing Shakespeare's words as they were probably pronounced in his own day was carried out at a fete arranged at University College, London. The experiment inspired this comment by the Manchester Guardian:

For "one touch of nature" Shakespeare probably said "own tooch of natter," and, very much like a modern Irishman, he would say "A haste that wants discoorse of rayson." It would be "Loov's Labber's Lost" and the "Midsoommer Neecht's Drame." Scraps of "Hamlet" would sound thus:

"A haste that wants discoorse of rayson
Would haave moorned longer."
"Be thay as pure (French u) as grass (grace)."
"A broken vooice and his whole foonoction shooting (suiting)
With forms to his consayt."
"To take arms against a say of troobles."

Our ancestors of even some 150 years ago, said "Room" for Rome, "cheer" for chair, "obleeged" for obliged, "greet boul" (the "ou" as in "out") for "great bowl," and, further back, Milton would say "biling water."

WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

A COUNTRY WHOSE SOIL SPELLS WHEAT

And Out of Whose Farms Thousands Are Growing Rich

What President Taft and Others Think About Canada

Another Fat Year for the Canadian West

Our Canadian neighbors to the north are again rejoicing over an abundant harvest, and reports from reliable sources go to show that the total yield of 1909 will be far above that of any other year.

It is estimated that $100,000,000 will this year go into the pockets of the western farmers from wheat alone, another $60,000,000 from oats and barley, while returns from other crops and from stock will add $40,000,000 more. Is it any wonder then that the farmers of the Canadian West are happy?

Thousands of American farmers have settled in the above mentioned provinces during the past year; men who know the West and its possibilities, and who also know, perhaps better than any other people, the best methods for profitable farming.

President Taft said recently, in speaking of Canada:

"We have been going ahead so rapidly in our own country that our heads have been somewhat swelled with the idea that we are carrying on our shoulders all the progress there is in the world. We have not been conscious that there is on the north a young country and a young nation that is looking forward, as it well may, to a great national future. They have 7,000,000 people, but the country is still hardly scratched."

James J. Hill, speaking before the Canadian Club of Winnipeg a few days ago, said:

"I go back for 53 years, when I came west from Canada. At that time Canada had no Northwest. A young boy or man who desired to carve his own way had to cross the line, and today it may surprise you—one out of every five children born in Canada lives in the United States. Now you are playing the return match, and the Northwest is getting people from the United States very rapidly. We brought 100 land-seekers, mainly from Iowa and Southern Minnesota, last night, out of St. Paul, going to the Northwest. Now, these people have all the way from five, ten to twenty thousand dollars each, and they will make as much progress on the land in one year as any one man coming from the Continent of Europe can make, doing the best he can do, in ten, fifteen or twenty years."

It is evident from the welcome given American settlers in Canada that the Canadian people appreciate them. Writing from Southern Alberta recently, an American farmer says:

"We are giving them some new ideas about being good farmers, and they are giving us some new ideas about being good citizens. They have a law against taking liquor into the Indian reservation. One of our fellows was caught on a reservation with a bottle on him, and it cost him $50. One of the Canadian mounted police found him, and let me tell you, they find everyone who tries to go up against the laws of the country.

On Saturday night every bar-room is closed at exactly 7 o'clock. Why? Because it is the law, and it's the same with every other law. There isn't a bad man in the whole district, and a woman can come home from town to the farm at midnight, if she wants to, alone. That's Canada's idea how to run a frontier; they have certainly taught us a lot.

On the other hand, we are running their farms for them better than any other class of farmers. I guess I can say this without boasting, and the Canadians appreciate us. We turn out to celebrate Dominion Day; they are glad to have us help to farm the country; they know how to govern; we know how to work."

Another farmer, from Minnesota, who settled in Central Saskatchewan some years ago, has the following to say about the country:

"My wife and I have done well enough since we came from the States; we can live, anyway. We came in the spring of 1901, with the first carload of settlers' effects unloaded in these parts, and built the first shanty between Saskatoon and Lumsden. We brought with our car of settlers' effects the sum of $1,800 in cash, today we are worth $40,000. We 'proved up' one of the finest farms in Western Canada, and bought 320 acres at $3 per acre. We took good crops off the land for four years, at the end of which we had $8,000 worth of improvements in the way of buildings, etc., and had planted three acres of trees. Two years ago we got such a good offer that we sold our land at $45 per acre. From the above you will see that we have not done badly since our arrival."

Prof. Thomas Shaw, of St. Paul, Minnesota, with a number of other well known editors of American farm journals, toured Western Canada recently, and in an interview at Winnipeg said, in part:

"With regard to the settlement of the West I should say that it is only well begun. I have estimated that in Manitoba one-tenth of the land had been broken; in Saskatchewan one-thirtieth, and in Alberta, one-hundred and seventy-fifth. I am satisfied that in all three provinces grain can be grown successfully up to the sixtieth parallel, and in the years to come your vacant lands will be taken at a rate of which you have at present no conception. We have enough people in the United States alone, who want homes, to take up this land.

What you must do in Western Canada is to raise more live stock. When you are doing what you ought to do in this regard the land which is now selling for $20 an acre will be worth from $50 to $100 per acre. It is as good land as that which is selling for more than $100 per acre in the corn belt.

I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. You can get your food cheaper and the climate is better for the purpose. We have a better market, but your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Winter wheat can be grown in one-half of the country through which I have passed, and alfalfa and one of the varieties of clover in three-fourths of it. The farmers do not believe this, but it is true."

Keeping pace with wheat production, the growth of railways has been quite as wonderful, and the whole country, from Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains, will soon be a net-work of trunk and branch lines. Three great transcontinental lines are pushing construction in every direction, and at each siding the grain elevator is to be found. Manitoba being the first settled province, has now an elevator capacity of upwards of 25,000,000 bushels; Saskatchewan, 20,000,000, and Alberta about 7,000,000, while the capacity of elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur on the Great Lakes, is upwards of 20,000,000 more.

Within the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta there are flour and oatmeal mills with a combined capacity of 25,000 barrels per day, and situated along some famous water powers in New Ontario, there are larger mills than will be found anywhere in the prairie provinces.

Last year the wheat crop totalled over 100,000,000 bushels. This year the crop will yield 30,000,000 more. A recent summary shows that on the 1st of January, 1909, the surveyed lands of the three western provinces totalled 134,000,000 acres, of which about 32,000,000 have been given as subsidies to railways, 11,000,000 disposed of in other ways, and 38,000,000 given by the Canadian government as free homesteads, being 236,000 homesteads of 160 acres each. Of this enormous territory, there is probably under crop at the present time less than 11,000,000 acres; what the results will be when wide awake settlers have taken advantage of Canada's offer and are cultivating the fertile prairie lands one can scarcely imagine.

Dolphin and Flying Fish.

A ship was lying at anchor at Boca Grande, says the Punta Gorda Herald, lately when the crew observed a dolphin chasing a flying fish, both coming directly toward the ship. On nearing the vessel the flier arose in the air and passed over the bow just abaft the foremast. As it did so the dolphin went under the ship and, coming up on the other side, sprang from the water and caught the flying fish on "the fly" just as it was curving gracefully down in its descent to the water.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

While coasting down a steep hill, near the Texas school, three miles west of Carlisle, Clifford Woodward broke his leg.

George Mohr, Jr., of Jackson Township, Shelby County, went hunting and about noon he seated himself on a log to rest. He saw a rabbit crossing a field and when he jumped to his feet he slipped on the ice and fell, breaking one of his legs.

J. T. Foster, a fur buyer of Vincennes, has received from St. Francisville, Ill., ten miles below Vincennes, the skin of a black raccoon, an animal almost extinct in the vicinity. This is the second pelt of this kind Foster has been able to purchase in twenty years. He paid John Barnett $3.75 for the hide.

When he stepped on a step that was covered with ice, Wilbur Caven, of Evansville, fell to the ground with such force that he bit off a big part of his tongue, and he almost bled to death before medical aid could be summoned. Physicians sewed the pieces of the tongue together and Caven is expected to recover.

James E. Caskey, editor of the Greensburg News, received a letter from an unidentified person in which was enclosed $5. The writer stated that he had owed the money to Caskey's father for many years but that he now wished to ease his conscience. As the elder Caskey has been dead for several years, the writer sent the money to James E. Caskey.

Mrs. Helen Newlands, for years president of the charity organization of Washington, died in that city after a long illness. She underwent seven operations during her illness. Five children are left, among them Mrs. J. P. Stephenson, of Indianapolis. A son is in the regular army. The announcement of her death was a blow to the poor of the city who have looked on Mrs. Newands for years as their best friend. Her body was buried at Princeton.

William Volsoh, the new city attorney of North Vernon, is only 22 years old. He was graduated from the High School there and studied law at the Indiana University law school and in the law office of Fred P. Leonard, in North Vernon. Mr. Volsoh was admitted to practice in the Posey Circuit Court when 21 years old. He is a son of Charles Volsoh, and is a Republican in politics. He is well liked by the people and is known to them as Billy Volsoh.

Mrs. Mary Glutz, aged 93, one of the oldest women in Southern Indiana, died at her home in Evansville. Death was due to heart disease and senility. Mrs. Glutz was a native of Switzerland, and had lived in Evansville for thirty years. Mrs. Gluts had always boasted that outside of a headache once in a while she had never been sick a day in her life, and that she was never forced to call in a physician. She is survived by one son, one daughter, eight grandchildren and twenty great-grandchildren.

Presence of mind on the part of Matron Gressell, of the Orphans' Home in Petersburg prevented a panic when fire broke out in the home. The kitchen stove exploded while Matron Gressell was preparing breakfast for the forty-five children in the home. The stove lids were driven through the ceiling and the building was set afire. Fearing a panic, the matron did not call the fire department. She sent some of her assistants upstairs to quiet the children while she directed others in fighting the fire with buckets. The fire was put out and no one was hurt.

A miner in Ayrshire mine No. 4 is killing rats by electricity at the rate of about twenty a day. The mine has long been overrun with rats, and miners have been seriously troubled. Along the main entry of the mine is a highly charged electric signal wire. Procuring a piece of copper wire, a miner attached it to this signal line, and placing the free end in his room, attached a piece of meat. Each time a rat attempts to eat the meat it is shocked to death. Some of the rats do not receive the full force of the wire and are merely shocked. When in this condition the miner easily kills them.

Seymour Rainey, a Hells Neck farmer, has found out that there are more ways to remove a stump than to use dynamite or "brute force." He was digging out stumps when the cold weather stopped outdoor farm work, winter's arrival causing him to leave several dozen stumps in his clearing dup around and in shape to dynamite. Water got into the holes that had been dug under the stumps, and due to the successive freezing and thawing of the water, most of the stumps were uprooted. The fact that water expands in volume while changing into ice explains how the stumps were "blown out."

Charles S. Barnaby, the new mayor of Columbus, is a florist, and he has offered to give enough flowers to beautify the grass plot in the rear of the city hall that is now being used as a dumping ground.

C. B. Smith, president of the First National Bank of Owensville, used an incandescent light for a foot warmer when he retired, with the result that the bed covering was set on fire. Smith was soon aware of the blaze and extinguished it without difficulty.

R. C. F. Rayhouser, aged 82, the oldest printer in Fort Wayne, editor of the Fort Wayne Times, published before the war, died last week.

Martin Quandt, aged 17, is unconscious at his home near Hoagland, suffering from a fractured skull. Quandt was struck on the head by the limb of a tree while chopping wood.

A wildcat is terrorizing the people living in the neighborhood of Steele's schoolhouse, northwest of Owensville. The beast made its appearance several days ago, and has been seen a number of times by different people. David Masson and James Farrar took a shot at the wildcat, but it scampered off uninjured through the woods. Parents of several of the pupils attending the Steele school are keeping their children at home.

Charles Marshall, aged 38, a stock buyer and a man prominent in Wells County politics, was struck by a southbound Indiana Union Traction car at Poneto, six miles south of Bluffton, and fatally injured. Marshall was driving a t years manager of the Western Union Telegraph offices in Fort Wayne, has tendered his resignation to become effective March 1. He says he will take a rest. In point of service Mr. Perry is one of the oldest telegraph managers in the Central West, his work in this capacity covering a period of forty years. In all that time he has had only one vacation. This was a week in 1876 when he attended the centennial exposition at Philadelphia. He is personally known to thousands of people who have had telegraphic business in Fort Wayne in the last forty years. His successor has not yet been named.

A few minutes after the new year was ushered in a baby was born at the home of John Hando, near Carmichaels, Green County, Pa. At midnight on New Year's eve, 1908, Hando was married near Laporte, Ind. A cousin in jest offered to wager the new bridegroom that he would not be a father inside of twelve months. This wager was accepted. Later the Handos went east to live. The husband and father holds that it was only 11:05 in Indiana when the child was born in Pennsylvania and that he won his wager by fifty-five minutes. The Indiana cousin declines to take this view and demands the money, claiming Hando lost the bet by five minutes.

The Vincennes Water Supply Company, with offices at Philadelphia, has given Vincennes the Harrison mansion, with the privilege of keeping it on its present site until such time as the water works company needs the ground to make extensions of its plant. The management of the company in a letter addressed to the Board of Public Works commends the patriotic spirit of the citizens of Vincennes in wishing to perpetuate the house. The homestead is of brick with black walnut finishings, and was built by William Henry Harrison, the first governor of the northwest territory. Efforts were made some time ago to get the Legislature to purchase the house.

More than one hundred pupils of the public schools in Bicknell who are barred from going to school because they have not been vaccinated, are having a gay time during their forced vacation, while their parents are criticising the school teachers and Health Officer Staley for enforcing the local health board's orders denying admission to unvaccinated pupils. An epidemic of smallpox recently swept the town, causing the officials to close the schools. When the epidemic died out and school was resumed, Dr. Staley, the local health officer, ordered the teachers to dismiss all pupils who were not vaccinated. The order was issued two weeks before the holiday vacation and was obeyed by the teachers. Several parents thought the order would not be enforced when school was resumed after the holidays, but it was.

When Charles J. Blake, a machinist of Anderson, put coal into a stove at his home in Anderson, he accidentally dropped his purse, containing $135 in bank certificates in the fire. The money was consumed.

Scantily clothed and suffering from hunger and exposure Marshall McMurren, aged 60 years, was found in his hut a few miles below Evansville by Deputy Sheriff Albert Heberer. Heberer found $32,000 in cash on the man's person.

The Light of Truth.

"The late Henry C. Lea, of Philadelphia," said a Boston publisher, "was the world's foremost authority on the Spanish Inquisition. To this subject he devoted his life. He was a realist. He sought only the truth. He threw romantic lights over nothing. He believed that the truth gave the best effects of all. Once, to illustrate the striking effects that the truth have, he said that Byron—though it is not generally known—put a second enclosure in the envelope to his wife containing the beautiful lines:

Fare thee well! And if forever,
Still forever fare thee well!

"The second enclosure was a butcher's bill, on which, in his fine hand, the poet had scrawled:

"'Please look over this, as I don't believe we had so much meat in the time stated.'"

All Up-to-Date Housekeepers Use Red Cross Ball Blue. It makes the clothes clean and sweet as when new. All Grocers.

Not the Same.

"We had a county judge down my way a few years ago whose love for Biblical lore was so pronounced that he couldn't resist the desire to air it on every possible occasion," said Congressman Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, not long ago. "One day an old darky was brought in from the mountain district under suspicion of maintaining an illicit still. There was no real evidence against him.

"What's your name, prisoner?' asked the judge as he peered at the shambling black man.

"'Mah name's Joshua, jedge,' was the reply.

"'Joshua, eh?' said the judge, as he rubbed his hands. 'Joshua, you say? Are you that same Joshua spoken of in Holy Writ—the Joshua who made the sun stand still?'

"'No, jedge,' was the hasty answer, 't'warn't me. Ah'm de Joshua dat made de moon shine.'"

"In fact," said Plato, "he comes pretty near being the Philander Knox of my scholastic cabinet."

For, in the best educational circles in those days, it was considered better to be brainy than to be brawny.—Chicago Tribune.

Scarcely Negotiable.

"Well, you have heard my voice," said the aspiring cantatrice. "Can you recommend it as good security for a loan to be repaid in a year or two?"

"For the most part, yes, madam," answered the cautious manager; "but I really could not indorse your high notes."

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor I was advised to try Cuticura Remedies. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Nenning, 1112 Salina St., Watertown, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1909."

Not in the Thunderbolt.

"I sent you a communication a day or two ago," said the indignant caller, "and you wouldn't print it just because it didn't happen to agree with your views."

"What was it about?" asked the editor of the Morning Thunderbolt.

"It was about woman suffrage."

"O, yes, I remember."

"You threw it in the waste basket, I presume."

"I presume I did."

"My object, sir, was to show that a good deal can be said on both sides."

"Well, you said it, all right, sir—on both sides of the sheet. That's the reason why you can't say it in the Thunderbolt. Good morning, sir."

It is almost time to mention something about the inter-state commerce commission making rates for those Chinese railroads.

Does This Fellow Really Live in St. Joe? Say!

St. Joe, Ind, Jan. 17, 1910

Editor Journal-Gazette:

Please allow me to reply to a subscriber at Albion, Ind. I judge by his talk that the saloons and liquor business will exist only a few more years. He surely has the wrong idea if he thinks that the liquor business must go out of business.

I honestly believe that with good saloon regulation that most of the dry territory will soon have its saloons back again. The man at Albion claims that he does not see anyone drunk in his county any more since the saloons have been voted out. This may be true in his county, but my county has as many drunks as before the saloons were voted out. Just a few weeks ago at dry Spencerville, Ind., there was a crazy drunk trying to find his home after night and got into the wrong house and was shot through the hand. Its a mistake when people tell you there is no more drunks in dry territory.

The subscriber at Albion also claims that over half the people do not drink liquor. Any kid ten years old knows better than that. I believe as the subscriber at Angola, Ind., does, that over 90 per cent do drink liquor.

Anyone who believe in home rule cannot say that county local option is popular. Under our present county local option bill farmers have a right to tell towns and cities whether they should have saloons or not. In our local option election Garrett voted wet by a good majority but cannot have their saloons owing to county local option, which is not founded on home rule principles.

I was induced to vote dry in our last election, but if I live until we have another local option election I surely will vote wet, and have three neighbor friends who voted dry and who claim that they will do likewise. Not because we are drinking men but because that county local option is unpopular. I have always voted the republican ticket but am going to vote the democratic ticket hereafter, for they have the proper solution on the liquor business.

Prohibition fanatics tell us that taxes are less in dry territories than in wet. I wish some of you fanatics would tell how taxes will be less in dry territory than in wet territory. Seneca county, O., has sixty-one saloons and they pay $61,000 to the county every year. Now, if Seneca county was dry this $61,000 would have to be made up by the county taxpayers Prohibition has lost very heavily in the last three months, especially in the states of Massachusetts and Alabama. In Massachusetts two years ago twenty-nine cities went dry and last fall they all voted back wet again except one.

The entire state of Alabama was dry and last fall the whole state voted back to saloons against except two counties. Somerset, Ky., voted wet last fall, which had been dry for a period of years. This seems to show how well prohibition is liked in those territories.

The point for the wets is to thoroughly organize hereafter, the same as the drys do, and the drys won't have such easy sailing. If the wets had been organized and made speeches as the drys did, and if the drys had not practiced mob tactics DeKalb county would have gone wet in our last local option election.

Now, you fanatic, when you have another chance to vote don't you think it would be best to vote to create more positions or to put more people on the county. Judge for yourself.

Editor St. Joe News,

Dear Sir:

Enclosed please find one dollar to pay one year's subscription to THE NEWS from November 14, 1909 to November 14, 1910. THE NEWS has been a constant visitor in my home since the first publication and I think it will continue to come as long as I live. I have always claimed old DeKalb my home for almost seventy-two years, and while I sojourn in other parts it helps me to keep in touch with the friends of other days. I saw by the last issue that Henry Jenkins has passed beyond the river. These are only reminders that we are growing old. I heard a man say a short time ago that he was glad that we were growing old, for when we quit growing old we would be dead

HART HOOD WIDNEY CO.
DEPARTMENT STORE
HICKSVILLE, OHIO.

Annual Remnant Sale

We make it a rule each year the last week in January to close out all remnants—short lengths—and odd lots of Merchandise at a great reduction from former prices—Original cost is not taken into consideration in these goods as we desire to clean our shelves of all these lots before invoice time. There's a saving in this sale to every purchaser. Piece goods from one to ten yards are considered remnants and we have an unusual supply this year. There are remnants of Prints—Ginghams—Outings—Shaker Flannels—Flannelettes—Linings—Dress Goods—Lawns—Carpets—Mattings—Oil Cloths and Linoleums.

We also have several odd lots of Shoes, Rubbers, Underwear, Coats, Furs, Suits, Skirts at Remnant Prices.

New Selz Shoes.

When a man buys a shoe these days he wants to know whether it's made of leather throughout or a little shoddy worked in where it can't be seen when it's new. SELZ SHOES are made ALL SOLID and we are authorized to make good any pair that doesn't give the worth of the price in wear if it's in the fault of the shoe in any way. Isn't that fair enough?

A Southern Boy

By Wm. H. McIntosh

I wonder how the boys who read the ST. JOE NEWS would feel and act were they placed in the same circumstances as environed the brave-hearted unfortunate South Carolina lad of whom it is in my mind to tell them.

There was during the great war to compel the seceded states to return to the Union, a very bitter feeling against the people of South Carolina for having begun hostilities by hring upon the stars and stripes floating over Fort Sumpter in the harbor of the maratime city of Charleston.

When in January 1865, Sherman's veteran army began the invasion of the state from Savannah, it was their purpose to so punish treason that forever after the memory would act as a deterrent.

There was no disposition to harm women and children, but whenever the mistake would be made of deserting their homes, they must expect on their return to find but beds of ashes and chimneys standing as monuments of their existence.

The vengeful feelings of Wade Hampton's troopers boded evil indeed to such of the bummers andsome of the regularly organized foragers as fell into their hands and amenities of warfare had slight consideration.

And now I will call back from the misty past the recollection of stoical heroism of a southern boy. The sun was brightly shining after a week of continuous heavy rain which had raised the current of the Savannah above its banks and inundated the adjacent forest swamps with a flood of turbid water. With marvelous suddenness following the storm's cessation, the river had fallen and drained back the overflow and thereby rendered the roads again passable. A sharp fall in temperature gave to the cool air a healthful, buoyant tang and the long column of marching infantry moved with brisk and sweeping stride. There was none to observe the passage of these troops for all the resident population of the district in obedience to the fanatical proclamation of Gov. McGraw, had abandoned their homes and taking with them servants, stock and all portable property fled far northward to Columbia and beyond. They had been required to destroy their homes but had not obeyed and this omission was eagerly and promptly supplied by the bummer element of the invading forces. Every dwelling found deserted was destroyed by fire.

On a sudden cannon shots were heard from away in the advance electrofying the column. The firing continued as of a full field battery in action and presently a halt unordered took place beginning forward and extending to the rear as the files closed up. To the left and a few yards from the road stood a two-storied plantation house and at a little way south of it I saw a boy of perhaps ten years, standing alone and by a smoldering fire fed by broken pieces of valuable upholstered furniture. As soldiers hurried from the home where they had been intent on pillage, flames and smoke burst from doors and windows and so combustable was its material that in a moment it was all ablaze and fiercely hot and had attracted general observation.

My attention had been diverted to the lonely child and I left my file to make his acquaintance, express my sympathy and gain information. Apparently indifferent to my approach, the boy continued to stare fixedly at the red embers of the fire and not until he heard my voice in kindly tone addressing him, did he change position. He seemed dazed and overwhelmed by grief. He was beyond tears or complaint and when he turned his head and our eyes met, I saw in them no anger but instead a look so sad, so despairing and yet so brave that my heart went out to him in pity and respect. I had intended to question him why he had remained when all others had fled, but my purpose failed in presence of his misfortune. Such a blow falling upon one so young and borne so stoically, must be held sacred against inquisitive intrusion and it were unpardonable to wound feelings and weaken fortitude by any reference to his strange presence utterly alone. I cannot describe the boy farther than to say that in bearing, feature and dress, he showed refinement, intelligence and good breeding.

I glanced suggestively to my haversack, he understood but slowly shook his head and then with one swift glance, taking in the starving troops and the burning house, he broke out impetuous and bitter in speech: "They ought not to have done that, they derided my appeal to spare our furniture, they broke my sister's piano with the butts of their muskets and cooked their breakfast by this fire and now they have burned our home." I could not answer for the act was monstrous and without reason or palliation. With my pocket knife I cut a piece about four inches square from the heavy damask silk that covered the top of a fragment of a solid mahogany settee not reached by the fire and had scarcely folded and placed it in my pocket when I saw that the march was resumed. One kindly look and I returned to the road and as we passed on, I cast behind a farewell glance at that forlorn figure standing alone and friendless near the burning home by the smouldering embers of a costly bivouac fire. To inquiries of my comrades, I gave no heed for my heart was heavy with sorrows for innocent suffering and indignation at the ruffians in uniform. Enclosed in a letter to my wife the silk fragment long preserved has often recalled the Southern boyalone by his ruined home.

Hi Dunkle.

Mrs. Etta Bowen of Wayne, was a Thursday guest of St. Joe relatives.

Seven prominent democrats are out for the chairmanship of DeKalb county.

Read about the Dish Sale and be sure and attend it next week. Dunkle's Drug store.

Mrs. S. W. Tustison and daughter Marguerite, spent several days the latter part of last week, with Garrett friends.

Bert Gee was at Churubusco a few days the latter part of last week, looking after a position as manager of a potato and onion farm near there.

The democrats of Concord township met Saturday afternoon in the Wm. Curie store and selected precinct committeeman as follows: Joseph Hull, east precinct, and Henry Krabill, west precinct.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Mahlon Baker, Friday afternoon, Jan. 28th. The subjects of the afternoon are "White Slave Trade of Today" and "The Relation of Dress to Vice". All who come will be made welcome

John W. Henderson of Spencerville, was in the city Thursday. Mr. Henderson has indicated to his friends that he would be willing to be the next republican county chairman and that his name will be presented for the place when the committeemen meet.—Dispatch.

The entire old farm of Ballard Bowen, located two miles north of here, was sold last Saturday. The tract containing 29 acres, which lies north of the state road was bought by A. D. Brunson, and the tract south containing 132 acres, less the 6.60 acres cut off for the railroad was made out to John Bowen.

Rolland Bearss is nursing a very sore ear. One morning last week, while feeding his stock a young colt took hold of Mr. Bearss by the right ear and nearly bit it off. He had to take the colt by the mouth in order to free himself. The colt was feeling good and undertook to play in this manner but it failed to meet with the hearty co-operation of Mr. Bearss.

Republican caucuses will be held over the county, to-morrow, for the purpose of selecting committeeman and delegates, and alternates to the Twelfth District Convention, held at Wayne on February 1st. The caucus at St. Joe will be held Friday evening and all interested in the welfare of the party should put in their appearance at the meeting.

The report made a few weeks ago, that Barney Kellner had left the country was only too true and now he has returned with a bride. Mr. Kellner was married at Detroit on Monday of last week, and came to his home, north of St. Joe, a few days later. Barney no doubt thought he had better get her now or he would not be able to get her after the trial as he will probably go over the road.

Warren L. Austin the only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Austin, of Auburn died at an early hour Sunday morning, after a tortuous illness extending over the past four weeks. At the age of 19 years this young man ceases to live and complete the career that looked so promising, and in death he will be regarded as he lived—honored and respected by all. Deceased is the only son of DeKalb county's clerk, to whom a wide circle of friends extend warmest of sympathy in his loss of an only son. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the late home.—Ex.

Sol Barney was at Auburn Tuesday on business.

Mrs. B. W. Bowman was at Wayne, last Thursday,

Mrs. Tillie Webb of Spencerville, is a new subscriber to THE NEWS.

If you have to wear a Truss, see what Dunkle has to show you.

Stella Nelson and lady friend of Hicksville, were St. Joe visitors over Sunday.

Noah Long has sold his farm of 96 acres one mile north of Auburn to William Countryman, of near this place, and will buy the Downs farm of 160 acres in Fairfield township.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Rickett and family and Mr. and Mrs. Gass of Minnesota, was royally entertained last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Jackson of Jackson township.

J. E. Pomeroy of Auburn is in the field for Judge and he is a man of wide acquaintance. He has been before the people of Old DeKalb for years and is very prominent. He will no doubt make a good race and the people will do well in selecting him for the office which he seeks.

Frank Kinsey arrived home Monday evening from Wayne, where he has been for the past week with his wife, who underwent an operation at the Lutheran hospital, last Tuesday. He states that she is getting along fine and is feeling good, this news we are pleased to relate to our readers.

Harry Milliman left Monday morning on his route through Ohio as traveling salesman for the Wells Medicine Co., of LaFayette. Harry will make good as he is sociable and pleasing and every dealer he calls on will be his friend. After he makes the state once it will be much easier the second. THE NEWS printed him a bunch of neat cards before leaving. Here's success Harry.

The "wet" article published in our last issue, written by a St. Joe man to the Journal Gazette, has caused considerable discussion among our readers. In defense of the "dry" side two of our representative men in this community have made a reply to the article in this issue. THE NEWS is always open for discussion and we are pleased to have articles contributed. Names of the writers must be known, not for publication, but for our own safety. If you feel so disposed to make a reply to the articles just send or hand the articles to us.

That new comet which has suddenly and unexpectedly appeared in the heavens just when the astronomers were expecting Halley's comet to burst into view is possibly the Dr. Cook of the heavens. This week several of our citizens witnessed in the western heavens sometime after sunset what appeared like a comet. It could be seen somewhat north of the evening star which now is so brilliant, the head of the comet pointing earthward the tail which showed rather dimly rising directly upward. This comet should not be confused with Halley's comet which does not become visible to the naked eye, until a short time after the twenty-fourth of March.

Rolland Bearss was at Wayne Monday on business. He reports a very sad accident having occured while the train was leaving the city in the evening. As it was late they were going at a good rate of speed. After going a short distance they struck a man and killed him. Mr. Bearss says the man was injured in the head and died before anyone reached him. It was found that he was a resident of the city and was engaged in the insurance business. His name was Anderson and the paper states that the gate man had warned him not to cross. It is thought he did the act intentionally as his books showed a deficiency of the funds in his charge by some company.

Keep your eye on the Indicator, today she registers one hundred twenty-five. Everything blows up at one hundred fifty. Watch for the explosion next week. Don't forget.

Miss Mary Dibert of Garrett, spent a few days with Mrs. C. A. Woodcox and family.

Mrs. J. K. Stafford and daughter Ida, of Auburn, were Wednesday guests of St. Joe friends.

John H. Baxter of Butler, was the guest of his son, E. W. Baxter and wife, a couple of days last week.

Mrs. Sarah Walter left Thursday for South Bend, where she expects to visit with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Walker, and other relatives. Mrs. Lora Leighty accompanied her on the trip and remained until Tuesday of this week.

A neighboring county man took his wife to a physician. The doctor put a thermometer in the woman's mouth and after two or three minutes just as the doctor was about to move the instrument, the man, who was not used to such prolonged silence on the part of his wife, said: "Doctor, what'll you take for that thing?"

The following is from a leading newspaper out in North Dakota: It is reported that one of the fastidious ladies in a neighboring town kneads bread with her gloves on. This incident may be peculiar, but there are others. The editor of this paper needs bread with his shoes on. He needs bread with his shirt on. He also needs bread with his pants on, and unless some of the delinquent subscribers to this "Old Rag of Freedom pay up before long, he will need bread without a blamed thing on—and North Dakota is no Garden of Eden in the wintertime."

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

Railroad Looted by Officials.

Charges that Benjamin Thomas, former president of the Chicago & Western Indiana railroad; Charles R. Kappes, former real estate dealer for the road, and John C. Fetzer, obtained at least $85,000 from the railroad through a real estate conspiracy, are made in a bill fo ran accounting filed in the Circuit Court at Chicago, Ill. The bill was filed by the Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad Company. According to the bill, the real estate transactions in question took place in 1906 and involved the expenditure of $2,521,899. The defendants are alleged to have divided the $850,000 profits. When the railroad wished to acquire property, the bill says, Thomas would refer the matter to Kappes. Fetzer, who was in the real estate business, would be directed to make the purchase, the money then being turned over to him. Fetzer would make the purchase and report the amount paid. It is charged in the bill that Fetzer in his report to the railroad company would name a greater amount than he had paid. Then, it is alleged, he was to divide with Thomas and Kappes the difference between the price reported to the railroad and the real price.

A Dozen Dead in Philadelphia Fire.

A dozen persons, mostly young women, are believed to have lostt heir lives in a fire that destroyed a six story factory building at 200 and 202 Chancellor street, in the heart of the produce market section of Philadelphia, Pa. About twenty men and girls are in hospitals suffering from burns and injuries received in jumping from windows. There were about 100 men, women and children employed by various small firms in the building. The interior of the building was burned out and the number of dead will not be known until the firemen complete their search of the ruins. Fire is said to have started on the third floor, either from a slight explosion or the blowing out of a fuse in an electric switch board.

Roosevelt for Cannon's Place.

Theodore Roosecelt for speaker of the house of representatives. This is the latest decision reached as to "What shall be done with our ex-presidents?" according to a report that has spread among members of congress. It is even said that Mr. Roosevelt has agreed to run for Congress in the First district of New York state, in which Oyster Bay, his home, is located. The understanding that he will be elected to the speakership if he runs is, it is declared, insisted on by Mr. Roosevelt. Representative Wm. W. Cocks, of the First district, according to the report, is willing to step down and out in favor of Mr. Roosevelt.

Train Rolled Down Bank; One Killed.

A. Hanks, of Jackson, Ky., was killed and several others injured, some seriously, by the derailment of passenger train No. 34 on the Ohio & Kentucky railway, running from Jackson to Cannel City, at the Ohio and Kenutcky junction with the Lexington & Eastern railroad. The entire train rolled down an embankment. The cause of the accident has not been learned.

Brazilian Ambassador is Dead.

Joaquim Nabuco, ambassador of the Republic of Brazil to the United States, died at his home in Lafayette place, Washington, D. C. He had represented his government at Washington since May, 1905. Immediately on learning of the ambassador's death President Taft called at the diplomat's home and left his card. Death came suddenly, the ambassador having been ill only a few days.

Gets Rhodes Scholarship.

Elmer H. Davis, of Aurora, Ind., and a senior at Frankling College, Bloomington, Ind., has been chosen by the Indiana committee for the selection of Rhodes scholars as the representative of the State for this year's scholarship at the University of Oxford, England.

Lemon Famine Broken.

The end of a lemon famine in New Orleans, La., and other southern cities was marked by the arrival of the steamship Maselle, which was considerably overdue, and its cargo of six thousand boxes of lemons from Sicily.

Chicago Banker Dies.

John Farson, who was well known in financial and social circles throughout the country, died in Chicago, Ill., as the result of heart disease. Mr. Farson was 54 years of age.

Three Miners Suffocated in Colorado.

Three men were suffocated by powder smoke and nitro fumes in the Gunnison tunnel, near Montrose, Colo., and thirty others barely escaped with their lives.

SEE 1910 AS RECORD BREAKER IN BUSINESS

Correspondents of St. Louis Bank Are Unanimous in Their Optimism.

WEST AND SOUTH ARE TO BOOM

Large Crops and Growth in Industry and Manufactures Forecast by Observers.

Record-breaking commerce for 1910 is the unanimous forecast of several aundred correspondents of the National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis, one of the largest financial institutions in the South and West. Communications from bankers of most of the southern and western commonwealths indicate exceptional vitality in agriculture, industry, finance, manufactures and trade, with almost as strong a demand for money as was experienced in 1907.

Manufactures and industry will, according to the authoritative predictions, recover completely in 1910. Factories, mines and mills will be rushed with work. Construction operations will be general and pretentious. Wholesale and retail trade will be heavy. Agricultural production will be large and diversified.

Opinions expressed in the letters signify that idle labor will be re-employed and the country, as a whole, will enjoy its greatest prosperity. Yet it seems to be impossible to gather clearly whether there will be a decided reduction in the cost of living. As well as may be inferred, prices will continue high on all the necessities of life, although the improvement in conditions, resulting in the re-employment of idle labor, should have the effect of providing the wage earner with larger means and thereby causing better ease.

The increase in the gold supply is given as one of the causes of the high cost of living, and authorities appear to be agreed that it is a powerful factor. But high prices are ascribed to additional causes, including the inadequacy of the supply to the demand, the increasing population, the augmenting prosperity, extraordinary development, growing demand, reduced supply, combinations and agreements as to prices, cost of service in trade, and even, paradoxically, idle labor.

Indications are excellent in farming regions, and heavy production is the outlook. But crops will be more diversified than ever, but it still is hard to foretell the range of prices, or to say where the decline is likely to show. Grain districts promise a large output, whereas cotton localities complain, to some extent, of the boll weevil and refer confidently to a diversification of production.

OHIO HITS THE FOOD TRUST.

Cold Storage to Be Regulated and Price Boosters to Be Prosecuted.

Every energy of the Ohio state government is to be enlisted in the fight for a revision downward of the cost of living. Gov. Harmon, Attorney General Denman, State Food Commissioner Dunlap and Speaker Mooney have entered into close co-operation to achieve real results. Gov. Harmon sent a special message to the general assembly. Speaker Mooney and the Senate leaders will give right of way and boosting to necessary legislation. The attorney general will draft bills and resolutions and prosecute conspiracies to boost prices. The dairy and food department and the state board of health will hunt for the facts and causes of food prices and the condition of food sold from cold storage warehouses.

First will come a campaign to get the facts. A joint committee will make a legislative investigation. The committee will be amply financed, will hold hearings, and examine witnesses in a dozen cities. Commissioner Dunlap's food inspectors will be set to work to gather data. The chemists of the state board of health will examine food kept for various periods in cold storage. The public will be asked to take a hand in the crusade for facts. This triple line of inquiry by state agents, by legislative committee, and by volunteers from the ranks of the citizens of the state is expected to bring together a wealth of information which will enable the legislature to contribute in a sane and effective way to lessening the high cost of living.

NURSED BABY ROCKEFELLER.

Woman Who Served Two Generations Dies, Aged 103.

Nora Williams, nurse to the Rockefeller family for two generations, died in Cleveland at the age of 103 years, according to records in her possession. She came from Wales, England, when 16 years old, and attended John D. Rockefeller, Jr., when he was a baby. At that time the oil king was taken ill and Nora divided her time between him and the infant. For twenty years Nora served the different Rockefeller families. Four years ago she is said to have disputed with John D. Rockefeller over the treatment given his grandson. From that day to her death she is said never to have crossed the threshold of the Forest Hill home.

A BEAU OF THE OLD SCHOOL.

MEET IN WASHINGTON.

Governors Discuss Problems of State and Nation in the Capital.

Governors from thirty States of the Union, gathered in the national capital, Washington, D. C., to discuss problems of state and of national interest, opened their three-day session Tuesday. Gov. Wilson of Kentucky, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the conference, was in the chair. In a brief introductory speech he referred to the first conference of state heads, invited in May, 1908, by President Roosevelt, to meet in the White House.

This conference was on the governors' own initiative. Gov. Wilson declared that in his opinion no better means of devising improved and uniform state legislation could have been found than for the chief executives of the states to come toegther as they had and in a friendly way, with partisan feeling forgotten, talk over together the questions in which they all were interested in.

Monday night the governors, with the members of the National Civic Federation, attended a reception at the home of Miss Mabel Boardman. Tuesday night they sat down to a dinner in their honor at the home of John Hays Hammond.

BALLINGER WITHDRAWS LAND.

All Forms of Disposition Barred by Plan to Aid Water-Site Legislation.

In aid of proposed legislation affecting the disposal of waterpower sites on the public domain, Secretary Ballinger has temporarily withdrawn from all forms of disposition the following areas: 3,723 acres along the Big Blackfoot river, Montana; 25,120 acres along the San Rafael river, Utah; 2,408 acres along the Coeur d'Alene river, Idaho; 160 acres along the Fresno river, California; 3,536 acres along the South Platte river, Colorado.

The Chilean government has ordered from the Krupps, in Essen, Germany, 240 guns, to be delivered within three years.

Only the speedy and firm establishment of a new Turkish ministry, in the opinion of the leading diplomats, can prevent a break in the ranks of the Young Turks following the resignation of Grand Vizier Hilmi Pasha and his cabinet.

The reception at San Juan, Porto Rico, recently tendered in honor of Secretary of War Dickinson and Brig. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs, was unsurpassed even by that given to President Roosevelt in 1906.

The Twentieth Century, a government organ of Belgium, quotes "an authoritative person" confirming the religious marriage of King Leopold on his deathbed. It also says that a few days prior to this Baroness Vaughan received holy communion.

King Manuel, the youthful monarch of Portugal, led the work of relief in the district which suffered the heaviest damage from the recent storms. Manuel was in the saddle night and day. Two of Portugal's warships were so badly injured in the storm as to be practically worthless.

JOHN FARSON IS DEAD.

Head of Stock and Bond House Succumbs After Brief Illness.

John Farson died at 3:45 o'clock Tuesday morning at his Oak Park (Ill.) residence, "Pleasant Home." He was conscious almost to the last, and the members of his family were at his side when death came. Mr. Farson's death followed a sudden and severe attack of heart disease. Until Sunday he had not been so ill as to require the services of a physician in twenty years. Mr. Farson was head of the stock and bond house of Farson, Son & Co., with offices in Chicago and New York. He was 55 years old and left a widow and two sons—John Farson, Jr., and William Farson. Mr. Farson was born in Union City, Ind., in 1855, the son of a Methodist minister. When his father was killed in an accident, the boy, then 13 years old, was forced to leave school and help support the family.

TWENTY-FOUR PERISH AT SEA.

250,000 TO SAVE BIG AREA.

Secretary Ballinger Wants Ditches Dug in Washington Reservation.

The appropriation of $25,000 for the construction of irrigation and drainage ditches on the Yakima Indian reservation in Washington, the appropriation to be reimbursable, is provided for in an item submitted by the Secretary of the Interior to the House for inclusion in the urgent deficiency bill. Secretary Ballinger says that unless the money is granted 30,000 to 40,000 acres in the reservation will be ruined.

MRS. SIGEL DEAD.

Mrs. Elise Sigel, widow of General Franz Sigel, Civil War hero and grandmother of Elsie Sigel, the young missionary who was murdered supposedly by Leon Ling last summer, in NewYork, died in that city at the age of 75. Because her health was so bad, the death of her granddaughter was kept from Mrs. Sigel.

Raise Price of Shoes.

Charging the necessity of their action to the increased cost of materials, 225 manufacturers of shoes, comprising the National Association of Boot and Shoe Manufacturers, have made a formal announcement of a horizontal increase in the retail price of shoes, amounting to from 10 to 12 per cent. The advance was directed to be made within the present year.

Cadets Must Quit Cigarette.

"Either cigarettes or shoulder straps must go." That is the order that Commandant Haskell of the Omaha High School Battalion has issued to the staff and company officers. Most of the young men will give up their tobacco, though there are three or four who declare that if they must quit one or the other the gold braid will have to go.

SUFFERING IN THE WEST.

The Supply of Coal Runs Short as the Cold Increases.

The cold weather has caused factories in many cities in the West to shut down for want of coal and hundreds of persons have been forced into idleness while there are orders on hand to keep them at work if coal could be had. Hardly any of the factories in Indianapolis are running full time, and even those are husbanding it, as there is no certainty when another supply can be got.

The railroads cannot haul the coal, though there is plenty at the mines. President Kolsom, of the Indiana Operators' Association, says that aside from the heavy general business of the road in the last six weeks there has been considerable cold weather, which diminishes the motive power one-half, that two engines are required to haul what is a load for one in ordinary weather, and besides the two engines burn more coal than they ordinarily do. The result of this is that roads are furnishing empty cars to the mines on the stipulation that the coal is to be for the railroad company's own use.

In a number of cities prices of coal have increased greatly in two weeks and there is suffering among the poor which charity organizations cannot relieve because the coal cannot be got. Some railroad companies have been compelled to confiscate coal on the side tracks in order to move trains.

The situation is reported to be even worse in Iowa and the State Board of Railway Commissioners has appealed to the railroads to abandon passenger trains so far as possible and devote their facilities to hauling coal. Factories in many cities in the State have closed for lack of fuel and hundreds of men are out of employment. Present conditions are without a parallel in the history of Iowa.

SAVE LIVES AND GET $20,000.

Two Workmen Injured in Brave Act Recover From Company.

A verdict of $20,000 damages has been awarded to two bridge workers who saved the lives of several other workmen on the Queensborough bridge in New York. A heavy steel plate began to slip and imperiled men below. Orlazus Judge and John J. McGlynn thrust their hands into a crevice beneath the plate and held them there until the plate was raised. Their hands were so injured they have not been able to work for two years.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

Miss Rhoda M. White, who graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1906, and has since held a fellowship in sociology at that institution, has been made dean of women at Middlebury College, Vermont.

Fire in Chadbourne hall, women's dormitory at the University of Wisconsin, caused a small-sized panic among the women students recently. The blaze resulted more in an abundance of ludicrous incidents than in actual monetary damage.

Educators of the Indian from all over the United States held a recent meeting in Washington, D. C., to discuss methods of improving the minds of Indians. The subject of their education was treated by those who have had long experience in the work.

The Week in Congress

The Senate spent two hours Thursday in discussing the claims for additional salary of postmasters between 1864 and 1874, involving about $4,000,000. Mr. Penrose attacked the proposition as the work of claim agents. It was referred to the committee on postoffices, to be reported on by Feb. 1. Adjourned until Monday. The House passed the fortifications appropriation bill carrying more than $5,000,000. A resolution which was passed directing the destruction of 1,000 tons of old and worthless House documents, including many presidential messages, caused much discussion, both serious and humorous. A resolution was passed granting additional clerical help to the nine committees on expenditures in the various executive departments.

The Senate was not in session Friday. After listening to the President's conservation message, the House spent the rest of its session considering the Henry resolution proposing an amendment of the constitution changing the date of Presidential inauguration. Led by Mr. Perkins of New York the opponents of the resolution showed such unexpected strength that its friends caused adjournment to prevent a vote, in which they would have been required to get a two-thirds majority. The resolution was vigorously defended by Representatives Parker of New Jersey, Henry of Texas and Goebel of Ohio. On the other hand, Representatives Stafford of Wisconsin, Campbell of Kansas, Harrison of New York, M. E. Driscoll of New York, Craig of Alabama, Lindbergh of Minnesota and Sissons of Mississippi spoke strongly against it. Adjourned until Saturday.

The Senate was not in session Saturday. The fight between two committees over the jurisdiction of the Henry resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to change the date of the Presidential inauguration from March 4 to the last Thursday in April resulted in the House committing the matter back to the judiciary committee, which had reported it. An effort will be made to reach an understanding with the committee on election of President and Vice President, which had reported an almost indentical measure, and the judiciary committee will report the Henry resolution back within ten days. The territories committee reported, recommending statehood for New Mexico and Arizona. After eulogies by a number of members on the late United States Senator Shoup of Idaho, the House passed a concurrent resolution accepting the Shoup statue just placed in Statuary Hall. Adjourned until Monday.

The Senate Monday adopted the conference report on the Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry resolution, and passed a bill authorizing an additional judge for the Fourth United States District. Eulogies were heard on the late George L. Shoup, former Senator from Idaho, in connection with the acceptance of his statue. The House passed the bill granting separate Statehood to the territories of Arizona and New Mexico. Consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill, carrying more than $5,000,000, was begun.

After cleaning up the calendar by passing about forty bills, the majority of them being of a private character, the Senate Tuesday adopted a resolution requesting the Secretary of the Treasury to advise the Senate if newspaper reports were true that the custom house at Newport News, Va., was to be closed in observance of the aniversary of General R. T. Lee's birthday. Without debate and by a viva voce vote the House adopted the conference report on the Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry resolution, and then devoted almost five hours to further discussion of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill. Consideration of this measure was not concluded. The session was somewhat enlivened by criticisms of former President Roosevelt by Representatives Harrison and Fitzgerald, of New York, the former denouncing him for appointing representatives to the third maritime conference to be held at Brussels next April without due authority of law, and the latter because of his alleged numerous violations of the civil service law.

NUBBINS OF NEWS.

Fear of a mob menacing Jenks Proctor, a negro murderer, caused Sheriff Brown to rush the man to the Kansas State prison at Lansing for safe keeping.

Jacob and Louis Wesoky, Pittsburg butter dealers, have been sentenced to two and a half years in Leavenworth penitentiary and fined $2,500 for violating the federal oleomargarine laws.

Mrs. George Ledbeter has been acquitted by a jury at Mankato, Minn., of the charge of murdering her husband, whose body was found buried on the farm of the couple.

Fire destroyed all except one of the twenty-six business places in the hamlet of Holland, twelve miles from Suffolk, Va., and rendered half of the town's 200 inhabitants homeless.

Firemen used helmets equipped with oxygen tanks in fighting a blaze at the Pennsylvania Cold Storage and Warehouse Company's plant in Philadelphia when an ammonia tank blew up.

CHAPTER VI.—(Continued.)

So I began by inches to draw me up and feel for some better launching hold. But in the midst, for all my care and caution, I slipped and lost my grip upon the casement; lost that and got another on the wooden shutter opened back against the outer wall, and then went down, pulling the shutter from its rusted hinges in crashing clamor fit to rouse the dead.

As if they were quick echoes, other crashes followed as of chairs flung back; and then the window just above me filled with crowding figures. I marvel that I had the wit to lie quiet as I had fallen, but I had; and those above, looking from a lighted room into the night, saw nothing. Then Captain Stuart shouted to his dragoon horse-holder.

"Ho! Tom Garget; this way, man!" he cried; and when he had no answer, put a leg across the window seat to clamber out. 'Twas in the very act, while I was watching catlike every movement, that I saw the precious scrap of parchment in his hand.

Tom Garget's sword had clattered beside me, and with it I sprang afoot and cut a whizzing circle by my doughty captain's ear that made him cringe and gasp and all but tumble out upon me. The bit of parchment fluttered down and in a trice I had it safe.

A bold sortie for the horses I made while yet the captain hung in air and sought his foothold.

With all my breathless haste it was not done too soon, nor soon enough. When I had quickly freed a horse from the dead hand that held it tethered, and was making shift to climb into the saddle, they thronged upon me; the captain from his window, the others pouring hotly through the gaping doorway.

I made shift to get astride the horse, to prick the poor beast with the point of sword, and so to break away in some brief dash beneath the oaks. But it was a chase soon ended. As I remember, I was reeling in the saddle what time the foremost of them overtook me. I held on grimly till the horse pursuing lapped the one I rode by head, by neck and presently by withers. Then I turned and would be making frantic-feeble passes with the sword at the man upon his back.

It was my plotting captain who rode me thus to earth; and when I thrust he laughed and turned the blade aside with his bare hand. Then, pressing closer, he struck me with his fist, and thereupon the night and all its happenings went blank as if the blow had been a cannon shot to crush my skull.

How long a time came in between my futile dash for liberty and their dragging of me back to the manor house, I could not tell. It must have been an hour or more, for now a gibbous moon hung pale above the tree tops, and all around were bivouac fires and horses tethered to show that in the interval a troop had come and camped.

The scene within the great forerom of the house had been shifted, too. A sentry was pacing back and forth before the door, and when the two trooper bailiffs thrust me in, I saw at the table, sitting as in council, some half-score officers of the British lighthorse with their colonel at the head.

As it chanced, this was my first sight near at hand of that British commander whose name in after years the patriot mothers spoke to fright their children. This was that Colonel Banastre Tarleton who gave no quarter to surrendered men; and when I looked into the sloe-black eyes I saw in them for me a waiting gibbet.

"So!" he rapped out, when I was haled before him. "You're the spying rebel captain, eh? Are you alive enough to hang? They tell me you were in the service once and left it honorably. I am loath to hang a man who has worn the colors. Would it please you best to die a soldier's death, Captain Ireton?"

I said it would, most surely, and he said I should have the boon if I would tell him what an officer on the Baron de Kalb's staff should know: the strength of the Continentals, the general's designs and dispositions, and I know not what besides. I think it was my laugh that made him stop short.

"I'll make you laugh another tune!" he said. "You rebels are all of a piece, and clemency is wasted on you!"

"Your mercy comes too dear; you set top high a price upon it, Colonel Tarleton. If, for the mere swapping of a rope for a bullet, I could be the poor caitiff your offer implies, hanging would be too good for me."

"If that is your last word—But stay; I'll give you an hour to think it over."

"It needs not an hour nor a minute," I replied. "If I knew aught about the Continental army—which I do not—I'd see you hanged in your own stirrup-leather before I'd tell you, Colonel Tarleton."

Colonel Tarleton signed to those who guarded me. A hand was laid upon my shoulder, but when I would have turned to go with them a woman's cry cut sharp into the stillness. Then, before any one could say a word or think a thought, my dauntless little lady stood beside me, her eyes alight and all her glorious beauty heightened in a blaze of generous emotion.

"For shame! Colonel Tarleton," she cried. "Do you come thus into my father's house and take a wounded guest and hang him? You say he is a spy, but that he can not be, for he has lain abed in this same house a month or more. You shall not hang him!"

At this there was a mighty stir about the table, as you may guess; and some would smile and some would snuff the candles for a better sight of her sweet face.

"Ha! How is this, Mistress Margery?" cried the Colonel. "Do you keen open house for the king's enemies? That spells treason, my dear young lady."

"He is no spy."

"You should not make me contradict a lady, Mistress Margery. 'Tis evident you have not all his confidence. He was captured red-handed in the act at yonder window, listening to that which he may never know and live to prate about. Besides, he killed a sentry for his chance to listen, and for that I'd hang him if he were my own father's guest."

So much he said as mild as if he had not left his reading of the law to figure in our annals as King George's butcher. My brave one stood a moment, shocked as she had warrant for. Then she ran to throw herself upon her knees at Colonel Tarleton's feet—to kneel and plead for me as I would gladly have died a thousand deaths rather than have her plead; for life of me.

And in the end she won a respite, though I did think it far too dearly bought. When he granted it the colonel lifted her and took her hand, bowing low over it with courtly deference. "For your sake, Mistress Margery, it shall be put off till morning," he said; then gave the order: At dawn they would march me out and hang me, and I would best be ready. For later than the sunrise of a new day the king himself might not delay my taking off.

"You know too much, my Captain," was his parting word. "Were it not for Mistress Margery and my promise, you should not keep the breath to tell it over night."

CHAPTER VII.

I was remanded to the custody of young Lieutenant Tybee, who suffered me to keep my own room for the night. He barred the door upon me, set a sentry pacing back and forth in the corridor without, and another to keep an eye upon the window from below, and so left me.

I was fain to fall upon the bed in utter weariness, thinking that the respite bought by my sweet lady's humbling was more dearly bought than ever. Time went by and then there came a stir without and voices in the corridor. It was the changing of the guard. The sentry newly come paced back and forth to a low-hummed quick-step of his own. He made more noise than did the other. A moment afterward the bar was lifted cautiously from its socket, the latch clicked gently, and the door swung open. On the threshold stood my lady Margery, and just behind her some broad figure of a woman whom I knew for her stout Norman tiring-maid. She dragged the woman in with her and closed the door. At that I found my tongue.

"Margery! Why have you come?" I spoke in French, and she was quick to lay a finger on her lip.

"Speak to me in English, if you please," she whispered. "Jeanne knows nothing, and she need not know. But you ask why I come: could I do less than come, dear friend?"

I think my lady must have known how hard is was for me to speak, for, when the silence had grown overlong, she said, gently: "I bought these flying minutes of the sentry, Monsieur John. Will you not use them?"

"If I should say the thing I ought to say, you'll think the minutes dearly bought, I fear."

"No, that I shall not, if it will ease your mind."

"I have but one thought. It is love; love for you, and—and Richard Jennifer."

She rose, and I could see her eyes ashine for all the half-gloom of the candle-light.

"You are a loyal friend!" she said, and there was that within the words to make me glad, whatever fate the dawn would have in store for me. "You always think of others first; you think of others now, when—when death—Oh, Monsieur John! what can I do for you? say quick! The man is coming to the door!"

"Now I have told you this, there is but one other thing, Margery dear; one little thing that will not let me die in peace. If I might have ten words with Richard Jennifer——"

She left me in a fever-flutter of excitement, whipped to the door, and had a word with him who stood without. I heard the chink of coin, and then she hastened back to me, all eagerness and tremulous impatience.

"Tell me—tell me instantly what I must do. I am not afraid. Shall I ride down to Jennifer House and fetch Dick here?"

"He is a prisoner, and if he were not, they would not let him see me. Besides, I would not let you go on such an errand. And yet there is many an innocent life hanging on this; the lives of helpless women and little children. Have you ever a messenger to send, a man who will risk his life and can be trusted fully?"

"Yes, yes!" she cried. "Write it down for me and Dick shall have it. Quick!"

I sat down to the table to write my message to Richard Jennifer. There were quills and an ink-pot at hand, but no paper. I felt mechanically in my pocket and found, not some old letter, as I hoped, but the crampled parchment map snatched and hidden when Captain Stuart had winced and dropped it at the bidding of the whistling sword about his ears.

How it was they had not searched me for it, I know not; though haply the captain did not guess how he had lost it. Be that as it might, I had it safe, and Dick should have it safe, and use it, too, to some good purpose, as I fondly hoped. I crowded the narrative of all that I had seen and heard into a niggard three-score words or less. But this I did, writing them upon the margin of the captain's map, and noting in an added line the pricking out of the powder convoy's route. My eager little lady snatched and hid the parchment in her bosom, and was gone.

I watched and listened. Now it came to me that while I would be saving life, mayhap I had been periling it again. There was small doubt that if the messenger were taken with my letter, his life would pay the forfeit, and both Margery and Dick would be involved. Suddenly, out of the ghostly shadows of the trees and into the wan moonlight of the open space beneath my window came three figures riding abreast—a man in trooper trappings on either hand, and on the led horse sandwiched in between, a woman who was taken from her horse and led into the house. Then there came a hasty trampling in the corridor, and a quick unbarring of the door. I turned upon my heel to face a young ensign come with two men at his back to take me to the colonel.

They bound me well and strongly with many wrappings of stout cord before they led me down. When we were come into the room below they let me stand beside my dear lady, and when I stole a glance at her I was fain to think my coming gave her courage and support. When my guards had thrust me forward, the colonel made short work of our fresh offense.

"'Twas a dastard's trick, my Captain—this tangling of the lady in your treason," he began. "How did you get your speech with her?"

"That is none of your affair, Colonel Tarleton," I retorted boldly. "Yet I may say that the lady knew not what she did, not why."

"'Twas I who bribed your sentry, and I did go to Captain Ireton's room," spoke up the lady quickly.

The colonel laughed and shot a gibe sharp at my enemy.

"How is this, Sir Francis? This captain-emeritus hath forestalled you beautifully."

I saw no way to clear her, and had there been the plainest way, dumb rage would still have held me tongue-tied. So I could only mop and mow and stammer, and, when the words were found, make shift to blunder out that such an accusation did the lady grievous wrong; that she had come attended and at my beseeching, to take a message from a dying man to one who was his friend.

"A likely story, that!" scoffed the colonel. "Next you will say she knew not what this message was."

"I said it once. She knew not what the message was, nor why I sent it."

I felt her eyes upon mes s I spoke, and turned to find them full of tearful pleading. "Oh, tell the truth!" she whispered. "Don't you see? He has the letter!"

I looked, and sure enough he held it in his hand; and then I understood the flash of irony in the sloe-black eyes of him.

"You lie clumsily, Captain Ireton, though it is a gentlemanly lie and does you honor. But we have trapped you fairly and you may as well make a clean breast of it. Your lady love knew very well what you would have her do, and since she is your lady love, went to do it."

While he was speaking I had a thought white-hot from some forge-fire fo inspiration—a thought to tip an arrow of conviction and set it quivering in the mark. I would not stop to measure it. I looked the colonel boldly in the eye and drew the bow and sped the shaft.

"You think no other than a lady love would have done this, Colonel Tarleton—that it was done for love? Well, so it was; but with the love there went a duty. This lady is my wife."

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Henry Skelton, a farmer near Evansville, was fatally injured while hunting. The breech pin blew out of his gun, and, striking him in the forehead, penetrated the brain.

Because his wife, a physical culturist, persisted in making him sleep in a room with all the windows open when the thermometer was 12 degrees below zero, Gustav Hennig, of Hammond, has brought suit for divorce.

Few rabbits are being used as food in the vicinity of St. Paul, owing to a report being circulated that the bunnies are affected with a malady similar to diphtheria. A farmer stated that rabbits there were not suffering with whooping cough.

Will Maynard, aged 4, of Hazleton, narrowly escaped burning to death, but had a much narrower escape from death when his mother nearly drowned him by shoving him in a tub of soapsuds to quench the flames. The burns he sustained were trivial, but a doctor worked over him for an hour in reviving him from his dip in the soapsuds.

Stricken with paralysis, Mrs. Zenas Finney, of Princeton, fell into an open grate, but was saved from death by her daughter Jennie. Mrs. Finney was talking over a telephone with her daughter, an operator at a local exchange, when stricken. The daughter heard the sound of the fall and at once telephoned to neighbors to investigate. They found Mrs. Finney enveloped in flames, but physicians say she will live.

The little town of Avilla, in Noble County, twenty miles north of Fort Wayne, may be left three-quarters of a mile away by the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad, which has made surveys and is figuring on the construction of a cut-off south of Kendallville to eliminate a heavy grade in the vicinity of Avilla. A few years ago the Baltimore & Ohio railroad moved its tracks half a mile south of the town to avoid a grade and sharp curves.

Miss Ella McCausland, a pretty 18-year-old equestrienne, who has been training in circus winter quarters at Evansville, was arrested a few days ago by Deputy Immigration Inspector Thompson. It is charged that she had slipped into the United States without examination from Vancouver, B. C., where she lived in the family of Rev. Mr. Bloomberger. She is fighting extradition, and says that the pastor opposes her love for horses and the ring.

Lincoln Hall, agent for a life insurance company of South Bend, died in an ambulance in Fort Wayne, due to heart affection. He was waiting the rise of the curtain at a theater when suddenly a scream startled the large audience, which was mostly women, and he was seen to slide out of his seat to the floor. He was carried to the foyer. The audience was on the verge of a panic when the orchestra was signaled to play and the curtain rose.

Commissioner J. M. Sanders, of Connersville, owns a mare that chews tobacco. Mr. Sanders observed several months ago that the mare would stretch her nose out wistfully whenever any one took out a plug near her, or even when any one with tobacco in his pockets came near. Out of curiosity he fed the animal a small quantity of the weed, which she ground up and swallowed with evident relish. Her appetite for the pressed leaf has reached such lengths that, when hitched to a rack or in her stall she will beg for a "chew" of every man who comes near.

Prescence of mind of a towerman at Plymouth averted what would have undoubtedly been a disastrous wreck on the Pennsylvania railroad. When he saw that the engineer of a west-bound passenger train would be unable, owing to the slippery condition of the track, to stop his train in time to avoid going off the derail at the Vandalia crossing, the towerman threw a switch which sent the oncoming train into a siding, where it came to a stop after crashing into a cut of cars standing there. Five passengers and two postal clerks were slightly injuerd, but all were able to proceed with the train. There is a high embankment at the spot and had the train gone off the derail it would certainly have overturned.

Dr. and Mrs. Jesse Reagan, of Plainfield, celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage recently. Dr. and Mrs. Reagan were married near West Newton on January 10, 1850. Only one person is living who attended the wedding—Mrs. Lucinda Wewesee, sister of Mrs. Reagan, who was present at the celebration. Dr. Reagan will be 84 years old in a few days and his wife is three years his junior. He lived in Plainfield when a small boy and was a witness to the upsetting of the stage in 1842, when President Van Buren was dumped into a mud hole near a big elm tree which today is known as the Van Buren elm. Dr. Reagan has practiced medicine for fifty-six years. He was surgeon in the army, a member of the One-hundred-and-forty-eighth regiment.

Henry Fork, a trapper near Lincoln City, caught a large wolf in a steel trap which he set near his home. This is the first wolf in several years to be caught in the southern part of the State.

David Shanks, a farmer living south of Mitchell, has among his poultry several quails which stay and roost with his hens. They came to his yard when quite young, and show no inclination to leave. He will protect them and endeavor to increase the number.

Walter McLaughlin, of Oakland City, will drill a wildcat oil well midway between that city and Petersburg in an attempt to connect the gas field at Petersburg with the Oakland City field.

Carl Gleisger, one of the wealthiest saloon men of Evansville, and prominent in the Knights of St. John and German Catholic circles, died there suddenly. He was formerly one of the State officers in the Knights of Fidelity.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Floyd, of Shelbyville, celebrated their sixty-first wedding anniversary recently. With the exception of one year spent at Effingham, Ill., they have been residents of Shelbyville all their lives. Floyd is 81 and Mrs. Floyd 78 years old. They are the parents of W. E. Floyd, of Muncie; Eugene Floyd, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Lon Trees, of Washington Township.

Two large foxes were caught alive by hunters three miles east of Milton. One of them was taken in a trap by Allie Trine. The other was scared up on the farm of Ott Crownover, where it had been living on chickens, and was chased several miles by Albert Newman, Fred Murley and Ott Crownover. Just as it was about to escape into its burrow, Albert Newman caught it by the tail.

The Indiana Dairy Association concluded its annual convention at Purdue University. The association adopted resolutions favoring a continuance of the present oleomargarin law, also that a new woman's building and a new dairy building be erected at Purdue. D. B. Johnson, of Mooresville, was re-elected president; I. B. Calvin, of Kewanna, vice president, and J. D. Jarvis, of Lafayette, secretary-treasurer.

The Winslow flour mills at Oakland City were saved from destruction by a peculiar circumstance. A large tool box in the boiler room caught fire. Running directly over the tool box was a large hose, connected with a water heater outside the building. The blaze from the tool box burned the hose, letting several thousand gallons of water into the boiler room, extinguishing the fire and saving the company a loss of probably $15,000.

When it accidentally touched with the tip of its nose the iron post used for an awning support, and to which it was hitched in front of a grocery, a horse, belonging to Charles Schramm, a farmer of northeast of Portland, received a shock which felled it to the street. A wire of the city electric circuit entering the building had become crossed with the iron and falling rain caused the entire structure to become highly electrified.

January is a red letter month in the calendar of the Webbers, an old and prominent family of Jeffersonville, for five brothers and sisters all celebrate their birthday anniversaries during the month, as follows: Mrs. Anna Gorman, of Borden, on January 9; Edward Weber, of Jeffersonville, on January 11; Mrs. E. C. Eaken, on January 13; Mrs. Nora Walker, of Bedford, on January 19, and John Weber, of Los Angeles, on January 23.

The number of inmates of the Jeffersonville Reformatory is steadily decreasing, and when the count was made last week it was shown to be smaller than it has been for the last three years, and 170 less than the maximum reached during the last year. The decrease is mainly due to a more liberal parole policy. There were two new arrivals, both from Indianapolis, Albert Williams and George Brown, and five convicts went out when these two arrived.

Indiana postmasters have been appointed as follows: Burrows, Carroll County, Gilbert H. Montgomery, vice J. E. Dixon, removed; Mecca, Parke County, V. V. Bradfield, vice W. A. Wood, resigned. Rural carriers appointed: Greensburg, Route 11, Greeley G. Robbins, carrier; W. W. Robbins, substitute; Route 7, James E. Gaunt, carrier; George Rogers, substitute; Martinsville, Route 6, G. O. Harper, carrier; Ruth Harper, substitute; Route 9, Robinson R. Russell, carrier; Clara N. Russell, substitute; Route 4, Herbert E. Nash, carrier; Oscar H. Bray, substitute.

Charles R. Fenimore, a barber of Evansville, has a razor which, he says, brings good luck to the man that is shaved with it. Fenimore shaved Thomas Swope, a street car conductor, who, during the lats riot is alleged to have shot and killed Herbert Kapler, a strike sympathizer. The day after Swope was shaved the grand jury ignored his case and Swope was set at liberty. Fenimore used the same razor on Robert Boyd, who was charged with killing D. C. Dawes, a section foreman, and when Boyd was tried on the charge of murder he was acquitted. Christian Voigt, who was charged with the murder of Louis Fox in a saloon at Wadesville, was shaved with the same razor the day before his acquittal in Evansville.

Jos. J. Reits, deputy postmaster of Evansville for eight years under President Cleveland; former city councilman and county auditor, and one of the leading Democrats of that city, died a few days ago, aged 73 years.

Over two hundred persons participated in a fox drive in the northeastern part of Decatur County last week. Owing to the fact that two of the lines were weak, only one fox was caught, two escaping. The lone prize was sold to Clyde Ketchin for $5.50 at auction.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Dun's Weekly Review of Chicago Trade says:

The underlying conditions augment the prospects for enlarging trade, although cross currents adversely interfere with current operations. Stormy weather yet hinders outside construction and freight movements, and increasing difficulties in getting coal is responsible for temporary lessening of active factory capacity. The high value of money also causes decreased investment, but the volume of payments through the banks yet shows larger than at this time last year, when the security markets were expanded. While discouraging to transportation, the heavy snowfall secures further protection for growing wheat and rye, and the demand is notably good for necessaries in the leading retail lines here and at the interior. Speculative dealings have stimulated activity in the primary markets for breadstuffs and provisions and arrivals of the principal grains exceed those reported recently and a year ago.

Bank clearings, $272,275,060, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1909 by barely 1 per cent, and compare with $221,967,319 in 1908.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 36, against 28 last week, 33 in 1909 and 47 in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 7, against 5 last week, 10 in 1909 and 19 in 1908.

NEW YORK.

Reports as to trade and transportation reflect variations of weather irregularly affecting sales and movement of farm products and coal supplies and of spring goods to various markets. Retail trade in winter goods has been helped by cold, stormy weather and the usual January price revisions. A very fair volume of reorders is reported by jobbers, while the volume of orders for spring reaching wholesale houses from travelers is fairly good.

The question of higher costs is being considered by many manufacturers, who are finding higher prices for raw materials and requests for advances in wages.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with Jan. 13 were 291, against 271 last week, 319 in the like week of 1909, 331 in 1908, 234 in 1907 and 279 in 1906.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 44, which compares with 33 for last week and 36 for the like week of 1909.—Bradstreet's.

Answers to Journal Article

St. Joe Man Given Something to Think About. Two News Readers Defend the "Dry" Side with Good Argument.

Some disgruntled son of Annanias, through the columns of the "Journal Gazette" has sought to set right the deluded people of DeKalb County who saw fit to remove saloons from among us. In reply to this gossamer tissue of falsehoods, the writer will carefully pick out one by one each of the arguments presented by this Bacchanalian advocate. He says, he believes with good saloon regulation most of the dry territory will have its saloons back again. Why regulation? If the saloon is a good thing why should any restrictions be placed upon it? We don't have to have restrictions upon the dry goods business nor any business, that makes for peace and prosperity and the general good of humanity. The man from Albion, must indeed be fortunate to live in a community where no drunks are seen, we have some in old DeKalb yet. But any individual that has the brazen effrontery to make the statement, that there are as many drunks here now, as there was before the removal of the saloons has an awful cavity in his "brain pan". With just as much consistency one might argue that as much sawed lumber would be made in St. Joe if it did not have a saw-mill in its borders.

Another preposterous assumption of this braying ass is, that over 90 per cent of the people drink liquor. If this statement possessed one grain of truth there would be a cause for greater activity against the traffic than ever, but it isn't true. Why do you believe in home rule, "Mr. Subscriber?" Honest, now, is it not because the "wet" cause you champion so loudly, sees in it greater safety; that their strongholds in the great cities will suffer less at the hands of the people, where a corrupt set of public officials rule rather than the people? Your statement that you have always been a republican, but will henceforth vote the democrat ticket, seems to me, to be an insinuation that democracy stands for indecency, and this looks like an unpleasant reflection upon the democrat party, and will be resented by the respectable element of that organization.

Another thing, you say prohibition fanatics tell us taxes are less in "dry" territories than in "wet", and you want some fanatic to explain how they will be less in dry territory. When that destroyer of homes, the legalized saloon, is outlawed, sober employes can purchase bread instead of liquid damnation, can live in homes instead of hovels, can wear clothing instead of rags, will not allow their wives to support them by taking in washings, will not be discriminated against by railroad and insurance companies, will put their money in useful articles, life's necessities and comforts thus increasing a demand for those articles and stimulating trade in these lines, creating a demand for labor on this account. And not only that, the tax-payers money will not be used so much for defending criminal cases, support jails and almshouses which get a large per cent of their inmates from the finished product of the bar room. In nearly every instance when "wet" counties are compared with "dry" to show a lower tax rate for the "wets", you will find if you investigate that the dry county has some special improvement to pay for. This the liquorites wilfully overlook and grossly misrepresent.

Now about organization of the wets it strikes us that from the amount of "booze" literature circulated during the campaign, the rummies had some organization. As to making speeches, say, wouldn't that be funny? Wouldn't it be nice to hear some silk hatted, diamond bedazzled representative of "The beer that made Milwaukee famous", show us how virtue, sobriety, honor, and all the virtues could be greatly enhanced by liberal potations daily of a foaming glass of "suds". Picture to yourself a parade of red nosed bums, thieves, cutthroats, anarchists and all the rif-raff rag tag and tatterdemalion, ward heelers and a vast army of depraved beings of this stripe. Wouldn't it be a splendid object lesson for the poor deluded temperance crank, who threatens the life of our republic? Someone proposed to a certain Chinese ruler, that he collect a tax or revenue from a vice practiced by the Chinese, when he replied "God forbid that I should collect a revenue from the vices of my countrymen". Say why don't we send a few more missionaries to that benighted country to show them how we do things in Christian America. Yes, "Mr. Subscriber" when we vote again, we will vote to create more positions, and to keep more people out of the poorhouse, and we'll do it by registering a vote to throttle that vampire, that arch fiend that preys upon legitimate business and sends more souls to hell than any other evil tolerated in this country. The conscience of the people is waking and it will judge for itself.

A READER.

EDITOR NEWS:

I noticed a clipping from the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette published in THE NEWS that a most wonderful conversion had taken place in St. Joe. "Changed in the twinkling of an eye" as it were, from a "dry" to a "wet" and then some. Oh, it's straight goods alright, and regular: repentance that he had voted wet; open confession of sin, in that he had always voted the republican ticket; firm resolutions to sin no more, and then his going forth among his neighbors and singing the hallelujah chorus, "Once I was blind but now I can see', until three of them were converted!

Notwithstanding all this he is so parsimonious of the truth that I am compelled to accept most of his statements as I do RED SEAL LIE—98 per cent pure!

St. Joe Subscriber agrees with Angola Subscriber that 90 per cent of the people drink. However, St. Joe Subscriber and his three disciples do not because he says so himself—a case of present company not included! If the two Subscribers will EXCLUDE women and children as non people, and then INCLUDE as DRINKERS, all who may take an occasional drink, and all those who use it under the direction of reputable physicians in cases of sickness the percentage would no doubt be pretty high but not alarming.

Opposition to the liquor traffic very largely against the saloon as an INSTITUTION. The people know that evil and nothing but evil emanate from it; they know that the boozing ken and the brothel are twin sisters born of the devil and human greed; they know they are continual law-breakers and the training school of criminals; they know there are no well regulated saloons; they know they are the continual tempters of the young and of those whose weakened will power renders them unable to resist, their lure; they know their corrupting influence in politics; they know the licensed saloon has more opportunities and greater allurements than the "bootlegger", and is more dangerous to the community at large, and knowing these things they prefer the "bootlegger" and "blind tiger" to the licensed saloon. They know too that the "B. L." and the "B. T." will get what is coming to them in due time.

Yes, Concord township knows these things. The people have had fourteen years of Township local option by remonstrance, and considers County Option a long step in the right direction. In consequence Concord township and Spencer, of which Spencer township was formerly a part, rolled up a majority of 190—two to one for the dry ticket. This majority be it remembered was given in two townships where Democrats and Republicans are a close stand off; and notwithstanding every effort was made by the "wets" to array "dry" Democrats against the measure, by appealing to party prejudice; even Representative McKennan making this despicable appeal through the Public Press.

As an answer a good many of us put our Democracy into cold storage; and if our party leaders persist in trying to make us march tied to Steve Flemming's beer wagons, we'll be frozen stiff by the next election day.

We are gravely informed by "Subscriber" that Seneca Co., Ohio, gets $61,000 saloon tax. "Subscriber's" mathematics is alright, anyhow. Sixty-one saloons at $1,000 amounts to $61,000. That's what high license is intended to do, BRIBE the voters into shifting just burdens from their own shoulders to those of hungry women and children. The drinkers pay the tax. Their families suffer. He also has informed us that Alabama has gone back to the saloon. If I read the Associated Press dispatches correctly, Alabama is still dry. The vote in question being to put prohibition into the constitution, and in no way affecting the state law upon the subject.

"Subscriber's" illusion to the drunk at Spencerville is rather unfortunate for his side; since it raises at least the possibility that he got his booze at Hurshtown where that highly moral institution a "well regulated saloon" (?) blesses that part of Allen County and sheds its beneficent rays as far as Spencerville, only 2½ miles distant.

"Subscriber's" most heart rending "weep" however, is over the fact that the wicked farmers of DeKalb robbed Garrett of the brightest jewel in her municipal crown—her saloons. These wicked ones are wise to the fact Garrett does not pay the criminal costs, jail and pauper expenses caused by Garrett's coronet of lems, and that they are paid by the county at large and for this very reason the county as a whole should be the unit and have a say.

"Isn't it awful Mabel".

However, two out of six of Garrett's precincts goes a dry majority. It was expected the other four would be "wet" on account of the large number of voters who spell their names with two or three mouthsful of consonants apiece. They have not yet learned that liberty and a beer barrel are not synonymous terms.

Do you keep account of everything on the farm? If not, how are you going to tell whether you are gaining or losing?

Some men who are not fit to have a dollar, rail at their wives about a ten-cent waste; yet will firmly hand over $2 to the saloon man for "distilled damnation," as one minister puts it.

I have seen men and women working around the farm or house until eleven o'clock at night, or later; and yet with years of such lost rest and nerve force they were very little ahead. Better go to bed at nine, get a good rest, and get up early, with quiet nerves. Then you can do double work.

M. E. Church Announcements

Spencerville M. E. Church is being awakened as it has not been for some time. The real old pentecostal fire is burning upon the alter and souls are being saved. Sunday evening the house was packed and people stood up all terough the service that they get the good of the meeting. Three came to the alter and were nicely saved and one united with the church as the result of that meeting. Our meetings last week were well attended and every meeting had its telling effect. Sunday morning at class meeting the fire came down souls were revived and the windows of Heaven were opened and the people were richly blessed. We are looking for greater and better meetings this week than those of last week. Meeting every night this week and at 2:00 P. M. each day beginning Tuesday and including Friday. We invite you to come to these afternoon meetings.

Monday, January 31—2:00 P. M. will be our 4th quarterly conference at Spencerville and in the evening will be quarterly meeting. Dr. C. U. Wade will have charge of this meeting. Let us make this a great fellowship meeting, everyone welcome.

Lime-sulphur wash as a remedy for the rabbit pest: During the last year the lime-sulphur wash, which for a number of years has been employed to prevent damage to trees by the San Jose scale, was tried with great success in several localities as a protection for orchard tree trunks against the attacks of rabbits, says Secretary Wilson. The remedy is cheap, and as a rule a single treatment in the fall appears to protect trees for the entire winter. Its more extensive use is recommended.

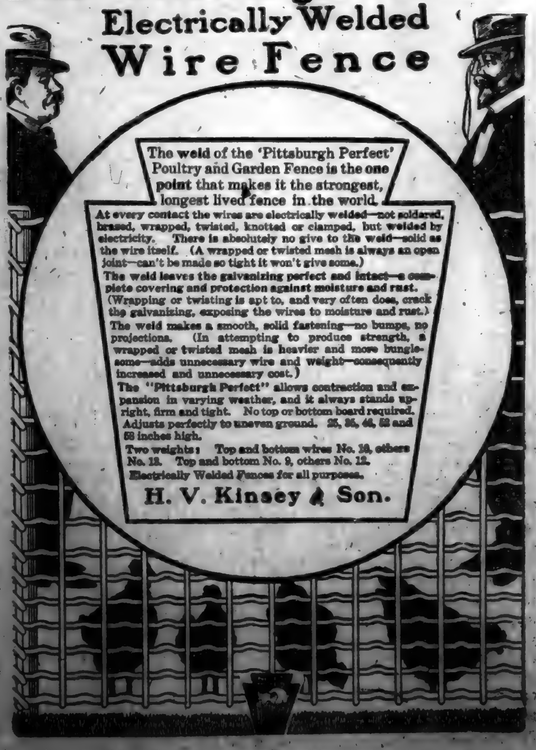
The "Pittsburgh Perfect" Electrically Welded Wire Fence



The weld of the 'Pittsburgh Perfect' Poultry and Garden Fence is the one point that makes it the strongest, longest lived fence in the world.

At every contact the wires are electrically welded—not soldered, brazed, wrapped, twisted, knotted or clamped, but welded by electricity. There is absolutely no give to the weld—solid as the wire itself. (A wrapped or twisted mesh is always an open joint—can't be made so tight it won't give some.)

The weld leaves the galvanizing perfect and intact—a complete covering and protection against moisture and rust. (Wrapping or twisting is apt to, and very often does, crack the galvanizing, exposing the wires to moisture and rust.)

The weld makes a smooth, solid fastening—no bumps, no projections. (In attempting to produce strength, a wrapped or twisted mesh is heavier and more bungle-some—adds unnecessary wire and weight—consequently increased and unnecessary cost.)

The "Pittsburgh Perfect" allows contraction and expansion in varying weather, and it always stands upright, firm and tight. No top or bottom board required. Adjusts perfectly to uneven ground. 25, 35, 46, 58 and 68 inches high.

Distinguished Refugees.

Among the distinguished men who have sought refuge in the United States from political oppression abroad were Talleyrand, whose subsequent career for brilliant achievement is without parallel in executive statesmanship; Joseph Bonaparte, elder brother of Napoleon, who lived at Bordentown, N. J.; Brillat-Savarin, author of the Philosophy of Food, who subsequently became an eminent judge in France; Tom Paine, author of the Rights of Man; Cobbett, the great political economist; Carl Schurz, Oswald Ottendorfer, founder of the New York Staats-Zeitung; Dr. Emil Pretorius, founder of the St. Louis Westliche Post; Gen. Franz Sigel, Thomas Francis Meagher, leader of the Irish Brigade in the civil war; Garbaldi, O'Donovan Rossa, John Boyle O'Reilly, the eminent poet, and Moreau, the only rival that Napoleon feared.

To these names of distinguished men who sought the protection of American law against pursuit by their political enemies elsewhere may be added that of Porfirio Diaz, now president of Mexico, who was at New Orleans in July, 1875, with a reward of $50,000 out for his apprehension.

WHEN DINNER COMES

One Ought to Have a Good Appetite.

A good appetite is the best sauce. It goes a long way toward helping in the digestive process, and that is absolutely essential to health and strength.

Many persons have found that Grape-Nuts food is not only nourishing but is a great appetizer. Even children like the taste of it and grow strong and rosy from its use.

It is especially the food to make a weak stomach strong and create an appetite for dinner.

"I am 57 years old," writes a Tenn. grandmother, "and have had a weak stomach from childhood. By great care as to my diet I enjoyed a reasonable degree of health, but never found anything to equal Grape-Nuts as a standby.

"When I have no appetite for breakfast and just eat to keep up my strength, I take 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with good rich milk, and when dinner comes I am hungry. While if I go without any breakfast I never feel like eating dinner. Grape-Nuts for breakfast seems to make a healthy appetite for dinner.

"My little 12-months-old grandson had been very sick with stomach trouble during the past summer, and finally we put him on Grape-Nuts. Now he is growing plump and well. When asked if he wants his nurse or Grape-Nuts, he brightens up and points to the cupboard. He was no trouble to wean at all—thanks to Grape-Nuts." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE PRIVATE PULPIT

THE LIGHTENING LOAD.

By Henry F. Cope.

It is an easy matter to talk dolefully of the burdens we must bear, to look out with the tearful eye and survey the whole race going on its way with bent shoulders, dropping to the vast chasm of the grave in the dim hope of a burden free life. But to use our burdens as inspiration for poems of pessimism is to miss their purpose utterly.

Man is a strange creature in this matter of burden bearing as in others. Take this man, for instance, who has been for years complaining that his load was too much for him. Now, at last, his burden has been lifted; it is gone, and what is the first thing he will do, what but go forth assiduously seeking new burdens? Men cannot be happy without them.

There is a fine art in burden bearing. Some people think it is the art of making another carry the load while you carry the tag, while others imagine it is a matter of blinding yourself to what is on your shoulders. But it is in neither of these ways. Strange to say, it is a matter of carrying the burdens we have by adding others to them.

Many a man has died of a broken life from the weight of one little burden simply because he has borne it as a slave, while others grow ever more eerct with increasing loads because they take them up gladly, eagerly choosing to bear them. Our burdens are our blessings when we choose them wisely.

The shrill laughter of childhood mellows into calmer, deeper joys of later years as duty comes into our vocabulary; we take up our work and discover the meanings of living. For a moment we may envy the child's care free days, but who would lose for them that enriching of our hearts that has really dropped into them from our burdens?

Look over the richest lives the world has known and how heavy have been their loads. Lincoln, with a nation's woe upon him, Livingstone with a continent, and Jesus with a world. Who could bear more and yet who could give more than these? The world's stream flows richer because of the gift of their courage, hops, and love.

Their cares were not their own; they cared for others. This is the secret of joy in every way of life. A woman never knows the joy of living, nor is her life a blessing in itself, until she bends beneath the burdens of home and motherhood. The youth suddenly rises and enriches into manhood when he takes a home on his shoulders.

Taking up the burdens of others we not only lose the sense of the weight of our own, but we turn the whole matter of burden bearing into a process of strengthening, sweetening, and enriching life. In this the best is developed; here grow the fair flowers of sympathy, gentleness, forgiveness, and mercy; all the ameliorating influences of life spring from the necessity of common helpfulness.

This is the higher law of life, that we should find ourselves in serving others, that we should learn love through helpfulness and sacrifice. This is what is meant by the way of the cross, not a punishment to be borne, but a ministry to be shared, a chance to enter into other lives by taking up their loads.

This would be a cold and desolate world if we never needed one another; if there were no drafts on sympathy, pity, tenderness, and help these fair blooms would soon perish; the godlike in us could never be but for such human needs, our weaknesses, and our cares. Like dull slaves we would lie inert under our own burdens, but for the call of another's need, bidding us arise and walk with him.

Look into the faces on the street; you find depth, joy, light, and cheer never in those who care only for their own needs and ever in those who take into the area of their own lives the cares and needs of others. They have learned the secret of living, which is to share life, and the secret of lightening our loads, which is to bear the burdens of others.

You will not need to hunt for burdens; you need not become a professional uplifter. Simply keep the life hospitable to the lives of others, make living a business of sharing strength and love. Never say to yourself, I have no strength to spare. Live for the life of all and you shall find all of life.

LIVE UP TO YOUR FAITH.

By Cyrus Townsend Brady.

Nicodemus—he that came to Jesus by night.—St. John vii. 50.

The gospels are marvels of condensation. There is room for no idle words in them; superfluous statements are rigidly excluded. The importance of repetition is therefore apparent. We find in St. John's Evangel a man named Nicodemus thrice mentioned in connection with Jesus. In the first reference it is noted that he came to Jesus secretly and by night. In the next two, one of which took place before the death of the Nazarene and the other after, the fact of that nocturnal visit is restated, so that Nicodemus the rich, wealthy member of the Sanhedrin, who was only a half-hearted disciple of Jesus, is always and forever identified and referred to as a man who come seeking the truth secretly and by night.

To trace his career is interesting. His condition in life has been stated; timidity was his prevailing characteristic. He had insight to suspect the truth, mentality to acknowledge it, but not courage to live it and proclaim it. It is well that that lacking quality which prevented him from being numbered with the apostles should be brought to the fore, for he is a type of humanity by no means uncommon. He knew what was right but he did not have the courage to shape his life in accordance with his knowledge. His belief was not operative. It was not practical. In politics he would cry loudly for reform and yet vote for his party in the final test.

The last scene in his life is tragically typical. When the man in whom he only half believed, whom he had defended faint-heartedly, whom he had sought by night, was dead, be came with unavailing tears and futile gifts to pay belated trbute, respect and affection. How useless then! It required some courage, doubtless, to do that. He had progressed somewhat from his nocturnal and secret visits; even his sorry touch of the Master had wrought that much change. Perhaps that was the beginning of a greater change, which would eventually make him a bold adherent, standing four squares for what he thought and believed. We do not know as to that.

How often have we looked at our dead and longed for another opportunity to show them the affection and consideration which we withheld in life and which the great termination has brought into our being as an illumination.

"Oh!" said the wife of a deceased clergyman to a body of men who were passing resolutions after the death of their friend, and telling what he had been to them. "Oh, gentlemen, if you thought thus of my husband, why didn't you tell him while he was yet alive?"

And the gentle reproof was well deserved.

Do not be afraid to stand for what you believe. Do not proclaim your adherence to man and creed secretly and by night, but in the broad and open light of day. Do not seek to expiate your cowardice by a tardy, if expensive, recognition — too late. It will only serve to show, not what might be, but what ought to have been. In belief and action hold it firmly, live it fearlessly, do it now.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

HARVEST HOME.

By Dean Henry Alford.

[This song might well be called the "Thanksgiving Hymn" of the English people. It was written in 1844 by the Rev. Henry Alford, D. D. (London, Oct. 7, 1810—Canterbury, Jan. 12, 1871). He was then dean of Canterbury Cathedral, a post which he held until his death. Alford is well known, both as a preacher and a writer. His "Greek Testament" was for many years a standard work. He is also the author of several fine hymns. In English churches this hymn is always sung at the harvest home services, which correspond to our Thanksgiving Day gatherings. It has also come into common use in the church services on our national day of praise. It is usually sung to the tune of "St. George," composed by George J. Elvery.]

Come, ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of harvest home!
All is safely gathered in,
Ere the winter storms begin:
God, our Maker, doth provide
For our wants to be supplied:
Come to God's own temple, come,
Raise the song of harvest home.

We ourselves are God's own field,
Fruit unto his praise to yield;
Wheat and tares together sown
Unto joy or sorrow grown;
First the blade, and then the ear;
Then the full corn shall appear;
Lord of harvest! grant that we
Wholesome grain and pure may be.

For the Lord our God shall come,
And shall take his harvest home;
From his field shall purge away
All that doth offend that day;
Give his angels charge at last
In the fire the tares to cast;
But the fruitful ears to store
In his garner evermore.

SERMONETTES.

A good many opinions rise in the stomach.

Oily people make most of life's friction.

My own faults are failings; my neighbor's are vices.

No man sees anything as it is unless he sees that which is not.

Grace is free, but the religious man need not be free from grace.

The way to the sorrow free land is to try to free some life from sorrow.

Often you must forget the good you have won to reach the good you would be.

Much so-called religious effort is an attempt to make others feel as bad as we do.

The thing that worries some saints is that God seems to be doing things without consulting them.

Smiles of the Day

Fertile in Explanation.

She—George, did you mail that letter I gave you last Monday morning?

He (cornered, but fertile in expedients)—No, I didn't. And what's more, I demand to know its contents!

She (amazed)—Why, George, what's the matter?

He (inwardly delighted)—I'm jealous, that's what's the matter! Madly, desperately, insanely jealous!

She—You dear old goose! It's only a letter to Cousin Sue.

He (apparently much relieved)—Is that all? How foolish of me. I'll go out and mail it at once.—Plain Dealer.

In New York.

Hotel Clerk—Do you want a room with a bath?

Uncle Hiram—Wa-al, no-o; I don't calculate I'll be here Saturday night.—Princeton Tiger.

"What's a pyromaniac, sis?"

Likely to Change His View.

Guest—You're in luck to be able to serve beefsteak at the present prices.

Host—Wait till you eat the steak. You may then think it is tough luck.—St. Louis Star.

A Yearning for Home.

"Were you ever homesick?" asked the statesman who has been abroad.

"Frequently," replied the blunt colleague. "I feel that way every time you pass out one of those long speeches."—Washington Star.

Sure to Get Along.

Belle—But do you think you and he are suited to each other?

Nell—O, perfectly! Our tastes are quite similar. I don't care much for him, and he doesn't care much for me.—Figaro.

An Absolute Necessity.

Wifey—You told me the other day we must avoid all luxuries and confine ourselves to absolute necessities only.

Hubby—That's so, my dear.

Wifey—Well, last night you came home in a cab.

Hubby—Yes, but that was an absolute necessity.—Fliegende Blatter.

Mary's Company.

Mistress—Did you have company last night, Mary?

Mary—Only my Aunt Maria, mum.

Mistress—When you see her again will you tell her that she left her tobacco pouch on the piano?—Illustrated Bits.

Misanthropic Summary.

"People's ideas of Christmas cheer change as they grow older," said the observant citizen.

"Yes," answered Mr. Growcher, "with a small boy it's a stomach-ache, and with a grown man it's a headache."—Washington Star.

His Painful Duty.

"Mr. So-and-So, your daughter has referred me to you."

"Then I guess your chances with her are nil, young man. Referring 'em to me is her way of letting 'em down easy."—Washington Herald.

When Trouble Is Found.

Church—I see the subway cars have trials as well as the trolleys.

Gotham—Oh, yes; the trouble is not all on the surface.—Yonkers Statesman.

Father's Stratagem.

George—Why, that can't be! Your father gave me a cigar a moment since as I came in the door.

A Distinction.

"Some people say 'lunch' and some 'luncheon,' and yet, of course, both mean the same thing."

"I don't think so. My idea is that 'lunch' is masculine and 'luncheon' feminine."—Catholic Standard.

Not in That Neighborhood.

"My boy, do you know where Mrs. Wilkins lives? She is a lady without children."

The Eternal Feminine.

"It was to gratify your extravagant tastes," cried the desperate man, "that I committed the forgery. The crime is upon your head."

The woman started and gazed at him wonderingly. "Is my crime on straight?" she asked.—Boston Transcript.

Among the Ruins.

"Well, here we are in Pompeii. How interesting it is. Yon chariot was evidently waiting before some door. I would like to interview the ancient charioteer who drove it."

"I wouldn't."

"Why not?"

"He might want to put in a bill for his time."—Kansas City Journal.

The Handy Scapegoat.

"Our apartment house was as cold as a miser's heart yesterday."

"Of course you jumped on the janitor?"

"Well, no. Our janitor is not a safe man to jump on."

"But if you didn't blame the janitor, what did you do?"

"Blamed the tariff."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Secret.

"They say that a mummy just arrived in New York is that of the cook of Ramese II."

"That so? Well, somebody had the secret of keeping a cook," and the suburbanite sighed wistfully.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Explained.

"I wonder why Santa Claus travels in a sleigh?" asked one precocious youngster.

"That's easy," replied the other. "After he gets through buying all those presents he can't afford automobile tires."—Washington Star.

Her Idea.

"Farm products are awfully high."

"Yes, indeed. I paid $40 for a hat with two artificial melons and a bunch of grapes on it."—Kansas City Times.

His Opinion.

"Pa, what is a braggart?"

"He's a man, my son, who is no afraid to express his opinion of himself."—Boston Transcript.

FASHION HINTS

Draped sleeves are back again as the newest sleeve touch. There are many ways of doing them, but the accompanying sketch shows one of the most attractive arrangements.

She who has remodeling in her mind sees boundless possibilities for the slightly worn waist of her silk gown—a little chiffon, net, or novelty stuff, and there you are.

His Own Method.

"Did you say you wanted to abolish our tyrannical system which enables persons who do little or nothing to exact tribute from hungry strugglers?" asked the chairman of the meeting.

"That's what I said," answered the Socialist orator, "and it got great applause."

"Yes. But don't you say it again. Remember, you got your start in life from tips while you were waiter in a restaurant."—Washington Star.

Racy Metaphor.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is a great example of a ready wit, according to the Pathfinder. He was going with a number of clergymen in to a luncheon, after some ecclesiastical function one day, when some dignitary observed:

"Now to put a bridle on our appetites!"

Charles Reade's Literary Method.

Reade's literary work was, Sir Robert Anderson remarks, a rare combination of genius and plodding. A brass scuttle which stood by the fireplace held the illustrated and other papers which reached him week by week. From these he culled anything that took his fancy, and the cuttings were thrown into a companion scuttle, to be afterward inserted in scrapbooks and duly indexed. Materials for his novels and plays were thus supplied or suggested. The accuracy of his descriptions of events and places was phenomenal.—Blackwood's Magazine.

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel [60 miles north of the International boundary]. Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conceptions. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly

70,000 Americans

1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item. Cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as lands held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions.

Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, and good railways.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

90,000 AMERICAN SETTLERS GO TO CANADA.

The Year 1909 Has Shown an Increase of Over Eighty Per Cent in American Settlement.

Recent advices from Canada, our next door neighbor, the neighborly country across the boundary line, are that upwards of ninety thousand settlers from the United States went into Western Canada during the past year, most of them for the purpose of taking up and settling upon the vacant lands, 160 acres of which are given free by the government, and lands adjoining held by railway and land companies are selling at from nine to fifteen and twenty dollars per acre. Even if thirty or forty dollars per acre were paid, the price would then be low, as the lands produce wonderfully, and at these higher figures there is a large interest on the money and labor invested. The ninety thousand settlers of this year, followed about sixty thousand last year, and for several years the figures have been running into these large figures. There must be a reason for it. It may be found in the single phrase, "They are satisfied." Nothing attracts people more than the success of others, and the news of this reaching other thousands causes them to investigate. The investigation in this case is always satisfactory. The splendid land of Iowa, of Indiana, of Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and other states has risen to a high value, and it is worth every dollar asked for it. But there is not room now for all on these lands. With the ever increasing demand for grain there comes the ever increasing demand for land. Canada is the only country on the continent in a position to supply it. Land there that costs, say, $15 an acre, produces on a reasonable calculation twenty-five bushels of wheat to the acre, or about $20. The most liberal calculation as to cost makes the cost to produce $7.50 per acre, leaving a balance of $12.50 per acre. The $7.50 carries good wages for the farmer, and all other conceivable contingencies. With conditions like this, covering the entire area of about 500,000 square miles, it is readily understood why 90,000 Americans should follow the 60,000 last year. Canadian government agencies at different points in the Union are always ready to give information regarding the free homestead lands, ready to advise the settler as to the districts which would suit him best.

To Be Sure.

"I see," observed the boarder who was looking over the newspaper, "an item here to the effect that wood pulp is likely to be used soon in the making of soups and plum pudding."

"Well, why not?" said the argumentative boarder. "Nothing is impossible to science. Don't you know that the Saratoga chip of commerce is made from basswood, shaved thin across the grain?"

Microscopic Mechanism.

Mymecides, an ancient carver, was so proficient in microscopic mechanism that he made an ivory ship, with all its decks, masts, yards, rigging and sails, in so small a compass that it might have been hidden under the wing of a fly. He also made a chariot with four wheels and as many harnessed horses, which took up scarcely more room than the ship.

TYPHOID BACILLI FOR MURDER.

Suspected Man is Known to Have Bought Germs

So firmly convinced are the relatives of Thomas H. Swope of Kansas City, that the deaths of the multi-millionaire philanthropist and his nephew, Chrisman Swope, did not occur from natural causes that they have placed the investigation into the cause of the deaths in the hands of a law firm with instructions that all the millions of the dead philanthropist be used if necessary to get at the truth.

The assertion is made that both Thomas Swope and his nephew were poisoned and that the author of the crime also inoculated the entire Swope family, consisting of eight people, with typhoid germs in an effort to exterminate them. The bodies of the two dead Swopes have been exhumed and their organs are being analyzed. The death of both Thomas and Chrisman Swope by convulsions after being taking a capsule and the subsequent serious illness of the entire Swope family with typhoid led to the investigation.

Shortly before Chrisman Swope's death, the man to whom suspicion points visited the office of a well known bacteriologist of Kansas City and obtained some typhoid germs. With these deadly bacilli those pushing the matter believe he hoped to inoculate the members of the Swope family.

"I am buying these merely to do some experimenting," he is said to have told the bacteriologist. Chrisman Swope became seriously ill with typhoid. When it was found he would likely recover, and that the inoculation of the typhus bacilli did not take as was expected, he was given strychnine to make sure of death, according to the theory of those conducting the investigation. Since that time the other seven members of the Swope family have been taken down with typhoid.

of funds in his Chicago National Bank. At the same time he expected to be informed that the last signature required to wind up his financial affairs had been affixed to the settlement agreement between himself, the associated banks which backed adjustment of the affairs of his three banks when they were suspended in 1905 and the six guarantors of his $7,121,887 note to those banks. Mr. Walsh has put his business into such shape that it can be handled by his sons, John W. and Richard W. Walsh, without his assistance.

Protege of Pinchot Appointed to Succeed Ousted Chief at Washington.

Henry S. Graves has been appointed chief forester to succeed Gifford Pinchot. Had Mr. Pinchot controlled the selection of his successor he probably would have named Mr. Graves, who is his protege, and who entertains substantially the same views and advocates practically the same policies as Mr. Pinchot. Mr. Graves was the most available man of those with the necessary technical training available, and he will take up the work laid down by Mr. Pinchot with zeal. He was born in Marietta, O., but while young his family moved to Andover, Mass., where Mr. Graves' father was for many years a member of the faculty of Phillips Andover Academy. When Mr. Pinchot became forester of the Department of Agriculture in July, 1898, Mr. Graves became his first assistant.

SOFT, WHITE HANDS

May Be Obtained in One Night.

For preserving the hands as well as for preventing redness, roughness, and chapping, and imparting that velvety softness and whiteness much desired by women Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, is believed to be superior to all other skin soaps. For those who work in corrosive liquids, or at occupations which tend to injure the hands, it is invaluable.

Treatment.—Bathe and soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Cuticura Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose gloves, or a light bandage of old cotton or linen to protect the clothing from stain. For red, rough, and chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, and shapeless nails with painful finger ends, this treatment is most effective. Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world, Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Novelists and Love.

Charles Lever believed that novelists should retire or at all events refrain from writing love stories in due season. In his fifty-ninth year the author of "Charles O'Malley" writes to his publisher: "What you hint about a real love story is good, but don't forget that Thackeray said that 'No old man must prate above love.' I remember the duke of Wellington once saying to me, referring to Warren's 'Ten Thousand a Year,' 'It is not that he never had ten thousand a year, but he never knew a man who had.' As to writing about love from memory, it is like counting over the banknotes of a bank long broken. They remind you of money, it is true, but they're only waste paper, after all."

The Blot on His Past.

"Haven't you anything to confess to me before it is too late?" she asked. "Remember that it will be much better for us to part even now than it will be after to-morrow. Think. Isn't there in your past something that you have hidden from me? Don't be afraid to confess it. I will forgive you if it is not too terrible, and then we can begin our married life with no shadow to darken the pathway before us."

"Well, Bessie," he replied, as he avoided looking into her eyes, "there is something. I am going to throw myself upon your mercy. Don't judge me too severely. Have pity. I once carried on a stamp flirtation with a girl for two months."

Unfortunate New Yorkers.

In New York we have become so hardened to eating the strange products of the cold storage vaults that the fresh foods of our childhood would probably seem unpalatable. To the diner accustomed to the pale tasteless chicken of our hotels and restaurants, a real full-blooded broiler, slain within the current year, would taste "strong" and obnoxiously assertive. Similarly, a really fresh egg, neither iced nor partically hatched might seem to our sophisticated palates to possess too many of the attributes of the ingenue.—New York Evening Sun.

Constipation causes many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One a laxative, three for cathartic.

Anti-Cigarette Law Effective.

The effect of the new Canadian law on cigarette smoking by boys is shown in the trade returns. Although $70,000,000 cigarettes were smoked in Canada since the first of the year, most of them being made in the Dominion, the number shows a decline of 8 [illegible]00 on the figures for the preceding twelve months. The results are more striking when it is remembered that the law was in force for only eight months of the year. It forbids the sale or gift of cigarettes or cigarette material to boys of 16 or less under penalties of from $10 to $100.

Among the patients in the private ward of a hospital there was recently a testy old millionaire, whose case gave his physician considerable difficulty at first.

"Well," asked the crusty patient one morning, "how do you find me now, eh?"

"You're getting on fine," responded the doctor, rubbing his hands with an air of satisfaction. "Your legs are still swollen; but that doesn't trouble me."

"Of course, it doesn't!" howled the old man. "And let me tell you this: If your legs were swollen, it wouldn't trouble me, either!"

Answer This Question

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fitchville, Ohio.—"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very near having nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl."—Mrs. C. Cole, Fitchville, Ohio.

Irasburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change."—Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, Irasburg, Vermont.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

What more proof can any one ask?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance and Spasms, are all nervous diseases. They have been cured in so many instances with Dr. Miles' Nervine that it is reasonable to conclude that it is almost sure to cure you. With nervous diseases of a severe type, persistent use has almost invariably resulted in a complete cure or lasting benefits, worth many times the cost of the remedy. The best evidence you can get of its merits is to write to those who have used it. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Obituary.

John Barnett Keeler was born in Bucks county, Pa., June 22, 1822. Died at the close of New Year's Day, 1910. Aged 87 years, 6 months and 9 days. His father died when Uncle John was only 9 years old. His mother lived to be 101. There were eight children, of whom he was the last to go.

April 12, 1864, he was united in marriage to Miss Susan Wright, who still survives. Their married life covered a period of 46 years, thirty of which were spent in DeKalb county, Ind., and the last eleven in this home where he died, near Plymouth, Ohio.

In early years he spent 13 years on the ocean as a sailor, and during those years he visited many lands. He always delighted to refer to his experience on the sea, and the text which he chose for his funeral sermon, as you will notice, is one appropriate to the burial of a sailor. Uncle John was also a soldier in the civil war, and served his country well, as a member of Co. H. 163rd. O. V. I.

He was a man of iron constitution, and until he suffered a sun stroke, a little over three years ago, he knew but little of sickness during his long life. Since that time however, he has been an invalid, constantly growing weaker and more helpless. How sister Keeler could have cared for him, almost entirely herself, and continually beyond her strength, for so long, can scarcely be accounted for, except upon the ground of the Divine help given her. Yet we dare say, of all the long years of her married life, these last when she cared so tenderly for her loving companion, will ever be the most precious in her memory.

Uncle John was a great sufferer, yet always patient. Sept. 8, 1907, in the presence of a little company of friends and neighbors, who had gathered in this home for a service of prayer and song, he was received on confession of faith, into the membership of the Methodist Episcopal church, and his name placed on the roll at McKendree.

He is gone, but not forgotten. "To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

The funeral services were conducted at the family residence, 44 miles southwest of Plymouth, Tuesday, Jan. 4, 10 a. m., by his pastor, Rev. Milo G. Kelser. Interment was made in Greenlawn.—Plymouth Advertiser.

Supplement to The St. Joe News

Rink open on Thursday and Saturday night of each week.

Mrs. Frank Hart left yesterday for a visit with her daughters at South Bend and Chicago.

Among the real estate deals of the week we note the deal made between M. T. Bishop and Wm. Kimes of Fremont, Mich. The farm contained 96 acres, located 2½ miles south-east of St. Joe. Mr. Kimes is to have possession by March 1.

H. L. Dunkle spent over Sunday with his family at Hicksville.

Mrs. Emma Woodcox came Monday for a visit with relatives a few days.

H. M. Widney was at Angola a few days last week, attending a Farmers Institute.

Master Russel Poorman, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Poorman of Concord, died Monday night. The little fellow had fallen a few days before and received severe injuries on his face. It was reported that they were not able to stop the flow of blood. The funeral will be held at Concord this (Thursday) afternoon with burial at Auburn.

J. E. Sturgis, Singing Evangelist at Concord Revival.

The meetings at Concord are progressing and growing in interest daily. The pastor, Rev. L. Coomer, is a splendid speaker and a deep thinker, his sermons are intense in their hold on the attention and the deepest sincerity prevailes a plain earnest gospel preacher, who is going about trying to lift up humanity. The meetings have been greatly strengthened this week by the presence of Mr. J. E. Sturgis of Butler, Ind., who is engaged in evangilistic work as leader of song and gospel soloist. Having a vacation of a few days at this time he is assisting in the meeting, taking charge of the music. Mr Sturgis is associated with some of the strongest Evangelists of the United States and his services are in great demand. He has a very pleasing way and a pathetic voice that stirs the very soul, when using the gospel songs which he sings with such power. He will only be with the church a short time as he is called to the west for larger work and all those who get to hear him are counting themselves very fortunate. The meetings will continue all this week and it is hoped many will accept Christ and take him as their leader.

Mr. Marvin Poper of Ft. Wayne visited a couple of days last week with his parents, returning to his work on Thursday evening.

Preparations are being made for a rousing institute next Monday and Tuesday. On Monday, E. E. Martindale will talk on "Tile Drainage and Seed Corn." The use of "Commercial Fertilizer," will be discussed by Prof. Arthur Goss of Purdue, and Shirley Gilbert of Steuben Co., will talk on the "Clover" question. Other talks will be made by local men and every farmer should take these two days off and learn more about their business and how to be more successful. Come to St. Joe Monday and Tuesday.

The revival at the M. E. Church in Spencerville is continued with great interest and enthusiasm, it has been a long time since the Gospel Truth has been presented to the people in such an earnest forcible way as is being done in these meetings. Bro. Brown is a man filled with the Holy Ghost and comes before his people with the message so plain as to cause people to tremble as Felix of old. Judging from the crowds that gather nightly to hear him it is just what the people are hungering for. Standing room is at a premium, order is excellent and souls are being saved and it is to be hoped that scores will find Christ precious to their souls before the meetings close. Monday, January 31st the last quarterly conference unanimously requested the return of Bro. Brown as pastor for another year. Services this week every afternoon at 2 P. M. and every evening at 7:30. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Kircher is the Man

The democrats of DeKalb county have a new chairman who hails from Garrett and his name is Frank M. Kircher, a B. & O. engineer.

Chairman Baxter called the newly elected democratic county committee together in the old Armory hall Thursday afternoon at 1:30. The representation from all over the county was complete and every precinct excepting north Smithfield was represented. On the roll call it developed that there was a dispute as to who represented north Jackson and the matter was referred to a special committee and Thomas McNamara was decided the man over Silas Nugen who claimed to hold a proxy from Samuel High who was elected at the township caucus.

Under the order of nomination J. E. Eusley of Auburn, placed in nomination W. W. Sharpless and Fred Feick nominated Frank M. Kircher. The name of W. H. Leas was also mentioned. It was very evident from the beginning that Mr. Kircher would pull down the plum. The result of the ballot showed 25 votes for Kircher, six for Sharpless, three for Boland and two for W. H. Leas. On motion of W. W. Sharpless, Mr. Kircher was declared elected by acclamation.

For vice chairman, William Curle, of St. Joe, was selected without any opposition.

The caucus by a unanimous vote gave the newly elected chairman the privilege of selecting his own secretary, treasurer and executive committee.

After several talks by leading democrats and the newly elected chairman the caucus adjourned.—Dispatch.

Social Events of The Week.

An event long to be remembered by the friends and neighbors in the Fairview vicinity, was the birthday party given in honor of the anniversary of Mrs. Elisabeth Krise's birth upon last Monday, January 31. The instigators of the party were the daughters of Mrs. Krise, and in order that the surprise might be complete she was allured from her home last Friday to visit a few days with relatives. About ten o'clock the guests began to assemble, and in a short time after the rooms were filled with about fifty people, Mrs Krise came home. Imagine her surprise if you can, for it was genuine. After a hearty hand shake and a cordial welcome to all the guests she entered into the social spirit of the occasion and assisted in making her 67th birthday a complete success. The next thing of importance was the bountiful dinner to which all did ample justice. She was the recipient of a beautiful boquet of carnations, a large number of post cards, several beautiful dishes, a sum of money and several other articles. After a pleasant afternoon in social converse the friends bade farewell to Mrs. Krise with a wish that she might be spared to enjoy many more birthdays. The following persons were present: Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bone, Wayne Scott and wife, Willis Baker and wife, Thomas Rickett and wife, Frank May, wife and daughter Violet, Mr. and Mrs. F. Buchanan, the Mesdames Cora Keller, Carrie McBride, Mary Culler, Alda Brown, H. Houser, James May of Auburn, Rebecca Baker, Jacob Grimm, W. D. Johnson, Lizzie Milliman, Frank Johnson, Joseph Saylor, Louisa Wyatt, Sarah Wyatt, Viola Carpenter, Delilah Draggoo, Miss Marie Goldsmith, Miss Nellie Miller, Mrs. Covle, Mrs. Lina Knight and daughter Evelyn, Mrs. Almira Krise, Misses Isa and Cora Krise, Mesdames Steward, M. J. Silberg, Bertie Zimmerman and children Alice and Charles of Spencerville.

Did you keep your eye on the indicator? Did you hear the tremendous explosion? Everything blew up and fragments may be seen in every direction, they are easily distinguished as all are Tagged with a peculiar motto which reads:—The MONSTER MINSTREL MERRY MAKERS. It means St. Joe's biggest time in her history. See large bills for detailed specification. FRIDAY EVENING FEBRUARY 11.

Note:—Coburntown Band to blame for all this disturdance.

A plersant time was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Peters in Jackson township, last Friday night, when thirty-seven of their neighbors and friends came in to remind Mrs. Peters of her thirty-second birthday. The evening was spent in games and music on the organ and graphaphone, after which supper was served, consisting of bread, butter, coffee, pie, cake, oranges and oysters, to which all did ample justice. At a late hour all returned to their homes wishing Della many more happy birthdays. The lucky ones were: Bert Rhoades, wife and children, Joe Keister and wife, Ernest Peters and wife, Chas. Peters, wife and children, Edward Peters, wife and children, Herman Peters and wife, Martin Peters, wife and children, Chas. Bartels, wife and son, C. B. Jackson and wife, Mrs. Rickey Peters, Grace and Wilbur McCann, Emma Peters, Saul Bishop, Ross Bishop, Homer Bowers, and Amos Friend and wife.

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

Panama Libel Suit Quashed.

The indictment against the Press Publishing Company, publishers of the New York World, charging Joseph Pulitzer and others with criminal libel against Theodore Roosevelt, President Taft and others was quashed in the United States District Court in New York City. Judge Hough ruled that the statute upon which the indictment rested was not sufficient in authority, or in other words, that the court had no jurisdiction. Delancy Nichol, counsel for the defendants, interpreted the decision as a signal victory for the freedom of the press.

Undertaker Had Arrived.

A dispatch from Marion, Ind. says: The doctor had gone and the undertaker had come and it seemed certain that Mrs. Ora C. Gunion's eyes had closed forever, but she breathed again, the undertaker was sent away and when the physician hurried back into the house he said she might recover. After a surgical operation a week ago Mrs. Gunion's vitality sank and rose fitfully. Finally she ceased to breathe. Apparently she was dead. But after an hour respiration perceptibly began again and soon the woman was conscious.

Saloonkeepers Must Go To Church.

Indianapolis (Ind.) saloonkeepers who violate the closing laws will hereafter be compelled to keep their saloons closed until they can produce a letter from a minister certifying that they have attended church on Sunday morning and remained throughout the service. Such was the ruling of Mayor Samuel Lewis Shank in two cases before him and so, he announced, he will deal with other violators.

Locates Five Stolen Horses.

Sheriff George, of Grant County, Indiana, has located five horses which during recent years had been stolen in Indiana and sold to men in Columbus, Ohio. He said he knew of four horses which had been recovered in Indiana, thought to belong in Columbus. George declared that Oscar Bingaman, the Pseudo stock food salesman arrested last week, was the leader of the horse thieves.

Lightning Reveals Fortune.

Mrs. Josie Pettis, owning a farm near Dalhart, Texas, declared that a bolt of lightning struck the ground on the mountainside near her home recently and uncovered a spring of crude oil, which is producing 200 barrels daily. It is said she has been offered $10,000 for the small tract of land which previous to the uncovering of the spring had barely yielded a living

This affected an old bullet wound in the lungs received in the Civil War, which finally developed into pneumonia. Judge Thompson was born in 1842 at Brookville, Pa.

Attacked By Masked Band.

Julian Lamkin, a planter of Columbia County, Georgia, has appealed to the authorities for the protection of the lives of the laborers on his plantation and for his property. Lamkin's appeals followed the shooting of a negro on his plantation by a band of masked men one night recently.

Indianapolis Man Killed by Joy Ride

J. Harvey was run over by an automobile at Indianapolis, Ind., and injured so badly that his death occurred within a short time. Harvey was run over by a test car driven by Leslie Griffin, a chauffeur, employed by the Overland Automobile Company.

Would Form a New State.

Agitation for the creation of a proposed new state, to be called Siskiyou, out of northern California and southern Oregon, has reached such a stage that a convention has been called to meet at Yreka, Cal., on March 15.

Hot Springs Hotel Burned.

The new Waverly hotel and bath house in Hot Springs, Ark., were totally destroyed by fire. The ninety two guests escaped uninjured. Property loss is about $100,000.

Train Hits Sleigh; Eleven Injured.

Eleven people were injured, none fatally, when a street car struck a sleigh-load of church merrymakers at Chicago, Ill. Fifty persons were thrown from the sleigh.

Lotta Faust, Famous Actress Dead.

Lotta Faust, the musical comedy actress, who has been ill for several weeks of pneumonia, following an operation, died at a sanitarium in New York City.

THE NATION RISES TO LOWER FOOD PRICES

PROTEST MEETINGS PLANNED

Department of Commerce and Labor Starts Investigation—Consumers to Boycott Dealers.

A mighty wave of protest against the increased cost of living is sweeping over the country. This wave, unique in many particulars, is gathering force as it rolls and surges from East to West and from North to South. Already its force is powerful; it promises to become irresistible. From persons of high degree and low degree this protest is emanating. Women and women's clubs—a mighty factor in any popular move—have taken the matter up with a will. Clergymen—Catholic, Protestant and Hebrew alike—bishops, archbishops and a cardinal, are inveighing against the tremendous increase in the cost of things necessary to feed families and sustain life. Anti-trust combinations are being formed; men, women and children in different sections of the country are taking pledges to abstain from meat and other articles of diet until the price shall have been lowered. The national House of Representatives has been asked to order an investigation into the whole question and the Department of Commerce and Labor already is making an inquiry into the subject.

The Attorney General of Missouri is planning an investigation into the high prices of meat and has asked other Mississippi Valley states to join him in his work. A resolution has been introduced into the Ohio Legislature calling upon the people of the State to abstain from eating meat for the next sixty days. These are just a few of the ways in which this mighty, almost country-wide protest against an intangible something that has forced up prices of necessities and luxuries has taken being.

Women of the country are most energetic in the fight which has been begun. Women, upon whom devolves the work of supplying the table and of supplying good, nourishing food for hungry little mouths, have looked askance at the ever decreasing supply in the face of increased expenditures and are ready and willing to join any movement that promises to remedy present conditions.

President Taft commends the aims of the National Anti-Food Trust League. In a letter to Dr. Emil Scharf of Washington, president of the league, President Taft said that he indorses any effort that may make for the reduction of the price of beef, meats and the necessities of life. His indorsement of the league's work is unconditional. There is no question by the President of the legality of a country wide boycott by the American people against exorbitant prices.

To show how great in the last three months has been the increase in the price of articles of food—meats, poultry, canned goods, butter, eggs and the like—the following table has been prepared by the Chicago Examiner:

	To-day.	Three months ago.
Eggs, per dozen	$ .42	$ .30
Jonathan apples, per peck	1.00	.40
Oranges, dozen	.50	.40
Soda crackers	.11	.10
Canned corn, can	.15	.12½
Butterine, pound	.22	.18
Rice, pound	.10-12	6-7
Flour, ¼-lb. sack	.85	.72
Lard, lb.	.17	.13
Pork chops, lb.	.20	.14
Neckbones, lb.	.05	.03
Pig tails	.10	.05
Spare ribs, lb.	.13	.07
Soup bones, lb.	.05	Giveaway
Chickens, per lb.	.22	.15
Geese, per lb.	.22	.15
Frankfurts, per lb.	.12	.09
Pork sausage, per lb.	.13	.08

TWO BANDITS ARE CAUGHT.

Sweetheart's Betrayal and Tale of Man Who Saw Train Robbery.

C. O. Eames, chief of the Missouri Pacific Railway's secret service, says the identity of the robbers who held up the passenger train near St. Louis the other night is established. Clews furnished by a sweetheart of one of the bandits and information given by a tie hacker who witnessed the hold-up from behind a bush betrayed the desperadoes. The girl is 18 years of age and lives in the mountains near Eureka, in the county in which the hold-up took place. Posses are searching the northern part of the county. Night Police Chief Gillespie received a long-distance telephone message from Matson, Mo., saying two of the band were locked up in a box car.

BOY BUILDS BIG AIRSHIP.

Lad Will Begin Making Flights When Weather Moderates.

Warren Grand, 14 years old, of East Orange, N. J., has completed an airship of the Bleriot monoplane type. The aeroplane is built of aluminum and bamboo and bears its name, "The Ghost," in glittering white letters across the front. Grand will begin making flights above his father's farm as soon as the weather moderates.

THE FORTUNE HUNTER.

RECEIVER FOR THE HOCKING.

Iron Company with Two Allied Concerns Has Capital of $8,700,000.

Receivers were appointed by Federal Judge J. E. Sater in Columbus, Ohio, for the three companies comprising the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron group of interests.

A. L. Thurman of Columbus and William A. Barbour of New York are named receivers for the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company, A. T. Seymour of Columbus, receiver for the Columbus and Hocking Clay Construction Company, and F. N. Sinks of Columbus, receiver for the Columbus and Hocking Brick Manufacturing Company. The bond of the first pair of receivers was fixed at $60,000, that of Seymour at $25,000 and that of Sinks $35,000. The bonds furnished by a surety company and the receivers will take charge at once.

The appointments were made upon the application of Henry D. Hotchkiss of New York, receiver in bankruptcy for Lathrop, Haskins & Co. of New York, for the first named receivership. The Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company applied for receivers for the other two companies. The stock of these companies is held by the same interests as control the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company. These companies are of comparatively recent origin. The brick company is just getting its products marketed. It has a capital of $1,000,000 and an equal amount of bonds. The capital of the construction company is $500,000. The Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company has a capital of $7,200,000, of which only the $200,000 is preferred stock. It has $7,000,000 bonds outstanding.

MERCHANT BOUND AND SLAIN.

Bottle of Chloroform Beside Body Found by Child.

When little Ferdinand Derosa, 6 years old, went into his grandfather's wine shop at 331 East One Hundred and Sixth street, New York, to get his usual daily penny something startled him and he ran for a policeman. Policeman Sweeney, who hastened back with the child, found the old man dead on the floor of a bedroom behind his shop, his hands strapped behind him and his feet tied with a gas tube. An open bottle of chloroform with a handkerchief beside it was found in the room.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

Both houses of the Illinois Legislature have entered upon the real fight for the enactment of a primary election law.

"The program of the Democrats in the House at this session of Congress is to keep down the amount of the appropriation bills and to vote against ship subsidy," said Minority Leader Champ Clark, of Missouri, in a recent interview.

Congressman Tawney, of Minnesota, who gained a lot of notoriety voting for the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, thinks he has been grossly misrepresented by newspapers. He claims that he has been misquoted and that the press has charged him with things of which he is not guilty.

U. S. PLANS $5,000,000 HARBOR.

Major Rees Gives Hints on Chicago Project to Be Made Public Soon.

That a complete report of the plans, observations and recommendations of the corps of government engineers who have been at work for the past two months mapping out a scheme for the harbor development of Chicago will be ready in about thirty days was the announcement made by Major Thomas H. Rees, in charge of the federal engineering department in the city.

The undertaking contemplates the construction of a huge cement breakwater extending approximately about a mile and a half from north to south and located about two miles from shore. In addition, a large amount of dredging will be done, and when the undertaking has been completed, it is asserted, the total cost easily will reach $5,000,000.

FAILS FOR $3,000,000.

Roberts, Hall & Criss of New York Go Into Liquidation.

The suspension of Roberts, Hall & Criss, brokers on the New York Stock Exchange, was announced the other day. In a statement issued by one of its members the firm acknowledged liabilities of $3,000,000. The amount of the assets is not as yet determined. The suspended firm, which was formed in 1902, composed of J. Nevins Roberts, Thomas B. Criss, Hugh F. Criss, and Walker Hall, has its principal office in Cincinnati. President Thomas said that special circumstances in connection with the suspension of the firm would call for investigation by the governing committee and that this would be begun without delay.

KILL THE ENGLISH SPARROWS!

Department of Agriculture Calls Him Pirate—Tells How to Crush Him.

The English sparrow is the pirate of the air, just as the rat is the freebooter of the earth, and ought to be exterminated. So rules the Department of Agriculture in Washington in a bulletin just published, which also tells how to get rid of him. Whenever sparrows roost around your house destroy their nests. If they roost at night on your eaves-trough, drive them away with a long pole. By destroying nests wherever they are seen the increase can be prevented.

WANT FOOD PRICES LOWERED.

Farmers Demand That Duties on Necessities Be Reduced.

Asserting that under existing conditions revision of the tariff upward necessarily involves a revision of the standard of living downward, farmers of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho, attending the convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union, took action demanding that tariff duties on the necessities of life be lowered.

GUINNESS FARM SOLD.

Will Become Part of Boys' School Which Adjoins It.

The fifty-acre farm of Mrs. Bella Guaness, who was burned to death with her three children in the fire which destroyed her home April 28, 1908, was sold in Laporte, Ind., to the superintendent of a boys' school which adjoins the Guaness farm and of which it will become a part.

STENSLAND IS LIBERATED.

Out into the sunlight of a better day than he has known for three glooomy years, Paul O. Stensland, who wrecked the Milwaukee Avenue bank in Chicago, a tottering, seemingly dying old man, walked from behind the walls of the penitentiary at Joliet eight minutes after the prison whistle blew at noon Monday. Half an hour earlier, Henry W. Hering, firm of step, a smile on his face telling his happiness to the world, heard the steel gates clang for the last time, and this time from without.

Stensland was taken at once to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Chicago. His adopted daughter, Mrs. Inga Stensland Sanberg, met him at the prison and escorted him to Chicago.

Hering's first trought was of his home. As quickly as train and street car could rush him there he went to the cottage at 3830 Prairie avenue, where his wife and family threw themselves into his arms in a hysteria of joy. His dinner that night, a family reunion, was the greatest pleasure of his life, he said.

ATTACKS HARD COAL COMPANIES

The government's brief in its suit to break up the alleged anthracite coal trust was filed in the United States Circuit Court in Philadelphia the other day by William S. Gregg, special assistant to the Attorney General. The suit was brought in April, 1907, and the government's case was prepared by J. Carroll Todd and J. C. McReynolds. The three years that have intervened were taken up with the examination of witnesses for both sides. It is contended by the government that all the defendants have long been parties to a general combination and conspiracy which stifles competition and obstructs trade and commerce in anthracite coal and that they have monopolized the trade. The government asks the court to enjoin this alleged monopoly and to enjoin the defendants from carrying out the contract with the so-called independent companies by which the latter turn over their product to the larger companies for 65 per cent of the tidewater selling price.

The Russian foreign office has received a memorandum from the United States government proposing as a solution for the Manchurian problem the neutralization of the railroads in Manchuria by their sale to China, financed by an international syndicate. The United States invites Russian participation in such a scheme. The supervision of the railroads would be placed thereby in the hands of the powers responsible for the financial arrangement which would see that the lines were conducted on a purely business basis and not used for political or strategic purposes.

FRENCH FLOOD LOSSES OVER $200,000,000

Situation Caused by the Deluge Grows Worse, New Storm Adding to Disaster.

PLANS FOR RELIEF IN PARIS.

Military Officials Are to Be in Charge of Different Sections of the Stricken Metropolis.

Premier Briand and Finance Minister Cochery, after a consultation in Paris, France, estimated that the flood losses would exceed $200,000,000. Paris has been divided into five sections, each in charge of a military commander, who will control the relief and rescue work. The Seine continued to rise and the situation was growing worse hourly.

A large portion of France is under water and chaos is the order throughout the flooded districts. Fears of outbreaks of epidemics are entertained, and the situation is looked upon as one of the greatest gravity. While the loss of life thus far has been small, the property losses are colossal. An estimate of the damage, owing to the widespread confusion, is impossible. The calamity is national.

There are reports of improvement in a few provinces, but others are cut off from communication. Many towns and villages are completely isolated.

The floods throughout the country continue their devastation, but Paris and vicinity seem to be the worst hit of all the affected districts. The city faces a complete tie-up and damage grows each hour. The Seine rose three-quarters of an inch in hour.

Famine is threatened in certain districts. In one place the bakers are without flour, and in another the butchers are unable to obtain meat. Authorities everywhere are busy devising remedies to meet the situation.

The government has voted $400,000 for the relief of sufferers. In many places homeless hundreds are living in tents, which, because of the chill rain, afford inadequate shelter. The Red Cross Society is organizing aid for the sufferers. Subscriptions have been opened and the theaters are arranging benefits.

20TH CENTURY WRECK KILLS.

Engine of East-Bound Train Turns Somersault at St. Johnsville, N. Y.

Two men were killed when the engine on the New York Central Twentieth Century Limited, eastbound, from Chicago, turned completely over about a quarter of a mile west of St. Johnsville, N. Y. It slid 300 feet before it stopped. Under the engine pits Fireman Melvin J. Handville of Syracuse was crushed beyond recognition. The engineer, John Scanlon, of Fort Hunter, attempted to leap when the engine left the rails, but he was caught between the engine and tender and crushed. None of the coaches left the track, though the trucks of several of them were derailed. Most of the passengers were thrown from their berths.

The supposition is that a signal cautioning Engineer Scanlon to slow down was not seen by him in time to bring his train under full control, and when the locomotive struck the crossover the ponderous machine bounded into the air, turned upon its side, and then as it struck one of the rails rolled upon its back and plowed ahead through the rails, ties and ballast at least 300 feet.

ROB TRAIN AND FLEE WITH SAFE

Four Masked Men in Missouri Pacific Hold-Up Near St. Louis.

Four masked men the other night at Eureka, thirty miles from St. Louis, Mo., held up and robbed Missouri Pacific train No. 8, due in St. Louis from Kansas City at 10:40 p. m. With a red lantern the bandits stopped the train and pointed revolvers at the engineer and fireman. The baggage car and mail and express car were detached from the train, and with the robbers in the cab, the engineer was compelled to proceed toward St. Louis. The passengers were not molested. The safe in the express car is supposed to have contained several thousand dollars. It is believed the safe was blown open in some desolate spot and that the robbers fled. The district in which the holdup occurred is sparsely settled and the news of the robbery did not reach St. Louis until nearly midnight.

NITROGLYCERIN EXPLODES.

Twenty Men Caught in Tunnel Being Dug to Supply Croton.

Twenty men engaged in boring a tunnel through a small mountain near Cold Springs, to form a part of the aqueduct which is to supply water to New York City from the Croton dam, were about to leave their task the other afternoon at 4 o'clock, preparatory to setting off almost a ton of nitroglycerin, when the explosive was mysteriously fired. Fifteen of the workmen were killed and the other five were seriously injured. After two hours of rapid toil by 150 men, the bodies were reached and taken to the mouth of the tunnel.

CHAPTER VIII.

For some small instant I dared not loose my eye-grip on the colonel, to glance aside at Falconnet, or Gilbert Stair, or at the woman close beside me. If I had flinched or wavered, or let an eyelid droop but by the thickness of a hair, this keen-eyed colonel would have been upon me to cut the ground beneath my feet and leave me dangling by the lie.

But as it was, I faced him down; and winning him, won all. There was a muttered groan from Falconnet, a tremulous cry of rage from where her father stood; and then I sought my lady's eyes to read my sentence in them. Her lips were pressed together as if not all nor any should ever make her speak again.

At this sharp crisis, when a look or word would cost me more than death, it was the colonel who, all unwittingly, stood my friend. A breath of doubt upon my lie and we were lost; and once I thought he would have breathed it. But he did not. Instead, he broke out in a laugh, with a gibe flung first at Gilbert Stair and then at Falconnet.

"I give you joy, Mr. Stair, and you, Sir Francis. These two have duped you bravely." Then he turned to Margery with a bow that had no touch of mockery in it. "I crave your pardon, Madam; I knew not you were pleading for your husband's life an hour ago. It grieves me that I may not spare him to you longer than the night, but war is cruel at its best."

She stood like any statue done in cold Carrara while he spoke; and when she made no sign he gave the word to recommit me.

"Take him away, Lieutenant Tybee, and see he has a bribe-proof man this time to keep him company. Madam Ireton, I'll put you on hour honor: you may have access to him, but there must be no messages carried in or out. To your quarters, gentlemen. We must ride far and hard to-morrow."

When his final word had set her free, my frozen maiden came to life and ran to throw herself in helpless sobbings, not upon her father, as you would think, but upon the good priest. And it was Father Matthieu who led her, still crying softly, out of the throng and up the low stair; and now I marked that all the rough soldiery stood aside and made way for her with never a man among them to scoff or sneer or point a gibe.

At her going, Tybee drew his sword and cut the cord that bound me. I walked beside him to the stair, and when I stumbled, being weak and spent, he took my arm and steadied me, and I did think it kindly done. At my own door he gave me precedence. When we were both within he touched upon the colonel's mandate.

"I must obey my orders, Captain Ireton, but by your good leave I shall not lock you up with any trooper; I'll stay with you myself."

So saying, he dragged the big wicker chair into the window-bay, planted himself deep within it with his back to all the room, and so left me to my own devices. Suddenly the shifting of the wooden door-bar roused me. I rose up quickly, but Tybee was before me. There was some low-voiced conference at the door; then Tybee came to me.

"'Tis Mr. Gilbert Stair," he said. "He has permission from the colonel and insists that he must see you."

At first I hung reluctant, wanting little of the host who came so late to see his guest. Then, as if a sudden flash of lightning had revealed it, I realized, as I had not before, how I had set the feet of my dear lady in a most hideous labyrinth of deception; how this lie that I had told to bridge a momentary gap must leave her neither maid nor widow in the morning.

"Yes, yes; let him in, Mr. Tybee!" I burst out. "I am fair crazed with weariness, and had forgot. 'Tis most important, I do assure you."

The thing was done at once, and before I knew it I was alone with the old man who, though he was my supplanter, was also Margery's father. He entered cautiously, shielding his bedroom candle with his hand and peering over it to make me out, as if his venturing in were not unperilous.

"Sit down, Captain Ireton; sit down, I beg of you," he said, in his thin, rasping treble. And when I had obeyed: "I think you must know what I've come for, Captain Ireton?"

I said I could guess; and he began again, volubly now, as if to have it over in the shortest space.

"'Twas not a gentlemanly thing for you to do, Captain Ireton—this marrying of a foolish girl out of hand while you were here a guest; and as for the priest that did it, I—I'll have his hanged before the army leaves, I promise you. But now 'tis done, I hope ye're prepared to make the best of it?"

I saw at once that his daughter had not confined in him; that my lie was still entangled in my lie. So I thought it well to probe him deeper while I might.

"What would you call 'the best,' if I may ask?" said I, growing the cooler with some better seeing of the way ahead.

"The marriage settlements!" he cried shrilly, coming to the point at once, as any miser would. "'Tis the merest matter of form, as ye may say, for your title to Appleby Hundred is well burnt out, I promise you. But for the decent look of it you might make over your quitclaim to your wife."

"Aye, truly; so I might."

"And so you should, sir; that you should, ye miserable, spying runag"—he choked and coughed behind his hand and then began again without the epithets. "'Tis the very least ye can do for her now, when you have the rope fair around your rebel neck. Only for the form's sake, to be sure, ye understand, for she'd inherit after you in any case."

I saw his drift at last, and, not caring to spare him, sped the shaft of truth and let it find the joint in his harness.

"'Tis as you say, Mr. Stair. But as it chances, Mistress Margery is not my wife."

"Wha—Wha's that ye say?" he piped in shrillest cadence. "Not married? Then you—you——"

"I lied to save her honor—that was all."

For some brief time it smote him speechless, and in the depth of his astoundment he forgot his foolish fear of me and fell to pacing up and down, though always with the table cannily between us. And as he shuffled back and forth the thin lips muttered foolish things. When all was done he dropped into a chair and stared across at me with leaden eyes; and truly he had the look of one struck with a mortal sickness.

"I think—I think you owe me something now beyond your keeping, Captain Ireton," he quavered, at length, mumbling the words as do the palsied. "Since you are Margery's father, I owe you anything a dying man can pay," said I.

"Words; empty words," he fumed. "If it were a thing to do, now——"

"You need but name the thing and I will do it willingly."

"Who is your next of kin, Captain Ireton?"

"Septimus, of the same name, master of Iretondene, on the James River, and a major in the Virginia line," I answered.

"If you should die intestate, this Septimus would be your heir?"

"As next of kin, I should suppose he would. But I have nothing to devise."

"You've claimed my daughter as your wife before them all, and when you die to-morrow morning you'll leave her neither wife nor maid. I think you'd best make that lie of yours the truth."

If one of his thin hands that clutched the chair arms had pressed a secret spring and loosed a trap to send me gasping down an oubliette, I should have been the less astounded. Indeed, for some space I thought him mad; yet, on second thought, I saw the method in his madness. Could Margery be brought to view it calmly, this was a sword to cut the knot of all entanglements.

"The jade will do as she is bid," he said, wrathfully. "And now about the settlements, Captain Ireton; you'll be making her legatee residuary?"

At this I saw his drift again, most clearly; that he would never stickle for his daughter's honor but for the quieting of his title to my father's lands—a title that my cousin Septimus might dispute. It was enough to set me obstinate against him; but I constrained myself to think of Margery and Richard Jennifer, and not at all of this poor petty miser.

"I'll sign a quitclaim in her favor, if that is what you mean," I said. "But 'tis a mere pen-scratch for the lawyers to haggle over. As you said a while ago, the wife will be the husband's heir-at-law, in any event."

"True; but we'd best be at it in due and proper form." He rose and hobbled to the door and was so set upon haste that his shaking hand played a rattling tattoo on the latch. "I—I'll go and have the papers drawn, and you will sign them, Captain Ireton; I have your passed word that you will sign them?"

"Aye; they shall be signed."

He went away at that. 'Twas past midnight, with Tybee dozing in his chair, when next I heard some stirrings in the corridor. As before, it was the lifting of the wooden bar that roused my friendly guard, and when he went to parley at the door I stood apart and turned my back. When I looked again my company was come. At the table, busied with a parchment that might have been a ducal title deed for size, stood Gilbert Stair and the factor-lawyer, Owen Pengarvin. A little back of them the good old Father Matthieu had Margery on his arm. And in the corner Tybee stood to keep the door.

"I would have a word or two in private with your daughter before this matter ripens further, Mr. Stair," I said.

My lady dropped the priest's arm and came to stand beside me in the window-bay. I offered her a chair but she refused to sit. There was so little time to spare that I must needs begin without preliminary.

"What has your father told you, Margery?" I asked.

"He tells me nothing that I care to know."

"But he has told you what you must do?"

"Yes." She looked with eyes that saw me not.

"'Tis not a pleasing thing, I grant you, Margery; notwithstanding, of our two evils it is by far the less. Bethink you a moment: 'tis but the saying of a few words by the priest, and the bearing of my name for some short while till you can change it for a better."

Her deep-welled eyes met mine, and in them was a flash of anger.

"Is that what marriage means to you, Captain Ireton?"

"No, truly. But we have no choice. 'Tis this, or I must leave you in the morning to worse things than the bearing of my name. I would it had not thus been thrust upon us, but I could see no other way."

"See what comes of tampering with the truth," she said, and I could see her short lip curl with scorn. "Why should you lie and lie again, when any one could see that it must come to this—or worse?"

"I saw it not," I said. "But had I stopped to look beyond the moment's need and seen the end from the beginning, I fear I should have lied yet other times. Your honor was at stake, dear lady."

"My honor!"—this in bitterest irony. "What is a woman's honor, sir, when you or any man has patched and sewed and sought to make it whole again? I will not say the word you'd have me say!"

"But you must say it, Margery. 'Tis but the merest form; you forget that you will be a wife only in name. I shall not live to make you rue it."

"You drive me to it—listen, sir, you drive me to it! And I shall hate you for it. Come; 'tis but a mockery, as you say; and they are waiting."

And so that deed was done in such sorry fashion as the time and place constrained. All through this farce—which was in truth the grimmest of all tragedies—my lady played her part as one who walks in sleep; and at the end she let her father lead her out with not a word or look or sign to me.

You'd guess that I would take it hard—her leaving of me thus, as I made sure, for all eternity; and I did take it hard. For when the strain was off, and there was no one by to see or hear save my good-hearted death-watch, I must needs go down upon my knees beside the bed in childish weakness, and sob and choke and let the hot tears come as I had not since at this same bedside I had knelt a little lad to take my mother's dying love.

WOMEN AT CORNELL.

They Are Occasionally Snubbed, but Not Actually Ostracized.

"The statement that at Cornell the young women are ostracized is a pure fiction which a perusal of the list of married alumnae would promptly refute,' says a writer in the Independent. "Two hundred callers on a Sunday afternoon is not an unusual number for Sage College, the principal woman's dormitory. This is almost one apiece, although I presume they are not evenly distributed. At any rate, it does not look like ostracism.

"On the whole I think the women in Cornell get as much masculine attention as is good for them and I know that some of them get more than they desire. As for social recognition, that is something which the coeds may hope for but cannot rightfully demand. In the state universities they get altogether too much 'social recognition.'

"The class of young men who object to the presence of the young women is, however, small at Cornell—smaller than in the other Eastern universities, though larger than in the Western. But as they are leaders in the fraternities, which here as everywhere dominate the society life of the university, they make themselves unpleasantly conspicuous at times.

"One episode will have to be mentioned, although it is rather sickening, for it is a part of Cornell's social history. The leader of the sophomore cotillion not long ago asked a university girl, his fiancee, to take part in that function with him. His associates thought this an undue recognition of the existence of the coeds and prevailed upon him to break or get released from his engagement — the dance engagement—and take an outside girl instead.

"The incident was unfortunate, because it caused some natural resentment even among those who were far from aspiring to the honor of leading a sophomore cotillion, and more because it misrepresented the spirit of Cornell young men as a whole. They are not as a rule unfair or even ungallant toward their feminine colleagues.

"For example, when Miss Cook won the Woodford, a prize in oratory which has always been highly esteemed, it called out admiration rather than resentment. She also secured a position on the debating team, and when the Columbia boys objected to her appearance on the platform as one of their opponents there was no thought of yielding on the part of Cornell.

"Such an incident, in my opinion, outweighs a hundred cotillions, though perhaps not all young ladies will agree with me. The enthusiastic advocates of coeducation in Cornell probably equal in number the bitter opponents.

"Some of the finest young men in the university have chosen Cornell partly because they believed in coeducation. The great majority of the students are altogether indifferent on the subject and it is not to be regarded as a serious question."

Always soak such things as dried corn, beans, hominy and rice over night, and it will save your fuel. It will not take one-third as long to cook them.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

The Secretary of Agriculture has appointed Miss Julia M. Wade, of Lafayette, acting secretary of the American Shropshire Registry Association, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Mortimer Levering. Registration certificates signed by Miss Wade will be accepted by customs officers.

Before he had completed his first round trip as a brakeman on the Pennsylvania railroad, Lee Henry Turner, aged 23, was killed at Plymouth when a passenger train struck him and hurled his body a distance of thirty feet. Turner located in Fort Wayne a few weeks ago. His father lives at Redkey.

The four-room brick school building at Sandusky, about six miles north of Greensburg, was destroyed by fire. The origin of the fire is unknown. A supply of library books, which were received only last week, together with all of the books of the pupils, were burned. The loss is estimated at $10,000, with $2,500 insurance.

Mrs. Addie Clark, of Hannibal, Mo., who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Atwood, in Evansville, awoke one morning recently to find that her 2-year-old baby boy, asleep with ehr 2-months-old infant, had accidentally smothered to death his little bedfellow. The husband of Mrs. Clark was killed recently while on a hunting trip.

Local history and geography and the foundation principles of civil government will be taught the pupils of the primary grades of the South Bend public schools, beginning with the second semester, next week. This change in the course of study was the result of a conference of the principals and Superintendent John A. Wood held in the High School several days ago.

Falling into a trough, used for watering cattle in the barnyard, where she was alone at play, Ruth Hatch, 6 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hatch, near Huntertown, twelve miles north of Fort Wayne, met death by drowning. Her prolonged absence led to a search which ended when the father found his little daughter's body in the trough of icy water.

The vicinity of Bloomfield has become a sportsman's paradise on account of the great number of ducks to be found on White river. The vast stretches of corn fields which line the river banks have furnished both shelter and food and the birds by the hundreds have wintered there. To see a big flock of ducks rising up out of a corn field is no uncommon sight.

The new State Bank of Washington has opened its doors for business. Fixtures from Indianapolis have been installed and the room is one of the best equipped bank rooms in the State. John M. Twitty, formerly of the Loogootee National Bank, is cashier and George Godwin, county treasurer, is president of the bank. A large part of the capital stock was subscribed by farmers.

M. O. Reeves, a manufacturer of Columbus, has returned from New York, where he attended the automobile show, and is telling a story at his own expense. He attended a banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria one night, where the cost was $8 a plate, and on the next night he decided to see how the "other half lives." Reeves hunted up a bread line, took his position and waited patiently until the midnight hour struck. When his time came he received a piece of bread and a cup of coffee. He drank the coffee, but brought the bread home with him as a souvenir.

The annual meeting of stockholders of the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern Traction Company recently held in Columbus was really a reunion of the members of the Irwin family, as all of the stock is held in that family. The directors, all of whom were re-elected, are: Joseph I. Irwin, William G. Irwin, Mrs. Lennie Irwin Sweeney, the Rev. Z. T. Sweeney and Hugh T. Miller. The officers, also re-elections, are: Joseph I. Irwin, president; William G. Irwin, vice-president; Hugh T. Miller, secretary and treasurer; A. A. Anderson, general manager, and Ira E. Guthrie, auditor.

Mrs. William H. Everroad, Mrs. Lide Price and Miss Vida Newsom, members of the Associated Charities in Columbus, have obtained possession of the City Council chamber for three afternoons each week, where they will establish a sewing club. It is their intention to teach the women and girls of the poorer classes of the city how to sew and to provide a place where sewing may be done. Sewing machines have already been donated for the use of the club. The women will not only be taught and helped in the work of altering and remodeling old clothing, but new cloth will be donated and instructions and suggestions will be given in the work of garment making. There will also be social features in connection with the new organization.

The Drain schoolhouse near Princeton, burned with its contents, including all the pupils' books. A coal dropping from a banked fire in the stove is supposed to have been the cause. Miss Gladys Armstrong is the teacher.

The 2-year-old baby girl of Mrs. John Burke, living near Greencastle, was shot through the brain and fatally wounded by her 3-year-old brother, who was playing with a rifle. The boy says that he didn't know the gun was loaded.

Mrs. Iticia Wolfe celebrated her ninety-ninth birthday anniversary at the home of her son, Samuel Wolfe, in Anderson.

Forty cases of measles have been reported at Hartsville, Bartholomew County, a town of about five hundred inhabitants. So far there have been no deaths from the disease, and most of the cases are reported to be of mild form.

In order to meet the increased cost of living physicians of Bluffton at a meeting last week decided to increase the fees which are now charged. The members of the society did not decide on a price list, but stated that there would be a subtsantial increase. The doctors claim that the cost of maintaining horses, keeping up houses and offices has increased and that consequently they should get more for their work.

Michael Rafferty, a Montgomery County farmer living near Round Hill, has some yellow corn which he thinks is as fine as that which Fred C. Palin, of Newtown, exhibited at the Omaha corn show, and which won the $1,000 prize. Rafferty has challenged Palin to submit his corn to Purdue University experts for comparison. He raised more than five hundred bushels of his corn on five acres, getting more than one hundred bushels an acre.

Charles S. Bash, a prominent Fort Wayne business man, has announced that he will personally appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission, in Washington, February 9, to argue the case of the Bash Fertilizer Company against the Wabash railroad. It is a contention for lower freight rates. Mr. Bash is not an attorney, but he has several times made arguments in courts in cases in which he was interested and has been markedly successful.

While sliding down a banister in the courthouse in Greenfield, Floyd Wicker, aged 14, became overbalanced and toppled over, falling to the floor, fifteen feet below. Witnesses to the accident thought the boy was killed, but he got up and walked to the office of Dr. J. P. Black, where an examination revealed no injuries other than a gash two inches long across the chin. The accident occurred at the same place and was similar to that suffered by Thomas Smith several weeks ago.

Because he wished to see the car "get bigger and bigger" as it approached him, 3-year-old William Tucker, son of Harrison Tucker, stood on a street car track near his home on Connersville, and would have been ground to pieces beneath the wheels of a rapidly moving traction car had not the motorman applied the emergency brakes suddenly. The child had been playing on the tracks and was unaware of danger until the interurban car was brought to a standstill a few feet from him.

Two important cases on trial in the courts at Terre Haute came to a standstill recently because of broken bones. In the trial of George Greenleaf for the murder of Ralph Conover, a juror has a broken leg, and Judge Fortune dismissed the jury and continued the case until the February term of court. In the other case, Otis Cahill is suing the Green Valley Coal Company for personal injuries and the case has been on trial for two weeks. It was continued because a juror fell on the ice and fractured his arm and leg.

Lon Newkirk, a brakeman of Columbus employed by the Pennsylvania lines, owns a dog that likes to go hunting. When not hunting the dog is willing to go visiting. Recently Newkirk left home in a hurry and did not have a chance to lock the dog in its kennel. He went to Richmond on his run and the dog decided to go on a little jaunt of its own. The animal went to the Pennsylvania station, where it boarded a south-bound train and went to Louisville. It was recognized at the railroad offices and sent home on the next train.

The Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church of Fort Wayne has started an unusual movement by which it is proposed to preserve for future generations the voices and the melodies of the Haydn Quartet, a local organization which has figured conspicuously in Fort Wayne musical circles for many years. It is proposed to have the quartet sing into a large talking machine, and the records will be carefully kept. The Haydn Quartet was organized thirty years ago. Its members, E. F. Yarnelle, C. H. Worden, C. L. Olds and A. J. Lang, are all prominent Fort Wayne business men, to whom music was a diversion, and the organization is well known over the northern part of the State. All the members are now well advanced in middle life, and in recent years the quartet has not appeared so frequently as in the earlier days, although it still fills occasional engagements. The quartet sang for many years at the First Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Lizzie Riddle, aged 52, died at her home in Westport as a result of whooping cough. She was ill only a short time, and physicians say it is unusual for one of her advanced years to be a victim of that disease.

Fort Wayne was the third Indiana city in point of recruits furnished for the navy in 1909, the enlistments in that city totaling 140. Indianapolis leads with 424 recruits. Terre Haute was second with 214, while South Bend supplied 10.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun's Weekly Review of Chicago Trade says:

"The failure record includes an increased aggregate of liabilities and the volume of payments through the bank does not rise as expected, but weather conditions are less severe and some recovery appears in the general activity. Factories are now obtaining necesary fuel and freight movements are less delayed.

"The markets for the leading foodstuffs indicate moderate transactions. Operations are conservative in view of the feeling against high prices. Leading retail trade reflects seasonable progress and the January clearances have been successful in ordinary necessaries.

"Adverse weather is to some extent responsible for slow collections, but an improvement in remittances will follow with normal transportation and prompt deliveries.

"Bank clearings, $283,689,347, are 4.5 per cent over those of the corresponding week in 1909, and compare with $228,049,573 in 1908.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number 32, as against 36 last week, 23 in 1909 and 39 in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 13, as against 7 last week, 7 in 1909 and 16 in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade reports are of the usual mid-winter character, reflecting widespread inclement weather, and also considerable unsettlement due to commodity price fluctuations. Outdoor activities, such as building, are, of course, retarded, and bad roads affect country trade. Good spring orders are being received by jobbers. Retail trade varies with the sections reporting.

Reports as to collections are irregular. It is noted that a good deal of money is tied up at present in grain, which has been in transit for some time.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with Jan. 20 were 275, as against 291 last week, 307 in the like week of 1909, 408 in 1908, 252 in 1907 and 276 in 1906.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 44, which compared with 44 last week and 40 in the same week of 1909.—Bradstreet's.

Meanwhile, as city after city joins the antimeat crusade and the ranks of the temporary vegetarians are swelled by hundreds of thousands daily, it may be of some interest to note that the socialists are showing violent opposition to the whole movement. The New York Call, the principal socialist daily, denounces it as "an insidious attempt to reduce the wages of workingmen by the lowering the standard of living". If, says the Call, the crusade is a success and the price of meat goes down, the cost of milk, vegetables, butter, fish, cheese and eggs will make a corresponding advance. Besides, the Call insists that meat is necessary to the healthy American, who cannot safely adopt the standard of living "of Chinese, Japanese and Hindu coolies" even for a month. Another influential socialistic paper repeats the same arguments. What the socialists demand is not amelioration of conditions but revolution, not reformation but destruction.

Startling and almost unbelievable figures on the number of criminal homicides in America have been given in an address by Dr. Andrew D. White, former President of Cornell University. He asserts that the number of murders in the United States are forty-three times greater than in Canada and eight times greater than in Belgium which has the largest number of any European country; that in the United States the average criminal serves, but seven years of a life sentence and but one murder in seventy-four is punished. The cause for this rampant prevalence of crime, according to Dr. White, is the fact that the admidistration of criminal law in this country has become simply a game played between clever lawyers. He has little sympathy for the idea that crime is a disease. He says that crime is crime and the way to dispose of the professional criminal is to hang him. Opponents of capital punishment will take sharp exception to the remedy Dr. White proposes but there is something wrong in a system which allows murder to the extent described by him.

Los Angeles has reason to be content with its aviation meet. Nobody has been killed or even hurt, several records have been broken and the receipts have more than paid expenses. Perhaps the most important result of the meeting has been in the way of supplying proof that the aeroplane is no fair weather machine but can safely venture out when the winds are high. Hereafter there will not be much interest in any aerial races which are not cross country. That is real flying -- the rest is only "stunts". And yet it is a notable fact that not one accident has yet occured in the course of a cross country flight. They have all occurred while making the quick and frequent turns required in circling a restricted course. The only practical results which will ever be attained from the aeroplane will come only after it has been demonstrated that the machine is steady and reliable when covering distance. The fact that it can make sudden leaps and darts will not interest the general public.

Is Looking Thru Bars

Barney Kellner of Newville, against whom the charge of larceny was preferred by the last grand jury, and who plead not guilty to the charge, when arraigned before Judge Bratton some time ago, decided to change his plea, which he did Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock, throwing himself into the mercies of the court. Considering the fact that Kellner recently joined the benedicts and upon his promise to be good hereafter and refrain from infringing the law in any matter, the judge imposed a fine of fifty dollars together with a jail sentence of thirty days and Barney was escorted to jail to serve his time. Kellner was charged with having stolen a blanket from Jack Beams.—Press.

Obituary

Russell Elroy, son of D. E. and Julia Poorman, was born at Concord, Ind., July 5, 1899 and died at Concord, January 25, 1910, age 10 years 6 months and 20 days. He leaves to mourn their loss a loving father and mother, four grandparents and with them a host of relatives and friends. He had been afflicted since five years of age, but during all his affliction and suffering he bore it all without a murmur until on this morning of January 25 the loving father said, "Russell, come home." During the time of his affliction it can be truly said that father and mother gave him all the care that human hands could give assisted by relatives, neighbors and friends and all medical aid proved to no avail, but we shall not mourn as those who have no hope, for the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, so blessed be the name of the Lord. The funeral services were held at Concord last Thursday afternoon, burial at Auburn. Rev. Coomer preached the funeral. Elza Kinsey funeral director.

The Lutheran church barn was sold Monday of this week to D. J. Baker. During the summer the barn will be located on his lot and fixed up with a cement floor and other necessary improvements. As Mr. Baker has a horse he will use the barn where it now stands until later.

Pursuant to call by County Chairman, J. W. Brown, the republicans of Concord township met and selected following precinct committeemen: for east precinct, Franklin J. White, for west precinct, O. A. Patterson. J. D. Leighty was selected to represent the township at the 12th Congressional District Meeting at Ft. Wayne, on Feb., 1, 1910. B. F. Walter was chosen alternate. By motion the meeting was adjourned.

Deputy Auditor Frank Shook has completed his report of the distribution of the school money now on hand ready for the twenty-three school corporations of the county. All told $33,604.95 awaits the school coffers. Of this sum $12,671.81 comes from the state; $699 28 from the congressional school fund, and $19,233 86 from the fall installment of taxes. This is the second distribution of the year. The one in July was over $38,000, making the total for school purposes for the year over $70,000.—Auburn Dispatch.

Imitation and Hypocrisy

The Definition of Cream Separator Perfection by Chas. E. Bair, DeLaval Territorial Superintendent, Topeka, Kansas.

A recent issue of the DE LAVAL MONTHLY contained an article accusing other separator manufacturers of imitating the De Laval.

We read men appreciate the truthfulness of this charge to a much greater extent, perhaps, than any other department of the De Laval organization, because we are up against every conceivable contraption that is floated under the name of cream separator and are cognizant of all the arguments used in the effort of their introduction.

I feel safe in saying that 95 per cent. of all the separator manufacturers in the field today are trying to get business by making the outward appearances of their machine, in a general way, as near like the De Laval as the patent laws will allow and the very limited manufacturing genius of such imitators makes possible. They are trying to get business on the recognized reputation of the De Laval and not on their own merits. In the held their arguments are: "Why, the patent on the discs has expired and we now have them," or "We wish you would note this particular feature (which was pilfered from the junk pile to which the De Laval company had consigned it because their engineers had found something very much better) and because of this feature our machine will do just as good work as the De Laval." Or "Why shouldn't this machine do as good work as the De Laval, for if you will examine the two bowls (and they are very careful not to call the farmer's attention to the De Laval method of admitting the milk in between the discs and its system of delivering the cream as it is separated) you will find they are very much alike." Or "Why shouldn't our machine be as good as the De Laval, for we have at the head of our manufacturing department a man that used to be a foreman of the De Laval works and he has surrounded himself with ex-employes from the De Laval factory," forgetting, however, that they "use to be" De Laval employes for the same reason that our navy "use to be" wooden vessels, and in carrying the analogy out to its conclusion it is simply that the "use to be" employes and the "use to be" wooden vessels are both obsolete and do not belong to present day progress and requirements.

As additional evidence that the De Laval is considered the standard by which other cream separators are judged we only have to refer to a stereotyped statement made every day by one or two manufacturers who do not appear to be De Laval imitators, for the reason that De Laval use or invention of their machines' features antedates the present generation, and that statement is "Just as good as the De Laval."

And what does all this mean? It means that the system that is recognized as the correct system for the separation of cream from milk—the one that has proved to be correct by years of use and by hundreds and thousands of experiments under all conditions—is the system that is incorporated in the De Laval bowl, and that users of cream separators are recognizing this fact so universally as to make it almost impossible for some firms, even with their threats and their imitations, to keep from being suffocated within their own business vacuum, while great floods of orders are daily pouring into De Laval offices.

It has been said that "imitation is the sincerest flattery," or something like that; that no greater compliment can be paid one than that he is honestly imitated, but when this imitation ceases to be imitation and becomes rank hypocrisy, then such imitation has acted—and there are those who are yet to find that it will act so—as a dangerous boomerang, and the hypocrite will "bite the dust" because of his own game of deception.

And again, what does all this imitation finally prove? It proves that the De Laval is a perfect cream separator. Now wait. I hear someone say that there is no such a thing, humanly speaking, as perfection; that perfection belongs to the infinite and not to the finite. I hear another say that perfection is spiritual and not material. I believe in both spiritual and material perfection. I believe a man can be so submissive to the admonition "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect" that he does become perfect (and I am not jesting) in the sight of the Great Master above.

What is perfection? It is that quality or state of being perfect or complete so that nothing requisite is wanting. It means entire development—consummate skill—the highest obtainable state or degree of excellence. Is the De Laval separator perfect and complete? Unless you can show me a seperator that is more so, or equally as perfect and complete as the De Laval, then you must admit that, so far as present day genius is concerned, the De Laval is perfect and complete, for there is not another machine with which you can compare it to its disadvantage. That being the case it represents present day perfection and completeness. Is there any requisite lacking in the De Laval machine? Unless you can show me a machine that has in its makeup some requisite feature of advantage over a similar section of the De Laval, then you must admit that the De Laval does not lack a single requisite feature, and so is perfect. Does our machine lack entire development? To prove that it does you must show me a machine that has been developed to a higher point of efficiency or convenience, and unless you can do so- then you must admit that our machine represents, in cream separator construction, complete and entire development, and so is perfect. Does the De Laval machine represent, in its building, consummate skill? Unless you can show me a separator that represents in its building as great or greater mechanical skill, and into whose construction has been expended a higher degree of inventive genius than the De Laval—unless you can show me this, then the De Laval stands as an example of consummate skill, and so is perfect. Does the De Laval separator, in the cream separator world, represent the highest obtainable state or degree of excellence? Unless you can show me a cream separator, the manufacturers of which have set for themselves a higher degree of excellence, have worked and are working, and have attained a higher degree of perfection, then you must admit that the De Laval has reached the highest attainable state of excellence, and so is perfect.

I don't agree with the philosophy of measuring perfection today from the standpoint of development, advancement and culture we may attain to a hundred years hence; but perfection today must be measured by the standards of today. I admit that what is perfect today may not be perfect a year from today, for continued effort, application and investigation will give birth to new ideas and will result in the discovery of what now are unknown things and will bring about new inventions, all of which will establish new standards. And when increased knowledge and genius bring about these new things we will then have a new standard of perfection, and we must come to that new standard or be content with the epithet of "Has beens" or "Just as good." My whole argument is that the De Laval cream separator is today perfect because in its construction is incorporated the highest obtainable skill and degree of excellence. Our competitors admit our perfection by imitating us, for who ever heard of anybody imitating a thing or a person they thought was second class?

I am inclined to think that the only just criticism that can be made against Mr. Lawson's ladder is that he stopped at the round representing 99 per cent. perfect. He should have put in the other round. The reason we didn't take this view of it at the time the ladder appeared is that at that time we hadn't adjusted ourselves to the change from the old machine to the new, but now that we know more about the new machine we can the better appreciate its merits and do believe that it is "perfect in construction" and the ideal cream separator.

Fines in Germany.

The German workman who the other day was fined in a London police court probably considered that he had a genuine grievance when he complained that, in addition to the fine, his compulsory attendance at the court had lost him a day's pay. For they do these things better—at any rate, from the delinquents' point of view—in the fatherland. For what may be described as a trivial offense the worker is not compelled to attend the court, and the amount of the fine is collected from him at his house by a policeman. In the event of a more serious though still comparatively venial breach of the law, punishable by a short term of imprisonment, justice is satisfied if he works off the time by installments Sundays and holidays.—London Chronicle.

All His Own.

A young man and his sweetheart were walking together through lanes and fields.

The young man was rather of a bashful nature and had been paying attention to this same young woman for a considerable time without having plucked up courage to put the all important question.

On this particular night, however, he mustered sufficient pluck to ask her how she thought he was progressing with his courting. At the same time his arm stole round her waist.

"Well, Jack," said the girl quietly, "I think you are holding your own at present."

INSOMNIA

Leads to Madness, if Not Remedied in Time.

"Experiments satisfied me, some 5 years ago," writes a Topeka woman, "that coffee was the direct cause of the insomnia from which I suffered terribly, as well as the extreme nervousness and acute dyspepsia which made life a most painful thing for me.

"I had been a coffee drinker since childhood, and did not like to think that the beverage was doing me all this harm. But it was, and the time came when I had to face the fact, and protect myself. I therefore gave up coffee abruptly and absolutely, and adopted Postum for my hot drink at meals.

"I began to note improvement in my condition very soon after I took on Postum. The change proceeded gradually, but surely, and it was a matter of only a few weeks before I found myself entirely relieved—the nervousness passed away, my digestive apparatus was restored to normal efficiency, and I began to sleep, restfully and peacefully.

"These happy conditions have continued during all of the 5 years, and I am safe in saying that I owe them entirely to Postum, for when I began to drink it I ceased to use medicines." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

CONQUER THE CANAANITES.

By Rev. Karl Reiland.

And the Canaanite was then in the land.—Gen. xii., 6.

This text is taken from the story of the "call" of Abraham. God "called" him from his humble abode to journey toward a great land of promise, the Land of Canaan.

But alas! when he arrived at the border of this land of promise he found it already occupied! "The Canaanite was then in the land."

Who were they? Well, they were a formidable part of that ancient people called Hittites, a great warlike band, quick to resent invasion. They were already there and had to be reckoned with, in spite of the fact that God had called Abraham and promised him the land, with blessing, opportunity and privilege.

I wonder if you have ever thought of it. God "calls" every man. Every better desire of your heart, every purer thought of your mind, every deeper yearning of your soul after something greater and more promising is God's call to you. Every promotion before you, every opportunity confronting you, every chance to better yourself is a call of God to you.

But alas! when you make the effort you find instead of the glowing pictures you have framed, instead of the ease and tranquility you imagined, there are serious drawbacks, obstacles hindrances, burdens, cares and limitations. Your land of brilliant promise is already occupied, for the Canaanites are there.

The boy starts for boarding school fondly believing he has forever escaped parental control, his father's wearying precepts, his mother's constant oversight, but when he arrives he finds rigid discipline and penalties for infractions—Canaanites! The youth looks out to manhood as the goal of freedom and self-government. Oh, the promises and blessings which hover over the words, "of age!" But, alas! when they arrive! Responsibility, care, earning a living, the world's exactions, governing a character, making a reputation—Canaanites everywhere and right difficult to overcome! Every new position or advance from laborer to foreman, from clerk to owner, it is the same—the land of promise has its Canaanites.

Culture is acquired by hours of patient Christian study in a combat with ignorance; character is won by bravely doing one's humble best for what is true and right and fighting what is false and wrong.

I do not know you or what you are trying to make of yourself, but if you believe that character is the greatest success in this world and work hard for it you will not be a failure. There may be an unlovely disposition in your home or at the office, there may be some vicious desire in your own heart, some harmful trait in your nature, some overgrown habit in your behavior, and yet you feel at times the longing and the impulse of the best and highest.

Take a serious view of life and believe God is calling you to better things, to make the most of yourself, to take by conquest the promise and blessing which are yours when you earn them. Yes, earn them by a strong, brave fight with your hindering, annoying Canaanites, whatever they may be. Go on; God calls you and that is enough.

LARGENESS OF HEART.

By Rev. Frank E. Goodchild.

God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart.—I. Kings iv. 29.

No man ever had a more varied endowment than Solomon, whose memory is cherished by Jews, Christians and Mohammedans alike.

He had such unbounded wealth that we are told he made silver as the stones of the streets in his capital city. He had a wisdom that so amazed men that they came from the ends of the earth to hear him. He had such skill in ruling that he left behind him world-wide fame that will endure to the end of time.

But this singular historian who tells us the story of his life reminds us that he had something beyond these things. The greatest of God's gifts to man is not a mighty brain, not a full purse, not to have his name on everybody's lips, but to have a generous spirit, "largeness of heart," as it is called in this text.

The Bible has a great deal to say about a man's heart. The mind of man is not ignored. We are told to love God with all our mind, but no one can read the Bible without discerning that its chief concern is with the heart. The Scriptures with unmistakable clearness declare the supremacy of the heart over the brain.

You may train the intellect and not make a man a mite better. It was said of one of the greatest of Englishmen that he was not only the wisest and brightest but also the meanest of mankind. But you cannot cultivate the graces of the heart without making a man good as well as great. Nobody impeaches the intellectual power of the devil. On the other hand, the best portrayal of God we have is in that wonderful phrase hat tells us that he is "full of compassion." And it is His "largeness of heart" that draws us to Him and makes us worship Him. And that is why the Bible says: "Keep thy heart with diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

If the heart is full of good intentions, it is easy to speak well and to do well. If the heart is a nest of evil desire, wickedness is the natural and inevitable outcome of it. We drill the minds of our children in knowledge; we train their hands to a trade; but too often we let the heart take its own way. Somebody has said that if an inhabitant of another world should visit ours and study the catalogues of our schools he would conclude that our race has no heart, so much provision is made for the training of the mind and the heart is so ignored.

If our heart is dwarfed, if our sympathies are narrow, if our interest in the needs of people about us is cold and dead, there is but one remedy; we must ask the Creator of the heart to help us and make us tender in spirit and we must exercise the heart by helping others.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

THE FIRM FOUNDATION.

Anonymous.

[Although this well known and greatly loved hymn is frequently attributed to one "Kirkham," the truth is that there is no reliable evidence as to its authorship. It first appeared in the "Selection of Hymns from the Best Authors," compiled by Dr. Rippon and published in 1787. Here it was credited to "K." This, taken with the fact that George Keith, a London publisher, was the chorister of Dr. Rippon's church, has led many to attribute the song to him. There is no doubt, however, as to the place occupied by this hymn; it is a classic, and judged by the spirit with which it is sung it is just as popular to-day as ever. The tune usually used with it is "Portuguese Hymn."]

Is laid for your faith in his excellent word!
What more can he say, than to you he hath said—
To you, who for refuge to Jesus have fled?

"Fear not, I am with thee, O, be not dismayed,
For I am thy God, I will still give thee aid:
I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand,
Upheld by my gracious, omnipotent hand.

"When through the deep waters I call thee to go,
The rivers of sorrow shall not overflow;
For I will be with thee thy trials to bless,
And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress.

"When through fiery trials thy pathway shall lie,
My grace, all sufficient, shall be thy supply,
The flame shall not hurt thee; I only design
Thy dross to consume, and thy gold to refine.

"Ev'n down to old age all my people shall prove
My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And then, when gray hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne.

"The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose,
I will not—I will not desert to his foes:
That soul—though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never—no, never—no, never forsake!"

SERMONETTES.

The virtues never vaunt themselves.

It is a good thing for the oak to look often at the acorn.

When a sermon gets thin it is sure to spread itself out long.

Often you must forget the good you have won to reach the good you would be.

He who dare not be misunderstood never says anything worth understanding.

No man is worth anything to his age who does not sometimes get angry with it.

The difficulty of representing religion would be halved if its misrepresenting friends would all die.

The measure of love is not whether it drains your bank account, but whether it draws on your heart.

It is always easier to sing of golden boulevards than it is to make streets so that crookedness cannot hide in them.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't try to keep friends if you fear to have foes.

Don't fail to observe that progress generally makes her own way.

Don't forget that good morals are always clothed with good manners.

Don't forget that ignorance is the weakest protection possible to innocence.

Don't expect the dollar to be worth much to you until you are worth more than the dollar.

Don't forget that while adversity often works prosperity, that fact does not acquit the man who brings it on another.

QUAINT COLONIAL TOWN

COURTHOUSE BUILT IN 1654.

First Edifice Cost 7,000 Pounds of Tobacco—The Taylor House and the Masonic Hall.

There is a certain quiet charm and tinge of beautiful romance about the old scenes and old things in Eastville, Va., one of the oldest settled portions of the original colonies, the Detroit Free Press says. The earliest settlement on the eastern shore of Virginia was made by Capt. Thomas Ancient Savage at the foot of Savage's Neck, near this place, on a grant from the Indian king of the Accomacks, called the "laughing king." This grant included the present site of Eastville.

In the old clerk's office, erected in 1719, there are records going back to 1632, and unbroken to the present day, forming the oldest continuous records in this country.

From these one finds that the first courthouse was erected by Col. William Waters in 1654 at a cost of 7,000 pounds of tobacco. The next one was erected in 1688 by Joseph Godwin, and in 1731 it was rebuilt in brick by Capt. John Marshall at a cost of 50,000 pounds of tobacco. The old building has therefore a long and interesting history.

The other building, however, has been allowed to stand, and is now a venerable object of antiquity in the midst of change and decay. In this quaint and unpretentious structure were heard some of the most noted cases of colonial times. It was 20 by 30 feet, one story high, with a loft for the jury.

Godwin's tavern existed for many years, but in 1750 the Taylor house was built to supersede the other, and it still is doing service as the town hotel. Another quaint old structure is the old Masonic hall, built just after the revolution and used by that order for about a hundred years. In 1861 a body of northern troops entered it and was charged.

The old clerk's office was erected in 1719 and the debtor's prison some years later. It is situated back from the street and contains many interesting articles, the old clerk's desk, the attorney's table and other furniture of the old courthouse and the cases filled with old court papers, going back to the year 1700 and earlier. These furnishings are of solid walnut and did service for some two hundred years. The building is of brick, of a quaint design, but well built and well preserved. At the door is the measuring post at which negro slaves were stood and measured before being auctioned. The debtors' prison adjoins the criminal jail and also is queer looking. In it those who were unable to pay their debts were confined until they could make good with their creditors. They were limited to certain bounds, which were declared by the justices.

Flash-Lighting in the Jungle.

In British East Africa flash-light photography is full of adventure. The possibilities are unlimited and the conditions most favorable. A. R. Dugmore, in an interesting article in Collier's, describes some of the adventures which befall the photographer in the jungle.

One cannot tell what animal will come within reach of the camera. It may be a lowly jackal, a mighty, snorting rhinoceros, an exquisitely beautiful zebra, or a stealthy, silent-footed lion; but whatever it happens to be, it is game for the photographic bag.

One morning, while we were taking a nap after being up all night with flash-light work, we were aroused by the magic word, "Simba!" which is Swahili for lion. The porters, while gathering wood, had seen a lion about a mile from camp, and off we started with nearly the whole outfit following.

I carried my rifle, while the camera-bearer followed close behind with my camera ready for use. It was not long before something was seen to move in the papyrus not more than eight or ten yards in front of me, and out rushed a lion cub right into the midst of the men. A more ferocious little beast I have never seen.

We decided to use it for a lure for the old lions, and with this idea we bound its feet.

I was keeping a sharp outlook, and soon had the satisfaction of seeing my first wild lion. Not one, but the pair, attracted evidently by the cries of the young one, came within three hundred yards. A finer sight I have seldom seen than those two big tawny creatures. For a minute or so they watched us, then turned and disappeared; incidentally, I may add, so did most of the men, tall trees being considered the favored retreats.

Believing that the lions would return, we selected a tree with large horizontal branches from which I hoped to be able to use the camera, and there we proposed to stay. All day we stayed in the tree, but nothing further occurred, and we decided to spend part of the night there. We sat in our uncomfortable perch in a state of great excitement, and we heard, soon after nightfall, something approaching through the high grass. Nearer and nearer it came. I thought if I could get down to a lower branch I might be able to see better, and as noiselessly as possible I got down to within about six feet of the ground. Just as I reached this place they passed directly under me, but the darkness was so intense I could see nothing.

We heard them continue their way up the bed of the stream, stopping once to drink at a pool, and that was the last we heard of the lions. About 10 o'clock the moon rose, and as we were too tired to stay any longer in our uncomfortable position, we started for camp, and it was not a particularly pleasant walk, as every bush assumed the form of a lion to our overwrought imagination. We were thoroughly glad to reach camp in safety and get a good night's sleep.

Intelligence of the Fox.

The intelligence of the fox is often shown by the way he refuses to be headed when he has made up his mind as to the safe course to take, says the London Globe. The West Somerset have an excellent fixture at Kilve, but it has one drawback—the sea is not far off, and foxes naturally often make for the cliffs, a secure refuge. A fox can be easily headed at times, but that is nearly always when to be seen would betray him to his enemies the hounds and give them an advantage; but when, if he makes his point, the advantage is on his side, then nothing will turn him.

To return to the West Somerset at Kilve; they found a fox, and the whipper-in, seeing that the fox meant to go to the cliffs if possible, started to head him off. The ground was open, and for half a mile the whipper-in and fox were taking parallel lines, the fox clearly meaning to slip by and find a refuge in the cliffs. The man turned the fox away at last, but in a short time the hounds lost him, and I believe he got back after all.

Again the master ranged up some of the field to prevent another fox going back into a certain covert. In vain whips were rattled against saddle flaps; the fox went right through the watchers and made his point. It is a thing I have often noticed both with stag or fox, that the quarry seems to distinguish between real and false dangers.

Easily Obtained.

Richard Harding Davis, at a playwright's dinner in New York, ridiculed the pretensions of certain snobbish American families to be descended from Charlemagne, William the Conqueror, Richard Coeur de Lion and so forth.

"You see," said Mr. Davis, "proofs of such descent are very easily obtained. A herald, suitably remunerated, will trace a man back to the pre Adamite kings, just leaving a slight gap to indicate, you know, the flood. Once a millionaire trust president went to a herald for a coat of arms. He knew none of his ancestors, nor had he any means of tracing them.

"'Oh, we'll arrive at something yet,' the undiscouraged herald said. 'Tell me, now, if you have ever performed any signal or heroic feat on your own account.'

"'Well,' said the millionaire, 'I was once in jail, and I escaped by sawing the bars of a fourth-story window.'

"'And how did you get down from that great height?' the herald asked.

"'Well, there was a lofty statue of George Washington in front of the window, and I tied a rope to that, and slid down.'

"'Good!' cried the herald. 'Lineally descended from George Washington! We'll give you Washington's arms, of course.'"

A Mushroom Lover.

"These mushrooms," he concluded, "remind me of an incident that occurred while I was abroad in the autumn. You know how, on an English train, the passengers are locked in small compartments, and there is an emergency signal for them to pull in case the train must be stopped. Well, the signal was pulled one autumn day, and the train, with a great grinding of brakes, came to a sudden stop, and guards and conductor, pale with horror, ran up and down the carriages to see what terrible thing could have happened. They found, in a rearmost carriage, an old woman leaning far out of the window, waving her arms and her umbrella excitedly.

"'What's the matter, madam? Why did you stop the train?' they asked her.

"'You fools,' she answered, 'why didn't you stop before? We've just passed two of the finest mushrooms I've seen this many a year.'"

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. MAE MCKNIGHT, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. AL. HERZOG, 5722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Italy's Rest Days.

Under a law which went into effect Feb. 8, 1908, all industrial and commercial concerns throughout Italy must grant their employes a weekly rest of not less than twenty-four consecutive hours. It does not apply to public utilities, transportation lines or places of amusement. The general sense of the law is that Sunday shall be the rest day, but it is provided that freedom from work may be given on a day other than Sunday in the case of restaurants, photograph galleries, pharmacists, etc.

Stone Crab Farms of Florida.

Not every resident of Florida knows what a superior dish for the table is the stone crab. It is to southern waters what the lobster is to northern. George Lizotte of the Pass-a-Grille fenced in a portion of Boca Ciega bay some time ago and planted his water farm with stone crabs to prevent the extinction of the species. He is studying their wants and habits and believes he can largely increase their numbers yearly. Capt. Cason of Pass-a-Grille is preparing to fence in a second stone crab farm of large proportions. There is an enormous demand for the stone crab from the numerous visitors to the island, and the supply, though great, is being rapidly depleted.—Florida Times-Union.

George Meredith.

The legend that in his early days the late George Meredith was so poor that he invested all his funds in a sack of oatmeal, subsisting thereon while he wrote "Evan Harrington," is denied by J. A. One part of that picturesque if baseless story was to the effect that the novelist was not able to buy fuel and was accustomed to carry the bag of oatmeal across the rooms to keep himself warm.

Repulsive Eskimo Diet.

Scurvy, so common and deadly among early polar explorers, is totally unknown among Eskimos who eat raw meat. This idolized raw food also explains the absence of enlarged tonsils, glands and goiter. Their perfect, splendid teeth and strong lower jaws mark them completely carnivorous. The exclusion of vegetable food has shortened their intestine, and indigestion is unknown. One would suppose their pure flesh diet would cause biliousness, etc., but the large percentage of oil in their food acts as a gentle laxative and protects against all harm. The Week in Congress

The Senate did quick work Wednesday in disposing of the District of Columbia appropriation bill carrying about $10,000,000, and at 2:40 p. m. adjourned until Thursday. The House was engaged in an extended debate on the Mann "white slave" bill. The House also passed a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Navy to report whether during the present fiscal year any powder has been bought from a trust.

The Senate had a brief session Thursday, the only incident of which was a speech by Senator Bradley of Kentucky, in which he defended his State and charged that the "tobacco trust" was responsible for the acts of violence which had been perpetrated by the so-called night riders. At 1:26 p. m. the Senate adjourned until Monday. Ignoring the protests of the Democratic members, the Republican majority in the House ratified their caucus nominees for the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, displacing Representative Rainey of Illinois, one of the Democratic selections, and naming in his stead Representative Lloyd of Missouri, who indicated his unwillingness to serve on the committee. Consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill was resumed, but was laid aside until Friday, after three hours' debate.

The Senate was not in session Friday. The House passed the bill relieving William Boldenweck, assistant treasurer at Chicago, of responsibility for the $173,000 subtreasury theft. Mr. Lloyd, of Missouri, resigned from the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, Speaker Cannon sustaining his right to refuse to serve. Various private claim measures were considered. Adjourned at 5:06 until Monday.

Mr. Tillman in the Senate Monday criticised the administration for failing to prosecute suits against the Southern Pacific Railway Company for the recovery of public land granted to the railroad under the condition that it should be sold in tracts of 160 acres at not more than $2.50 an acre. The House passed the urgent deficiency bill, after cutting off the $125,000 item for the Immigration Commission. The bill carries nearly $5,000,000, which is $1,000,000 under the treasury estimates. The House named Mr. Graham, the Democratic caucus choice, to succeed Mr. Lloyd on the Ballinger-Pinchot committee.

The Senate Tuesday passed the fortifications bill carrying $5,817,200 and devoted some time to the consideration of a new national forest in Montana, but took no action. Mr. Bennet of New York made sweeping denials of the charges made the previous day by Mr. Macon of Arkansas of extravagance by the immigration commission. Mr. Macon refused to retract and the debate at times became torrid. The House passed a bill creating a bureau of mines in the Interior Department.

BREAKS A COLD IN A DAY

And Cures Any Cough That Is Curable—Noted Physician's Formula.

This is said to be the most effective remedy for coughs and colds known to science. "Two ounces Glycerine, half ounce Concentrated Pine; put these into half a pint of good whisky and use in doses of teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours. Shake bottle well each time." Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. The Concentrated Pine is a special pine product and comes only in half ounce vials each enclosed in an air-tight case. But be sure it is labeled "Concentrated." This formula cured hundreds here last winter.

Epidemic of Itch in Welsh Village.

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. I knew a dozen families that were so affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse; as a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

"I may add that my three brothers, three sisters, myself and all our families have been users of the Cuticura Remedies for fifteen years. Thomas Hugh, 1650 West Huron St., Chicago, Ill., June 29, 1909."

A NEW TOWN EVERY WEEK.

And a New School Every School Day.

The above caption about represents the growth of Central Canada. The statement was made not long since by a railroad man who claimed to have made the remarkable discovery that such was the case. There is not a district of a fair amount of settlement in any of the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, but has its school, and the railways have stations every seven or eight miles apart, around which group the towns, some large and some small, but each important to its own district. Schools are largely maintained by public funds and the expense of tuition is but a nominal sum.

The final returns of the grain production for Central Canada for 1909 are now in, and the figures show that the value of the crops to the farmers of that country is about $195,000,000, as compared with $120,000,000 last year. American farmers or those who have gone from the United States, will participate largely in these splendid returns, and these comprise those who have gone from nearly every state in the Union.

Impossible to be Well

It is impossible to be well, simply impossible, if the bowels are constipated. You must pay attention to the laws of nature, or suffer the consequences. Undigested material, waste products, poisonous substances, must be removed from the body at least once each day, or there will be trouble. A sluggish liver is responsible for an immense amount of suffering and serious disease. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills. He knows why they act directly on the liver. Trust him. *J. C. Farmer's Institute.

The DeKalb County Farmers Institute assembled at Widney's Opera House in St. Joe, February 7th 1910.

Chairman H. M. Widney called the meeting together at 9:30 A. M. and introduced E. C. Martindale of Hancock Co., who spoke on the subject of "Drainage." The farmers are to be congratulated on getting a speaker who talked with them instead of for them, making each topic a kind of progressive discussion instead of a lecture—in which the speaker was the leader and any one with clear ideas worth expressing were the helpers.

Mr. Martindale was equal to the occasion and kept the discussion closely confined to the topic.

The "General Advantages of Drainage," were very forcefully given under the outline of first, to get the surplus or free water away—and the reasons given for getting the water away—were that it let the air into the soil and the plants that the farmers raise need the air. Many plants like cat tail swamp grasses etc, did not need the air in the soil, but the plants that the other fellow would buy would not grow without the air in the soil warms it and thus lengthens the season. Makes hard land more friable—thus helping the tilling or handling. Allows freeer working of the numerous insects of the earth "Bacteria" that aid the growth of these plants. Betters the sanitary conditions.

The way of drainage was confined entirely to the drainage, and were given briefly.

Good outlet—tile laid deep should be large of good quality, if doubtful how to lay a poor tile "lay it on the bank."

The man needing an outlet through a neighbors farm should generally pay for half the tile in that outlet.

February 7 Afternoon

Was opened with a song by Morris Widney—One Hundred Fathoms Deep—followed by an address on "The Care and Training of the Horse" by E. C. Martindale. The speaker gave four varieties of horses that were worthy of the attention and care of the farmer.

1st. The Race Horse—The horse that is bred to get there and get there at once, bred for speed, symmetry and endurance, the most valuable of all horses if you get a good one. But a horse whose breeding and training was surrounded with all sorts of moral and financial temptations so much so that anyone who started in the business would do well to bid all his respectable neighbors good bye and deed his farm to his wife before he started.

2nd. The Coach Horse—whose breeding he condemned by the farmer as useless unless in pure breeds for the fancier.

3rd. Draft Horse—came in for a long laudatory speech because he was the horse to sell, should be bred for size alone—1600 to 2000 pounds weight and symmetry alone were his great points for the breeder, color should be good but was not of so much importance as in the carriage breeds.

Then if you failed to get the 1600 to 2000 pounds be fell naturally into the what he termed the 4th class the "Chunck" 1300 to 1600 pounds the horse of all work, everybody's pride and the most general serviceable horse of all. The speakers rule for training was very simple. Handle from birth and sell as soon as old enough, making an exception of the brood mare and the fleet pretty carriage horse that the wife likes to drive.

Evening Session

The evening was opened with a song by Morris Widney. Base Ball.

County Organization was then taken up by the Chairman, soliciting for members at twenty-five cents each, under a statute that compels the County Auditor to augment the sum received in this way by a sum of equal amount 60 subscribers were obtained and the sum of $15 was paid in which will be added to at the Corunna meeting on Wednesday of this week.

The organization was followed by an eloquent and emphatic address by Superintendent H. E. Coe of Auburn "The Boy on the Farm," in which he pictured the farm as the ideal place for the boy to grow to independent manhood free from what he called the "Gang Morals of the Town"—personally the writer thinks that parents have been told often enough that they pay more attention to their hogs than they do to their boys. Such speeches are only made by the thoughtless or by those so shallow that they are anxious for a little cheap applause.

The last number on the program for the evening was a plain heart to heart talk on the subject "The Home and its Influences," by the State Speaker, E. C. Martindale, in which the speaker eloquently and passionately pled for thoughtful, loving, helpful homes in which to develope the children.

Tuesday Session Continued Next Week.

Mrs. Hazel Krise spent a couple of days at Wayne, last week.

Baltz--Maggert

John Maggert, the poupular mayor of Altona, and incidentally the proprietor of the supply house for that place, more commonly called the Maggert store, lost his clerk Sunday, the one who has greeted customers since she was old enough to reach over the counter.

J. L. F. Baltz, a Spencerville school teacher, is responsible for the loss. He claimed the young lady in marriage and the father squiesced.

Only the immediate relatives witnessed the beautiful ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Harper of Adrain, Michigan, at 2 o'clock that afternoon, following which congratulations were extended, and many beautiful gifts were presented the couple, saying nothing about the wedding feast, yet not so inconsequential after all.

The contracting parties are well and favorably known. They start in marriage backed by the good wishes of many friends They will reside at Spencerville where the groom has a farm. He is a brother of Mrs. Rolla Moffet of this city, who, together with her family, shared in the nuptial festivities. The Maggert family is too well respected to need any newspaper ink, as is the groom's family. —Dispatch. Congratulations.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Maggert of Kendallville, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Maggert and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Maggert of Altona, Ind.; Mr. O. H. Maggert of Michigan; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon of Auburn; Jacob Baltz, father of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Moffett and two daughters of Auburn; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Sommers of Grabill and S. H. Maurer of Spencerville.

A Business Change Made.

We have been informed of a business change that is to take place soon whereby C. A. Patterson becomes the sole owner of the Big 4 Store and S. W. Tustison becomes assistant cashier of the St. Joe Valley Bank. As Mr. Patterson's health will not permit him to work steady it was found necessary to have someone at the desk continually and by Mr. Patterson overseeing the work his burden would be lightened.

Culture Club

Mrs. Eva Sheffer was hostess to the Culture Club, Wednesday evening, February 2. The XII chapter was well conducted by Mrs. Belle Ridgway and many interesting historical events were discussed. Roll call and business after which the entertaining committee, Mrs. Deama Curie and Mrs. Alice Copp took charge of the evening. The first on program, Mrs. Buchanan gave a very interesting talk on her trip through the west last summer and she told it so graphically we all imagined we could see the sights also. The next was a mid-winter flower garden, which was both humorous and instructive, Mrs. Jennie White and Miss Eva Ridgway had equal number of correct answers and they were compelled to draw cuts, the latter one being the lucky one to get a fine box of bon bons. The next contest was a geographical one which taxed the wit of the ladies but all rose equal to the occasion, Mrs. Lora Leighty winning the prize, a beautiful book. Club adjourned to meet in one week with Mrs. Jennie White.

Mine Damp Takes Toll Once More.

One of the greatest disasters in the history of Mexican coal mining, which has heretofore experienced several crushing blows, resulting in a tremendous loss of human life, took place in the Palau mine at Las Esperanseas, Mexico. The toll of human life which paid the penalty of negligence on the part of some miner, according to the latest report is placed at seventy, while the list of injured numbers nearly as many. Many heart-rending scenes were enacted as the bodies were brought up from the shaft and stretched out in rows upon the ground to await identification. Most of the killed were Mexicans, the Japanese miners being employed in the other parts of the mine. As soon as the authorities learned of the explosion, state representatives were sent to the scene and immediately placed in entire charge of the work of rescue and investigation. At once parties of rescuers went down the shafts and began a search for the dead. A terrible sight met their eyes. Scattered about in various positions in the workings they found the bodies of the men, suffocated; their faces indicating in many instances the bitter fight they had waged to reach pure air and safety without the workings. After six hours' work fifty-three bodies were brought to the surface, while nearly forty injured men were removed to hospitals for treatment. The injured owe their miraculous escape to the fact that they were working at points in the third stage of the workings where they were practically protected from the rush of foul air.

Salt Lake Continues to Come Up.

Word has been received from Ogden, Utah, that the Great Salt Lake, which was said six years ago to be disappearing, is dashing over the western end of the Southern Pacific Lucin cut off and threatening trains. The lake is now higher than at any time within the memory of white men. The west end of the cut off being six feet lower than the rest of the causeway is the chief danger point. If the lake continues to rise it will be necessary to elevate most of the piling in the meantime to send trains around by the old promonotory route. When the Lucin cut off was constructed the track was twenty feet above the water level. Scientists say that the lake rises and recedes in cycles and that the recession will soon begin.

North Dakota Senator Resigns.

Hon Fountain L. Thompson, recently appointed a senator from North Dakota, has resigned on account of ill health and Hon. W. E. Purcell, of Wahpeton, Wash., has been appointed his successor. The announcement was made in the senate by Senator Money and Mr. Purcell was sworn in.

Cop Shoots Wrong Man.

While shooting at an alleged pickpocket in a crowded street in Chicago, Policeman Sullivan shot Leon Beresonik, the man upon whom the alleged attempt at robbery was made. Mr. Beresonik was not seriously injured. The alleged robber was captured and gave his name as John Doe.

Big Gift for University.

Announcement is made by the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania that a gift of $100,000 has been received for a chair in the medical department of the institution. Further particulars of the gift will be announced on "University Day," February 22.

PARIS FORCES BUSY SAVING BIG BUILDINGS

As Slime Sweeps Away from Streets Men Battle to Save Structures in Peril.

A FEVER EPIDEMIC UNLIKELY

Physicians Warn Residents Against Occupancy of Homes Until Premises Are Disinfected.

With the subsiding of the waters of the Seine, the situation in Paris and its suburbs did not immediately improve. Sewers in all quarters have burst and flooded the basements, creating further property loss. As the flood has slowly subsided, and as the slime swept away from the streets, men have battled to save imperfied buildings. Physicians have warned residents against occupancy of homes until the premises are thoroughly disinfected and it is thought the feared fever epidemic is unlikely.

Sitting in the center of an ancient gulf of the sea, Paris has been inundated by the waters of distant mountain torrents and of nearer streams, all of which together drain a vast area. The Seine is commonly free from floods, owing largely to the permeable character of the rocks underlying the greater portion of its extensive valley. Recently its tributaries became enormously swollen by continuous rains and melting snow. From the Yonne and the Aube to the Marne, discharging into the Seine near the gates of Paris, the flooded streams were so many sources of peril to the great city.

Paris in a week's time was moved back to the middle ages so far as comforts and conveniences go. The only bridge open across the Seine for foot passengers was that built by Louis XIV. Horses supplied all transportation, candles furnished all the light and the food probably was even less varied than that in the middle ages.

PLACES IN PARIS THAT HAVE BEEN FLOOD-SWEPT.

Boulevard de la Madeleine.

While the sufferings in the poorer districts of the flooded suburbs was beyond description, the wealthier quarters were no less affected. Hundreds who are known to fame for wealth and ancient lineage were little better off than their poorer fellow sufferers.

The extent of the disaster has so overwhelmed every one that no man, from the president of the republic down, can realize the exact extent, much less report it in detail. As an example of the siege, prices charged for a bottle holding a quart of kerosene cost $1, and candles sold at 15 cents apiece.

The fact that Paris sits upon a crust of earth, over vast systems of tunnels and sewers and subterranean streams, added materially to the danger of the situation. The caving in of streets became an alarming feature of the inundation. To what extent the floods rushing through the underground passages will yet break down the foundations of the city is a problem of the greatest gravity. While the torrents above ground were dreadful enough the mystery of what may happen below the surface weighs upon the city.

There is good reason to hope that the ruin wrought by the flood will not be nearly so great as that which the alarm of the whole world imagines for the beautiful capital of Europe. At best, however, the loss and suffering will be enormous.

EX-AMBASSADOR DRAPER DIES.

General Who Held Post at Rome Passes Away in Washington.

Brigadier General William F. Draper, former American ambassador to Italy, died at his home in Washington after a prolonged illness, aged 68 years. He was born in Lowell, Mass., in 1842, and served in the Union army from 1861 to 1864. In 1888 he was a presidential elector and he served as a Republican member in the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Congresses, declining a third nomination. In 1897 he was appointed ambassador to Italy, holding that post until 1900.

TAKING THE DILEMMA BY BOTH HORNS—AND THE TAIL.

TRAIN KILLS THREE AT CROSSING

Slays Woman and Claims Men Victims Further On Trip.

A west-bound Pennsylvania train struck and killed Mrs. Roy Covert and fatally injured her husband at a crossing near Londonville, Ohio. Proceeding further, the train struck an automobile on the outskirts of Crestline, a few miles away, and killed J. H. Sigler, aged 60, and Charles Echelberger, both of Hayesville. In the automobile with Echelberger and Sigler was Curtiss Doerrer of Mansfield. Doerrer's shoulder was crushed and his leg was broken and he received internal injuries. The young woman, who was the first to meet death on the track, was on her way with her husband to visit a neighbor. Her death was instantaneous. The automobile party came upon the tracks in the machine from the rear of an east-bound freight, directly in front of the express.

Snow Saves Oregon City.

Fought only by volunteers with garden hose and dampened blankets, a fire starting shortly after midnight in Baker City, Ore., did damage estimated at $284,000, partly covered by insurance. For a while the greater part of the city was threatened, and only the snow on roofs saved much of it.

Children Hurt in Tornado.

Seven pupils and a teacher were hurt when a tornado demolished the Two Mile Swamp schoolhouse, twelve miles from Orangeburg, S. C. The injured teacher is Miss Julia Reed. The schoolhouse was reduced to a mass of splintered timbers.

BIG NEW YORK BROKERS FAIL.

Bad Market Causes Fisk & Robinson to Go Into Receivership.

Fisk & Robinson, members of the New York Stock Exchange and one of the best known bond houses in New York, with branches in Chicago, Boston and Worcester, were petitioned into insolvency the other day by three friendly creditors. The liabilities of the firm approximate $7,000,000, with nominal assets slightly in excess of that sum.

Calling of the bank for better collateral than is held as security for some of the firm's loans, inability of the firm to market some $2,000,000 of the bonds and preferred stock of the Buffalo and Susquehanna Railway Company and general dullness of the bond market are assigned as the causes of the failure, which, according to Joseph Stanley Brown, floor manager of the firm and one of the petitioning creditors, was decided upon when it became clear to the members that to continue further would be too dangerous and unfair to the creditors.

ESCAPING PRISONERS ARE SHOT.

Naval Convicts' Dash for Liberty at Portsmouth, N. H., Fails.

While attempting to escape from the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H., three men were shot by guards, one being killed and the other two badly wounded. The dead man is R. F. Spurling, of Indianapolis. The wounded are Harry McGarvey and Albert J. Montgomery. The men were serving short terms for minor offenses. At the end of the noon hour, when the prisoners were marching back to their places of employment in the yard, they made their dash for liberty. They were shot while attempting to cross the Piscataqua River in a skiff.

FIGHTS TRUST WITH DIMES.

Gompers Sends Out Appeal Asking 5,000,000 to Give Small Sum.

In a circular sent out from the national headquarters of a dozen labor organizations in New York, the 5,000,000 members of labor unions and farmers' granges throughout the United States are formally asked by Samuel Gompers to contribute 10 cents each to fight the steel trust. Mr. Gompers says that the unions are acting "in self-defense and in protection of the Americann standards of life and of American institutions."

Prince Henry of Germany is superintending the preparation of an arctic exploring party which in the spring will make an attempt to reach the north pole in a dirigible balloon.

It is a noteworthy fact that owing to the American superiority in the tanning of leather, a large amount of hide-stock is sent to the United States for that purpose and then returned to Germany ready for use in the shoe factories.

An agitation has been started in Sweden for the reduction if not the abolition of the duties on wheat and rye. The tremendously high cost of bread in that country has had much to do with the growth of the industrial unrest.

Russia intends to try protection for the building up of her infant industries in the way of agricultural machinery and farm implements. Under existing laws this class of manufactured goods is admitted free from duty and will be for another year.

THE FOOD BOYCOTT.

Strikes Against High Prices Spreading to Many Places.

The "strike" on the part of the indignant people against the outrageous prices which are demanded for food is spreading from city to city and is being hailed with enthusiasm.

More than 25,000 heads of families (representing fully 100,000 individuals) in Cleveland, Ohio, have signed an agreement not to eat meat for thirty days. An immediate result has been the closing of several meat markets and a reduction in the price of meat, especially pork and veal. The "strike" is spreading to Akron, Toledo and other nearby cities. Meat orders in Cleveland restaurants have fallen off fully 50 per cent. Union workmen in Omaha to the number of over 5,000 have agreed to eat no meat for thirty days, and it is expected the number will reach 15,000. In Pittsburg the Iron City Trades Council has asked more than 1,500,000 working people in that and nearby communities to abstain from meat for sixty days. Three hundred families in Naugatuck and Phoenix, Conn., have joined a boycott against butter.

The assertion made by the packers that the high price of meat is due to scarcity of cattle does not seem to be borne out by the facts. A. D. Melvin, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington, presents figures which show that more cattle, calves and sheep are being sent to the stock yards now than were being marketed for the corresponding period a year ago. In November, 1908, Chicago packers slaughtered 161,328 cattle, while in November, 1909, the number was 175,929, an increase of 14,601 beeves during a period of so-called scarcity. At East St. Louis the receipts of cattle for the entire year 1909 exceeded those of 1908 by 95,333.

Like a snowball rolling down hill under the most favorable conditions, constantly growing in bulk and accelerating in speed, the strike of the indignant consumers against the outrageous prices of food necessaries grows as each day passes. What the ultimate result will be remains to be seen.

35 DIE IN NEW HORROR.

Drakesboro, Ky., Has Mine Catastrophe—19 Bodies Taken Out.

Nineteen corpses removed from the Browder mine at Drakesboro, Ky., ten bodies in sight in the workings and six others known to be dead was the count at midnight in the death roll resulting from the explosion of gases in the mine at noon the other day. Nearly a score of men were mangled by the explosion, and many of these will probably die.

Rescuers worked desperately to save the miners who might yet be alive and to recover the bodies of those killed. Of the ten men who were taken out, five were badly injured and five practically unhurt. There is no fire in the mine and both the fan and air shafts remain intact.

Because of the accumulation of gases in the entry where the explosion occurred, 170 feet beneath the ground and 700 feet back from the main shaft, it was impossible to begin rescue work until six hours after the disaster. There were 100 men in the mine, many of whom fought their way to safety.

MRS. CHRISTY LOSES CASE.

Ohio Court Awards Daughter to Artist's Parents.

Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy's initial efforts to obtain legal possession of her daughter, Natalie, have failed. Probate Judge Smith in Zanesville, Ohio, committed her to the care of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Christy, at Duncan Falls. Judge Smith expressed his belief that Christy had reformed and was a fit companion for the child. In reference to Mrs. Christy, the court held that evidence tending to show that she had been guilty of improper conduct had not been denied or explained by herself or witnesses, and that no evidence had been introduced to show that her alleged intemperance has not continued down to the present time.

M'CANN IS GIVEN STAY.

Granted Writ of Supersedeas Following Formal Sentence.

Edward McCann was sentenced to a prison term of from one to five years by Judge Barnes in Chicago on his conviction of the alleged acceptance of bribes while police inspector from denizens of the West Side underworld. Although a writ of supersedeas immediately was issued by Justice Orrin N. Carter of the Supreme Court on the theory that there was "reasonable doubt" of the defendant's guilt, and McCann's bond was reduced from $30,000 to $10,000, the convicted police official was taken into custody by order of Sheriff Strassheim.

TO LOAN GERMANY VAST SUM.

American Capitalists to Furnish $120,000,000 to Nation.

Germany's bid for American good will appeared the other day, in the opinion of Washington officials, when word was received that Germany asks for a loan of $120,000,000. The loan, it seems, was to be announced in the first week of this year, but was held up when it became known to the German government that complications in the far East were to ensue. There is a disposition in Washington to believe that the Morgan syndicate abroad will take a major share of this loan, placed on the market at 102.

WALL'S FALL CAUSES DEATH.

Ruins Collapse in Gale, Crushing a House—One Killed, One Missing.

Six persons were known to be in the rooming house at 428 West Fourth street, Cincinnati, which was demolished when a wall of a five-story ruined distillery was blown down by the wind. Of these one is dead, another is missing and four were injured. Joseph Cassenella was killed. Joseph Brannigan is missing. The rooming house was a two and a half story brick. At the time of the accident the wind was blowing forty-five miles an hour. The inmates of the house were buried beneath tons of debris. Police and firemen immediately set to work and brought five out of the ruins. Cassenella died later.

SAVES A LIFE; GETS $100,000.

Lumberman Rewarded for Heroic Deed Performed in England.

John S. Andrews of Sault Ste. Marie, who before going to Canada was a porter on the London & Southwestern Railway, claims he has been left $100,000 by an aged lady whose life he saved when he rescued her from the track in front of an approaching train. Though unrewarded at the time the woman was profuse in her thanks, telling Andrews that his fortunate intervention on her behalf should not be forgotten. Andrews has been working in a lumber camp near the Soo during the winter and recently was notified that he was heir to a fortune of $20,000. He cabled to England and received assurance of the reality of his luck. He is now on his way to England to get the money.

Wheat Worth $141,320,000.

The total wheat crop of Canada last year was 166,744,000 bushels, averaging 21.5 bushels per acre, with an average market value of 84.8 cents per bushel, according to the report of United States Consul Paul Lang, of Sherbrooke, Que. The aggregate value of the crop was $141,320,000. The crop exceeded that of 1908 by 54,310,000 bushels.

Night Riders in New Raid.

An attempt was made at 2 o'clock the other morning by alleged night raiders to wreck the fifth floor of the McClelland Building, the skyscraper home of the Burley Tobacco Society in Lexington, Ky. THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE GLORY OF THE NAZARENE.

By Rev. W. E. Tilroe.

And we beheld His glory.—John 1:14.

That a citizen of the earth, some nineteen centuries ago, a certain Syrian Jew, one Jesus of Nazareth, lived a life that was a life of glory, is the thing that is here said. Other things are said, but our matter of talk is this. It is not a theological vision, but a plain record. "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory."

The glory of the Christ life may be seen earliest, possibly, in that it is the only one of its kind. It was a unique life. Jesus Christ was one, "Only begotten." In all the ages He has no fellow. When Napoleon said "Not one is like Him," he had this vision. It is of the genius of greatness to carve a niche for itself, to fly in its own orbit, to evermore walk lonely. Moses, Aristotle, Cæsar, Shakespeare are memories of the forgotten, and live among the dead. So there was never another like the Son of Mary. Reverence is born of respect, and worship of the Christ may well begin by finding Him among the solitary few. History can neither be written nor read without mention of His name. Jesus of Nazareth is even now Jesus of the planet.

The glory of the Christ life is seen also in its transcendence. It is a biography evermore parting from men and carried out of their vision. "The darkness comprehended it not." "The world knew Him not." "His own received Him not." Men face the Christ not only with mortal opposition, but with mental collapse. They reject Him as surely that they are little as they are wicked. Their logic falls in a heap. They walk by faith or stagger to the dust. Unless they believe on His name, receive Him, are given right and power to be sons of God, are veritably born again, they never catch the glory of the Christ.

No man worships down. No man worships at a level. To his own mind every man worships up. It may be stick, or star, or beast, or the vision of his dreams, but it is always and forever up. A Christ who is not above, beyond, elusive, infinite, will never receive sacrifices or hear prayers. He may have a virgin birth, work miracles, rise from the dead, ascend the skies as the stairway of His home, and I need not doubt or be alarmed. I could not do Him reverence were He not somehow superhuman. Such a Christ may astound me, but He does not surprise. He is the very Christ I would look for, my Master, the Lord of my life. Such is the Christ of God, the transcendent Christ. "And we beheld His glory."

When a scientist will study sunshine he runs it through a prism and confines it to the limits of his desk. The thing that floods a universe does not vanish or change in two feet square. So the immortal Christ, light of the world, shut up in the short years of His Palestinian abiding, shows still the primal glories of the eternities and the Father's house. Does He bring grace and truth to the earth? He is "full of grace and truth." Does He speak with men? "Never man spake like this man." Is He accused of wrong? "I find no fault in this man." Does He feed the multitude from a lunch box? They gather of the fragments by the basketful. Does He heal the sick? It is not a matter of visits, mumbling, and income, but men take up their bed and walk. Is there an hour when speech is folly? He answers not a word, and the mighty of the earth marvel. Finally, with His life at His back and His face to the sky He cries in triumph, "It is finished," and meets the Eternal with His record. Always and everywhere he is the Superlative Christ.

The alarming message of Jesus is that He is the last and farthest reach of the mind and hand of God. To go farther would be to do worse, to be less wise and loving, to set weakness in the seat of power, and to furnish the earth at last the thing it is hungry for, a real excuse for sin. A God who might have done more and better for His children and withheld His hand would be dumb on His own judgment day. The Superlative Christ is the exhaustion of divinity for the good of men. Unique, transcendent, unsurpassable, "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," we behold His glory.

VALUE OF SELF-CONTROL.

By Rev. De Witt L. Pelton, Ph. D.

He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city.—Proverbs 16:32.

According to the Christian conception of human nature every man is a king, deriving his prerogatives directly from the Almighty Himself. Like a king he is expected to rule his limited domain in harmony with the laws which God has laid for the universe, as each separate municipality frames its ordinances in accordance with the supreme law of the land.

Because we are kings the quality proper to sovereignty should characterise us; namely, self-control, home rule. We should have as absolute control over our ambitions, aims, passions and desires as the engine driver over his locomotive, the general over an army, a captain over a battleship. Marvelous as a battleship is in its construction, intricate as it is in all its parts and adapted to its various duties, it is not so wonderful as the human organism. The body is a machine composed of myriad minute parts, each performing certain definite functions, possessing as no other organism does, the power of repair.

Moreover, it is a much more valuable mechanism commercially than is generally appreciated. If a man's income is $2,000 annually, this is 5 per cent on $40,000. If that sum were put into your hands would you not think that you ought to exercise considerable care in its investment and use? But when we consider that this physical organism is the seat of all our hopes and joys and fears; more than that, that it is the temple of the indwelling soul, freighted thereby with eternal interests of weal or woe, how precious does its well-being become; how important its guidance and control!

How shall we gain control of ourselves? Something is gained when we realize the extreme importance of self-control and how fraught with danger the lack of it is here and hereafter. Something can be done by direct resolve, by the direct exercise of the will. Take command of yourself. Be a king in your own realm, a limited one, perhaps, but yours to rule. The human will is the grandest power in the universe outside of God Himself. There is little that can stand before a determined soul's resolve, "I will." Such a decision has been the turning point of many a character.

True self-control is, however, called by St. Paul "a fruit of the spirit," for so "temperance" is to be translated. True self-control comes by submitting ourselves to God, putting ourselves in the grasp of and in allegiance with "power that is stronger than we are." Such was the method of the Master. Because He lived in closest communion with the Father, His life was the embodiment of all spiritual and heavenly grace. We can all follow His method. As Lowell says: "We are all tall enough to reach God's hand and angels are no taller." By living in communion with God as Jesus did, we shall be able like Him to still the voice of anger, check the hot spirit of revenge, cool the fevered torrent of ambition, curb the threatening ascendency of passion, as a master curbs his dog—attain, in short, true self-control.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

A CONSECRATION HYMN.
By Frances Ridley Havergal.

[Frances Ridley Havergal (Astley, England, Dec. 14, 1836—Swansea, Wales, June 3, 1879) was the most facile of the modern hymn writers. Her complete poetical works, all of which are of a religious character, make a large volume. In connection with the Young People's church organizations many of her hymns have become exceedingly popular. The "Consecration Hymn" is used to this day more than any other song in the meetings of these societies, as well as being a favorite with popular church gatherings.]

Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee;
Take my hands, and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love.

Take my feet, and let them be
Swift and beautiful for Thee;
Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only, for my King.

Take my lips, and let them be Filled with messages from Thee;
Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withhold.

Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow in ceaseless praise;
Take my intellect, and use
Every power as Thou shalt choose.

Take my will, and make it Thine;
It shall be no longer mine;
Take my heart, it is Thine own!
It shall be Thy royal throne.

Take my love; my Lord, I pour
At Thy feet its treasure-store;
Take myself, and I will be,
Ever, only, all for Thee.

SERMONETTES.

Saints seldom suffer from a sense of superiority.

Unity of aim is more than identity of appearance.

You can never pray for another with your lips alone.

The best pride of ancestry is to be a light to posterity.

Faith does more than defend old facts; it makes new ones.

He can never know men who will not stop to know children.

Some men come near proving the devil when they argue on their god.

No man gets far in the business of living who lives only for business.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't forget that true worship cannot be kept within walls.

Don't become pauper to all by thinking you are debtor to none.

Don't fail to note that religion never means much until it is more than all religions.

Don't fail to observe that often the little kindnesses do most for the universal love.

Don't forget that a lonesome little orphan sin always turns out to have plenty of cousins.

Don't become so conceited that you never know whether you are confessing faults or advertising virtues.

CHAPTER IX.

Though all the western quarter of the sky was night-black and spangled yet with stars, the dawn was graying slowly in the east when Tybee roused me. My soldier hangmen marched me off without ado. The house and all within it seemed yet asleep, but out of doors the legion vanguard was astir, and newly kindled camp-fires smoked and blazed among the trees. In shortest space we left these signs of life behind.

A mile beyond the outfields of Appleby Hundred we passed the legion picket line, and I began to wonder why we went so far. We came into an open grove of oaks. On its farther confines two horses nibbled rein's-length at the grass, with Falconnet's trooper serving-man to hold them; and, standing on the very spot where he had thrust me out, my enemy was waiting. Captain Falconnet spoke:

"I have come to speed your parting, Captain Ireton. You are a thick-headed, witless fool, as you have always been."

He took a folded paper from his pocket and held it so that I might read. It was a letter from Lord Cornwallis, directing Captain Falconnet to send his prisoner, Captain John Ireton, sometime lieutenant in the Royal Scots Blues, under guard to his Lordship's headquarters in South Carolina.

"This supersedes the Colonel's sentence," said Falconnet. "If I say the word to Ensign Farquarson you will be remanded."

"Make an end," I said. "I understand you will obey his Lordship's order, or disregard it, as your own interest directs. What would you have me do?"

"A very little thing to weigh against a life. Mr. Gilbert Stair is my very good friend. His title to the estate is secure enough, as you know, but you can make it better. Your route to Camden lies through Charlotte. Your guard will give you time and opportunity to execute a quitclaim in Mr. Stair's favor."

"Is that all?" I asked.

"No; after that our ways must lie apart—or yours and Margery's, at all events. Give me your word of honor that you relinquish any claim you have, or think you have, upon her, and I pass this letter on to the ensign."

"Then Mistress Margery sent you here to save me?"

"So the priest carried tales, did he? Well, make the most of it; she would not have her father's guest taken from his bed and hanged like a dog."

I smiled again. "'Twas more than that: she would even go so far as to beg her husband's life a boon from that same husband's mortal enemy."

"Bah!" he scoffed. "That lie of yours imposed upon the colonel, but I had better information."

"A lie, you say? True, 'twas a lie when it was uttered. But afterward, some hour or so past midnight, by the good help of Father Matthieu, and with your Lieutenant Tybee for one witness and the lawyer for another, we made a sober truth of it."

I hope, for your own peace of mind, my dears, that you may never see a fellow human turn demon in a breath as I did then. His man's face fell away from him like a vanishing mask, and in the place of it a hideous demon, malignant and murderous, glared upon me. Twice his hand sought the sword-hilt, and once the blade was half unsheathed. Then he thrust his face in mine and hissed his parting word at me so like a snake it made me shudder with abhorrence.

"You've signed your own death warrant, you witless fool! You'd play the spoil-sport here as you did once before, would you! I wish you had a hundred lives that I might take them one by one!" Then he wheeled sharp upon his heel and gave the order to the ensign. "Belt him to the tree, Farquarson, and make an end of him. I've kept you waiting over-long."

They strapped me to a tree with other belts, and when all was ready the ensign stepped aside. All the earth seemed hushed to silence waiting on his word. But on the instant the early morning stillness of the forest crashed alive, and pandemonium was come. A savage yell to set the very leaves a-tremble; a crackling volley from the underwood that left a heap of writhing, dying men where but now the firing squad had stood; then a headlong charge of rough-clad horsemen—all this befell in less than any time the written words can measure.

Falconnet had escaped the fusillade; was making swiftly for his horse, safe as yet from any touch of lead or steel. So I might reach and pull him down, I cared no groat what followed after. I leaped to seize him. In the act the clutching hands of a badly wounded man laid hold of me and I was tripped and thrown upon the heap of dead and dying men.

And then my rescuers, or else my newer captors, picked me up hastily; and I was hoisted behind the saddle of the nearest, and so was borne away in all the hue and cry of a most unsoldierly retreat.

The men who charged so opportunely to put me out of peril were my captors only in the saving sense. Their overnight bivouac was not above a mile beyond the glade of ambushment. It was in a little dell, cunningly hid; and the embers of the camp-fires were still alive when we of the horse came first to this agreed-on rallying point.

These were a handful of the men who had fought so stoutly against the Tory odds at Ramsour's Mill, their captain being that Abram Forney of whom you may read in the histories; and though they made no military show, they lacked neither hardihood nor courage, of a certain persevering sort.

When I had sufficiently accounted for myself, Captain Forney gripped my hand and gave me a hearty welcome and congratulation.

"My father and yours were handfast friends, Captain Ireton. More than that, I've heard my father say he owed yours somewhat on the score of good turns. I'm master glad I've had a chance to even up a little; though as for that, we should both thank the Indian." At which he looked around as one who calls an eye-muster and marks a missing man. "Where is the chief, Ephraim?"—this to a grizzled hunter who was methodically reloading his long rifle.

"He's back yonder, gathering in the hair-crop, I reckon. Never you mind about him, Cap'n. He'll turn up when he smells the meat a-cooking, immejitly, if not sooner."

"'Tis Uncanoola, the Catawba," said Captain Forney, "one of the friendlies. He was out a-scouting last night and came in an hour before daybreak with the news that Colonel Tarleton was set upon hanging a spy of ours."

"I know this Uncanoola," I said. "My father befriended him in the plague of '60, and was never sorry for it, as I believe." Then I would ask if these Catawbas had ranged themselves on the patriot side, a question which led the young militia captain to give me the news at large while his borderers were breaking camp and making their hasty preparations for the day's march.

"'Tis liberty or death with us now; we've burnt our bridges behind us," he said. "And since here in Carolina we have to fight each man against his neighbor, 'tis like to go hard with us, lacking help from the North."

"Measured by this morning's work, Captain Forney, these irregulars of yours seem well able to give a good account of themselves," I ventured.

CHAPTER X.

On all the many adventures that followed my escape from the enemy it is not my purpose to dwell. I could tell of finding Jenifer, of a hurried journey where he, myself and others removed my dear lady and her father to a place of safety when the whole country was in turmoil. I could tell how she never spoke to me during the brief journey of her return to the protection of the redcoats, and of a note which reached me after a narrow escape from death telling of love, but intended, I considered, for Richard.

Then there was a collision with Falconnet, in which I bested him. He fled and was supposed to have perished in a forest fire. Find me, therefore, later on with an old scout and Indian companions making for the camp of the patriots and caring little for life, for I knew that my dear lady loved me not.

We had crossed our own Catawba, and were putting our horses at the steep bank on the outcoming side, when my saddle slipped. Dismounting to tighten the girth, I called to the others to press on, saying I should overtake them shortly.

The promise was never kept. I scarce had my head under the saddle flap before a couple of stout knaves in homespun, appearing from I know not where, had me fast gripped by the arms, whilst a third made sure of the horse.

"A dispatch rider," said the bigger of the two who pinioned me. "Search him, Martin, lad, whilst I hold him; then we'll pay him out for Tarleton's hanging of poor Sandy McGuire."

I held my peace and let them search, taking the threat for a bit of soldier bullyragging meant to keep me quiet. But when they had turned the pockets of my borrowed coat inside out and ripped the lining and made it otherwise as much the worse for their mishandling as it was for wear, the third man fetched a rope.

"Did you mean that, friend?—about the hanging?" I asked.

"Sure enough," said the big man, coolly. "You had best be saying your prayers."

I laughed. "Were you wearing my coat and I yours, you might hang me and welcome; indeed, you may as it is."

The man stared at me as one demented. Then he burst into a guffaw. "If you bean't a cool plucked one! I've a mind to take you to the Colonel."

"Don't do it, my friend. Though I am something loath to be snuffed out by the men of my own side, we need not haggle over the niceties. Point out your tree."

"You're too willing. What's at the back of all this?"

"Nothing, save a decent reluctance to spoil your sport. Have at it, man, and let's be done with it."

"Not if you beg me on your knees. You'll go to the colonel, I say, and he may hang you if he sees fit. You must be a villain to want to die by the first rope you lay eyes on."

"That is as it may be. Who is your colonel?"

"Nay, rather, who are you?"

I gave my name and circumstance and was loosed of the hand-grip, though the third man dropped the cord and stepped back to hold me covered with his rifle.

"An Ireton, you say? Not little Jock, surely!"

"No, big Jock; big enough to lay you on your back, though you do have a hand as thick as a ham."

He ignored the challenge and stuck to his text. "I never thought to see the son of old Mad-bull Roger wearing a red coat," he said.

"That is nothing. Many as good a Whig as I am has been forced to wear a red coat ere this, or go barebacked. But why don't you knot the halter? In common justice you should either hang me or feed me. 'Tis hard upon noon, and I breakfasted early."

"Fall in!" said the big man; and so I was marched quickly aside from the road and into the denser thicketing of the wood. Here my captors blindfolded me, and after spinning me around to make me lose the compass points, hurried me away to their encampment, which was inland from the stream, though not far, for I could still hear the distant splashing of the water.

When the kerchief was pulled from my eyes I was standing in the midst of a mounted riflemen's halt-camp, face to face with a young officer wearing the uniform of the colonelcy in the North Carolina home troops. He was a handsome young fellow, with curling hair and trim side-whiskers to frame a face fine-lined and eager—the face of a gentleman well-born and well-bred.

"Captain Ireton?" he said; by which I guessed that one of my capturers had run on ahead to make report.

"The same," I replied.

"And you are the son of Mr. Justice Roger Ireton, of Appleby Hundred?"

"I have that honor."

He gave me his hand most cordially.

"You are very welcome, Captain; Davie is my name. I trust we may come to know each other better. You are in disguise, as I take it; do you bring news of the army?"

"On the contrary, I am thirsting for news," I rejoined. "I and three others have but now returned from pursuing a British and Indian powder convoy into the mountains to the westward. We have been out five weeks and more."

He looked at me curiously. "You and three others?" he queried. "Come apart and tell me about it whilst Pompey is broiling the venison. I scent a whole Iliad in that word of yours, Captain Ireton."

"One thing first, if you please, Colonel Davie," I begged. "My companions are faring forward on the road to Queensborough. They know naught of my detention. Will you send a man to overtake them with a note from me?"

The colonel indulged me in the most gentlemanly manner; and when my note to Jennifer was dispatched we sat together at the roots of a great oak and I told him all that had befallen our little rescue party. He heard me through patiently, and when the tale was ended was good enough to say that I had earned a commission for my part in the affair. I laughed and promptly shifted the burden to Ephraim Yeates' shoulders.

"The old hunter was our general, Colonel Davie. He did all of the planning and the greater part of the executing. But for him and the friendly Catawba, it would have gone hard with Jennifer and me."

"I fear you are over-modest," Captain," was all the reply I got; and then my kindly host fell amuse. When he spoke again 'twas to give me a resume in brief of the military operations North and South.

Legally a Corpse.

It was the custom in the good old days in Great Britain and Ireland to hang condemned men for half an hour and then hand them over to their friends. A man named Mahoney was hanged in this way. At the end of half an hour his body was given to his friends, who put him in a coffin they had brought with them and galloped off with him on a cart. But before they were out of sight of the gallows authorities the corpse in the exuberance of his joy sat up in the coffin and shouted, "Hooroo!" A "pal," terrified lest this exhibition of vitality should cause the executioner to come after them, hit the hanged man playfully on the head with his stick, remarking, "Kape quiet, ye spalpeen." The silencing was so effectual that the victim of it never woke again, but was well and truly "waked" that same evening.

There was no doubt that the blow on the head killed him. The facts came to the knowledge of the authorities and a justice was appealed to for a warrant for the culprit's arrest on a charge of murder, but the justice refused it, explaining that as the man was dead, having been hanged for half an hour and given up to his friends legally a corpse, it was impossible that he could have been murdered.—London Tit-Bits.

Economize Time.

"Why do you stop here?"

"I know an artist on the fifth floor of these apartments. If we walk up we can get a drink."

"Oh, whistle for him to pour it down the tube."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Sarcastic.

"You will admit that a court is a necessity," said the judge.

"Yes," answered the audacious attorney. "But I don't like to be so frequently reminded of the adage, 'Necessity knows no law.'"—Washington Star.

On the farms of England last year there were 1,494,089 horses employed.

DOCTOR'S BEST FORMULA

For Remarkably Quick Action on Colds and Coughs.

This prescription will frequently cure the worst cold in a day's time, and it is a sure cure for any cough that can be cured. "Two ounces Glycerine; half ounce Concentrated Pine; put these into half a pint of good whiskey and use in doses of teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours. Shake bottle well each time." Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. The Concentrated Pine is a special pine product and comes only in half ounce vials, each enclosed in an air-tight case; but be sure it is labeled "Concentrated." This formula cured hundreds here last winter.

Her Only Course.

Lady Anne Lindsay, the author of the old poem, "Auld Robin Gray," was not only a delightful conversationalist, but she was a great story teller.

This gift made her not only a welcome guest abroad, but a valuable member of the home circle, for it is related in "A Group of Scottish Women" that at a dinner party which she was giving to some friends an old man servant caused some amusement by saying in a perfectly audible undertone:

"My lady, you must tell another story. The second course won't be ready for five minutes."

STEADILY GREW WORSE.

A Typical Tale of Sufferings from Sick Kidneys.

Mrs. L. C. Fridley, 1034 N. Main St., Delphos, Ohio, says: "Five or six years ago I began to suffer with kidney trouble and grew steadily worse until my health was all broken down. For weeks I was in bed and could not turn over without being helped. My back was stiff and painful, I was tired and languid, and when I was able to get around I could not do my work. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills helped me so much that I kept on using them until rid of every symptom of kidney trouble. During the past three years I have enjoyed excellent health."

His Admiring Spouse.

"Pardon my temporary lapse of memory, madam," the professor said, "but your husband is a man of distinction, is he not?"

"The only thing I can think of," answered Mrs. Vick-Senn, "for which he is distinguished is that there are more people in this town who don't look like him than any man I know of."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Why He Quit.

"Why did you throw up your job at old Spotcash's store?"

"Well, to tell the truth, I didn't like his position on the labor question."

"What was his position?"

"Why—er—the last time I saw him he was sitting in his chair looking sternly at me and pointing straight to the door."—Chicago Tribune.

Where the Increase is going

The high cost of living is attracting universal attention. The increase has been assigned to various causes—among which are the tariff, control of production by trusts, short supplies of food and other things, and an overproduction of gold.

It is impossible to assign to each of these influences the exact part which it may have had, but the Department of Agriculture has gathered some figures which seem to show that the farmers, at any rate, have benefited by the rise in prices.

Taking the average prices of farm products between the years 1896 and 1900 as a basis, it is found that the cost of all commodities has increased nearly one-quarter. Farm crops and live stock, on the other hand, have increased more than three-quarters during the same period. Horses have advanced in value two and one-half times, and mules nearly as much; swine and sheep, one and one-half times; cattle, one and one-quarter.

In cereal crops there has been a like increase. Corn has more than doubled in price—a fact which, of course, has an important bearing on the increased cost of beef and pork. Potatoes have almost doubled, and wheat has advanced to one and one-half times its value ten years ago. Cotton, a fair price of which used to be ten cents, has gone up to sixteen cents, but the prices of cotton goods have advanced less than twenty-five per cent.

It is evident from these figures that the farmer is receiving at least an adequate share of the fruits of prosperity; but no one need grudge it to him. Farm labor has been notoriously underpaid in the past. Moreover, prosperity among the agricultural population is always reflected in the improved conditions of manufacturing, transportation and general business.

Something to Think Over

An exchange says that two men were disputing over their respective churches: one was a Methodist and the other a Presbyterian. Finally, one of them called a neighbor who was passing by, and asked his opinion as to which was the better church in which to be saved. "Well neighbor," my son and I have been hauling wheat nearly forty years now. There are two roads that lead to the mill; one is the valley road and the other leads over the hilll, and never yet has the miller asked which road I came, but he always asks, "is the wheat good?"

Hints for Stock Owners

Never breed a ewe lamb until past its first birthday.

The ram should not run with the ewes during the winter.

Breeding too young will stunt the young ewe, and the loss in the long run will be more than the gain.

Pigs are quick money, for in six or seven months they are ready for market, at a big profit if well fed and cared for.

If sows are to farrow in February or March, put them in warm, well-ventilated quarters, where they can exercise.

If pigs show an unthrifty condition something is wrong in the feed or management. Find out the trouble and remedy it, or you will lose money.

Cold water never should be given the new milk cow. It may bring on a chill and cause milk-fever. Warm it a little for a couple of days. That will help to avoid the danger.

Push the calf right along. The first year of a calf's life will be the making of it. Away with the sore-eyed, gaunt, frowzy-haired little runts I see here and there, all weaned too soon. Let them have milk till too big to drink it, before you cut it off entirely.

No man is fitted to train horses who is not thoroughly sympathetic and brimful of horse sense.

Every man who raises one colt or many should realize the great importance of early education.

This should begin when the colt is only a few days old.

If tied at first with a strong, well-fitted halter that will withstand all trials to break, a string will hold him ever after.

Never omit the kicking strap when the colt is first hitched up.

The best way to ruin a horse is to saw on his bit when he gets a little out of line. There may be other methods, but that's the best one we can think of just now.

A few minutes delay in treating some cases of croup, even the length of time it takes to go for a doctor often proves dangerous. The safest way is to keep Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and at the first indication of croup give the child a dose. Pleasant to take and always cures. Sold by H. L. Dunkle, St Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

Chas. Kinsey Weds.

Tuesday evening about nine o'clock Charles Kinsey and Mrs Sophia Kiner were joined in holy wedlock at the home of Mr. Kinsey, by Rev. W. B. Freeland, pastor of the M. E. church. On Wednesday morning they left on a short honeymoon trip to Toledo, expecting to return on Thursday.

Both of these contracting parties are well known. Mr. Kinsey is the active member of the firm, Olds & Kinsey, and commands the friendship of a wide acquaintance. His bride is a much respected lady. She has been keeping house for him for three months and is familiar with the home life of the family, Mr. Kinsey and his children.

Each has been married once before. Mr. Kinsey lost his helpmate nearly a year and a half ago and Mrs. Kiner, nearly four years ago. She was the widow of Charles Kiner and a daughter of the late John Kruse. She has no children.—Dispatch.

President Helps Orphans.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this institution for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth." It invigorates all vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion creates appetite. To strengthen and build up pale, thin, weak children or rundown people it has no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

Nervous Collapse

"I have traveled for thirty years continually. I lost a great deal of sleep, which together with constant worry left me in such a nervous state that finally, after having two collapses of nervous prostration, I was obliged to give up traveling altogether. I doctored continually but with no relief. Dr. Miles' Nervine came to my rescue—I cannot describe the suffering which this Nervine saved me. Whenever I am particularly nervous a few doses relieve me." A. G. C. LIBBY, Wells, Me.

There are many nervous wrecks. There is nervous prostration of the stomach, of the bowels, and other organs. The brain, the kidneys, the liver, the nerve centers are all exhausted. There is but one thing to do—build up the nervous system by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. Its strengthening influence upon the nervous system restores normal action to the organs, and when they all work in harmony, health is assured. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Sunday was a great day for Methodism in Spencerville. The revival is still on with great success. The town is moved as never before. It is the topic of the day and people have come for twenty miles to catch the fire. All people are being moved and the fire is falling, real pentecostal times. The results so far are fifty-seven conversions, really born again, twenty-five renewals, twenty-eight new members and the revival is not passed yet, victories coming. The church is unable to house the people and standing room is at a premium. People of all walks of life are getting right with God. If you want real bible salvation and holy ghost religion, come with us. The pastor is his own evangelist assisted by a very able choir and certainly God is blessing them. All collections Sunday amounted to $60.00 the special collection for the pastor was $21.58, beside many nice donations from the people.

ATOP THE FREIGHT TRAIN.

Walking the Cars a Hair Raising Experience For a Novice.

There came over me as I sat in the caboose that evening a wild desire to ride with the engineer in the cab. Planning to slip ahead along the half mile or so of train at the first stop, I made known my desire to our conductor over that part of the run.

"They'll be glad to see you," he told me. "You won't have any trouble gettin' there. It's a mild evenin'." He swung open the window of the lookout and called to his rear brakeman, "Jimmie, run along with this here party." Jimmie pulled me through the window of the lookout before I clearly realized the entire plan.

It was a slippery path over the roofs of sixty cars to the big engine that was pulling us, and the wind that swept in from the shores of the ice-bound lake, along which the tracks ran for many miles, snapped sharply over those car roofs. Jimmie hung on to his lantern with one hand, to his convoy with the other. Long miles over those slippery car roofs had taught him to regard it as no very serious business.

"This ain't nothin'," was his assurance. "It sometimes gets nasty when we get down to zero an' a blizzard comes a-rippin' from off over the lake. Sometimes you have to get down an' crawl on all fours. It wouldn't be much fun to be swept off the tops of those cars."

There was no disputing that, nor that the three lengthwise planks at the gable of the car roofs were not wide promenades. You jump from one to another to cross from car to car, and a man has got to have something of a gymnastic training and some circus as well as railroad blood in his veins to do it many times without dropping into one of the hideous dark abysses between them.

A hand out of the dark slapped me in the face. "Drop," said Jimmie, and, fearing possibly that I might not obey, he pulled me flat down upon the car roof.

"That was a 'telltale,'" he explained, and before I could ask further we were in a short reach of a tunnel, and I understood. We were whirled through that tunnel like a package in a tube, and if we had raised our arms we could have touched the flying roof of the bore. The smoke lay heavy in the place. It filled our eyes and nostrils.

"Not real nice," said Jimmie cheerily. "But no danger in the holes, save now and then an icicle gets a crack at your nut. You see, there ain't much use in arguin' the matter after that 'telltale' strikes you."—Edward Hungerford in Harper's.

Under the law, the famous polar explorer must be assigned to duty in six months. Mr. Meyer does not want to assign Commander Peary to a subordinate position in the Bureau of Yards and Docks. On the other hand, he can hardly be assigned to an important berth because his long absence from active naval duty has left him entirely out of touch with the work of the Navy Department. The Maine delegation has under consideration a proposition to ask Congress to confer some special honor on Mr. Peary in recognition of his services which may relieve Secretary Meyer of his embarrassment.

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

Letter from California.

Through the courtesy of Miss Josephine Carnes, we are permitted to print a letter written by Mr. Edward Carnes of Long Beach, Cal., of December 28.

Since I have not written for quite a long time, I will now try to atone.

We have almost as much home company here as we would there. Frank Benninghoff and wife and Mrs. Barbara Simanton were here last Sunday, and Shrocks were here today. They intend to make a ten day stop in Long Beach.

A big debate on tonight, Long Beach vs Santa Barbara, to be held in the auditorium. The fellows all wear green and gold (school colors) rooters caps. We meet at the public library park and march down giving school yells and singing as we go in. The girls basket ball team beat Los Angeles girls 47 to 16 yesterday. The seniors had their monthly luncheon last Wednesday. Today was the last of the first half of the school year. Quarterly examination yesterday and today I was better prepared for them than I was the first quarter.

I saw the Pasadena Carnival of Roses, beautiful as you know. Floats beautifully decorated. Ezra Meeker with his ox team and prairie schooner, a band of cow boys and Indians, and a suit of clothes and saddle trimmed in silver, the finest in California, were some of the sights. Ezra Meeker is here in L. B. now. He is working to get the government to commemorate the old Oregon trail. On the last day at the Aviation Park he led the way in a large parade with his ox team. Following him were burros, after that came horses and autos then the dirigable airship, then aeroplanes, showing different steps in means of travel.

The Frenchmen, Paulhan furnished the sensation for the crowds at Aviation Park. At one time I saw Knabershue and Beachey, in dirigables. Curtiss and Paulhan in aeroplanes, Paulhan carrying his wife and another passenger, and a balloon, all five in air at same time.

Shrocks and Mr. Horn are going to Catalena Island tomorrow, where they will see the submarine gardens in glass bottomed boats. Mr. Horn is having the time of his life, he is feeling and looking so much better. I would like to go with them to Catalena tomorrow but don't believe I can.

Uncle Geo's. new house is swell. Three blocks from the ocean, gas, electricity, story and a half with nine rooms, besides bath room, toilet closets off bed rooms. We will send you a picture of the house. There are four bed rooms upstairs. The two main rooms down stairs, the living room and dining room are thrown together with massive posts. The rooms are finished in slash grain wood, with dark brown stain. The two main rooms are tinted dark green with cream ceilings. I have my room decorated with H. S. pennant, megaphone college pictures, a fish net full of post cards, and souvenirs of my adventures. Our address is 1353 Appleton.

Saturday morning. It was a grand victory for Santa Barbara. There were three judges, and one was in favor of Long Beach, but he had taken more points than the other two judges together, and according to the rules of the debating league here, his marking did not count, so the other two judges decided for Santa Barbara.

A new comet, which the astronomers know nothing about, has been seen shortly after dusk the last few nights. It is called "A 1910". Halley's will be seen in the spring.

The weather here is perfect. Every day just like the other; warm, sometimes almost hot. It has been an unusually cold winter, however. We have had frost several times, and several inches of snow fell in Death Valley, back in the desert, which is one of the hottest places on earth. The ocean is almost always calm, much calmer than I have seen the great lakes.

We had four ministers to dinner yesterday, Shrock, Mr. Weiser, Lutheran minister from Pasadena, and Snyder, the minister here. The Lutherans are planning to build a church here in the spring. They already have their lot and money.

I almost get tired of this weather. Would like to get out and take a good long skate. Can't even roller skate. There's a large rink here but it is closed.

Have finished trigonometry and will take up adv. algebra the last half. After this comes calculus, which is about as high as you go in mathematics. I get a credit and a half for mathematics this year. Will finish seventeen credits, two more than I need to graduate. Will have to get the advanced algebra book.

There's a heavy fog rolling in now, it looks like a bank of smoke.

Everybody, of course, all well here. They don't get sick, they get well. I weigh fifteen pounds more than when I left. Uncle Geo. is building fence around the garden, Aunt Mary and Gladys are working in the house.

Well, I suppose you are getting tired of reading, and I have told almost everything I guess, except that the Kossos people of Southern California have their picnic here today. Now, so long, with love to the whole family.

"One ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla compound; one ounce Toris compound; add these to a half pint of good whiskey. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time; shake the bottle before using each time." Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. This was published previously and hundreds here have been cured by it. Good results show after the first few doses. This also acts as a system builder, eventually restoring strength and vitality.

Bothwell and Queen Mary.

Dunrobin castle, in Scotland, was the scene of a discovery a few years ago of a document relating to Mary Queen of Scots, which, had it seen the light when poor Mary Stuart was about to commit the crowning act of folly in marrying Bothwell, would have changed the whole aftercourse of her life. The document was the original dispensation granted by the vatican to Lady Jane Gorden to enable her to marry her cousin, the earl of Bothwell. When the latter wanted to espouse his sovereign he declared his union with Lady Jane Gordon null and void on the ground of their relationship and obtained a divorce. The assumption is that Lady Bothwell was only too glad to get rid of the aristocratic blackguard she called husband, for she must have had the dispensation, the production of which would have made her marriage valid and prevented Mary's taking place. That she had it is proved by its being found in the charter room at Dunrobin, where it had lain for three centuries, and whither she doubtless brought it on her second marriage in 1573 to Alexander, earl of Sutherland, ancestor of the dukes of Sutherland.

HARD TO DROP,

But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee:

"It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ails.

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble, for I was very fond of it. At that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum!'

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so he returned to Postum, convinced that coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more by insomnia.

"I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit coffee that caused our aches and ails and take up Postum."

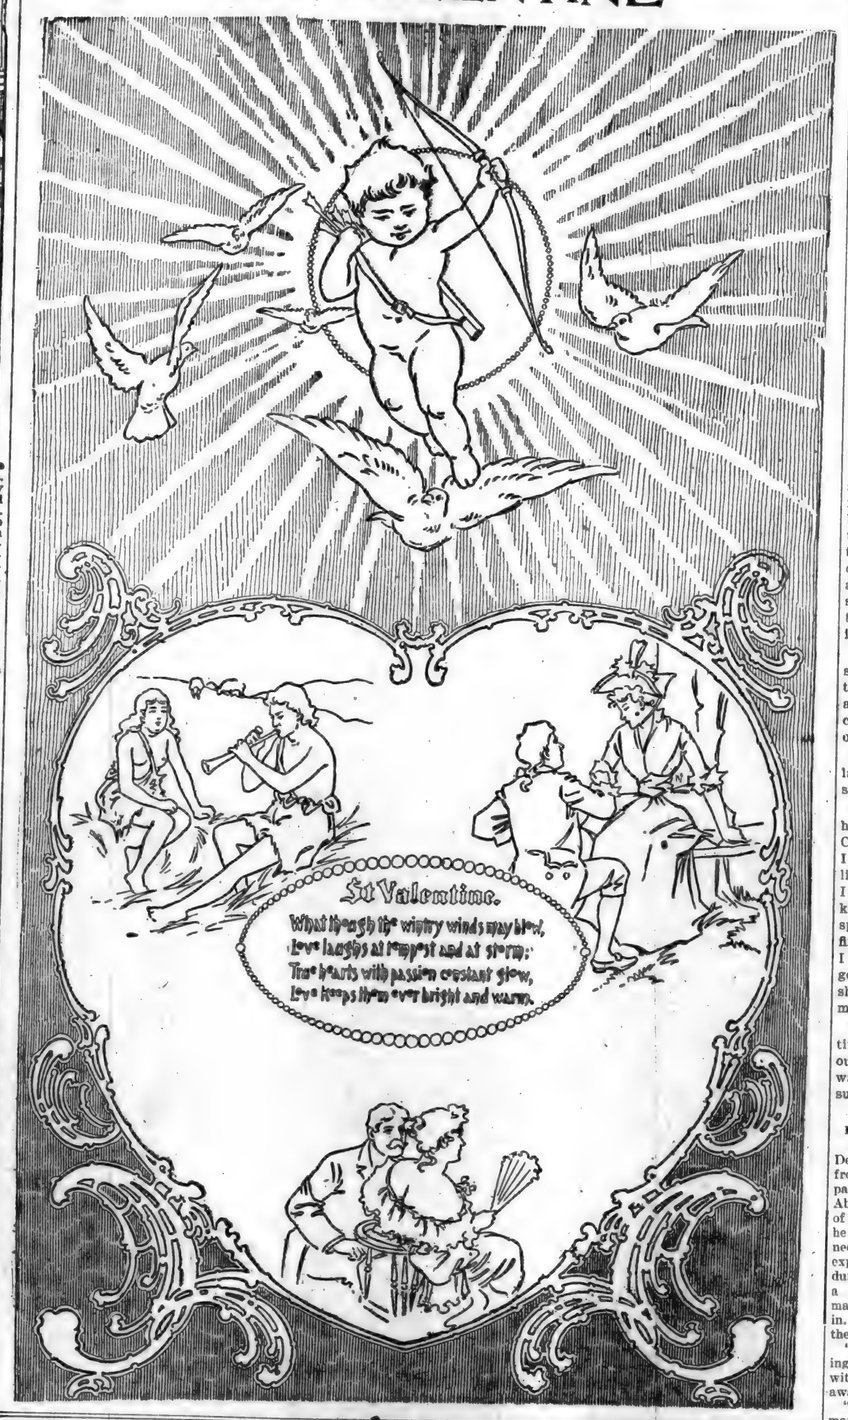
ST. VALENTINE



MY VALENTINE.

A valentine for father,
And one, I think, will do
For mother and for grandpa,
And for Brother Willie, too.

I know that dear old grandma
Would ask for three or four,
And Sister Nell and Cousin Ned
Would say they wanted more.

And then there's someone else I know
Would prize it quite as well,
Now can't you guess my valentine,
Or must I really tell?

No envelope contains it;
It bears no tell-tale line.
Although two lips have sealed it
No postal clerk may fine.

It has no gleaming golden hearts,
Sly Cupid's tempting bait;
Nor has it got the feathered shaft
With which he shoots so straight.

And yet it brings, this valentine
A thousand times the bliss.
Now can't you guess? Of course you can—
My valentine's a kiss.

"LINCOLN THE MERCIFUL."

A characteristic story of Lincoln's kindly interference in behalf of young men who had rendered themselves amenable to the law, but in whose case there was reason to hope for reformation, is told in the Portland Oregonian by Mr. J. B. Montgomery, who was a witness to the circumstances.

One Michael Lehman of Williamsport, Pa., had a contract for carrying the mail from the railroad station. He was the personification of integrity, but his son, Michael, Jr., 16 years old, who drove the mail wagon, was induced by evil associates to take a letter from the mail bag, and was detected in the act of removing a check from it. He was sentenced to imprisonment.

Great sympathy was felt with the father, and a delegation of citizens, headed by Judge Hale, a member of Congress, including Mr. Montgomery, and accompanied by the elder Lehman, went to Washington to see the President. Mr. Montgomery tells what followed:

"As we entered the executive chamber, President Lincoln came sauntering in. He had on a faded and much-worn dressing gown. His slippers were run down at the heel. The President, as soon as we were seated, said:

"'Well, gentlemen, what is it you want?' Judge Hale handed him the petition. He scanned it carefully, names and all, and possessed himself of all the circumstances. He then said to Judge Hale:

"'Judge, can I do so and so?' stating a legal proposition as to his power to do a certain thing. Judge Hale, after a moment's reflection, replied:

"'Mr. President, I don't think you can.'

"Lincoln then said, 'I know I cannot, but I wanted to see if you knew. But,' he went on, 'I can do something else.'

"He was sitting by his desk, and every one except this man, who 'swallowed all formulas,' would have written on it, but he twisted his two long legs together like a whiplash, placed the petition on his knee and wrote these words, as near as I can recollect:

"'To the United States District Attorney for the Western District of Pennsylvania: You are hereby directed to enter a nolle prosequi in the case of the United States vs. Michael Lehman, Jr., in consideration that the said Michael Lehman, Jr., enlist in the army of the United States and serve three years, unless sooner honorably discharged.

'A. LINCOLN.'

"'What do you think of that?' he said, handing it to Judge Hale. It was all that was wanted.

"Lincoln got up out of his chair, shook hands with us all, telling us, 'A dozen Senators are waiting outside to see me, but this gives me more pleasure than talking to them about offices.' Then, holding Lehman by the hand, he said:

"'Tell your son never to be tempted again, to be a good soldier, and how happy it has made me to get him out of his scrape.'"

The old Dutchman, who was short and fat, made a pathetic figure. He was beyond the ability to express himself, or even to weep. He stood silent, his eyes almost bulging out of his head. His boy was saved.

McClellan's Talent.

President Lincoln one day remarked to a number of personal friends who had called upon him at the White House:

"General McClellan's cardiness and unwillingness to fight the enemy or follow up advantages gained remind me of a man back in Illinois who knew a few law phrases, but whose lawyer lacked aggressiveness. During the trial of the case the man finally lost all patience and springing to his feet, vociferated:

"'Why don't you go at him with a fi. fa., a demurrer, a capias, a surrebutter, or a ne exeat, or a nemdam pactum, or a non est, or any old foot thing?'

"I wish," said Mr. Lincoln, "McClellan would go at the enemy with something; I don't care what. General McClellan is a pleasant and scholarly gentleman. He is an admirable engineer; but he seems to have a special talent for a stationary engine."

His First Sight of Lincoln.

An interesting sheaf of reminiscences could be collected under the general heading, "First Glimpses of Lincoln." The first sight of a great man is likely to be recalled as more vivid and more significant than any other, except possibly the last. A gentleman whose friendship with Lincoln dated from 1852, and lasted till the very day of his death, describes as follows the beginning of their acquaintance:

I had been invited to make a speech in the old State House in Springfield, Ill. Five minutes before I stepped on the platform the committee asked me to change my subject,—the Maine temperance law,—as they wished for some reason to defer it to another occasion. Under the spur of the moment, therefore, I made a patriotic address.

After I had finished, the audience called vociferously for "Lincoln! Lincoln!"

He rose to respond, and I shall never forget his appearance. Before the meeting he had been consulting some law books in the basement of the building, and the janitor, whom he had requested to call him, forgot his duty, and at the last moment rushed in and cried out to Mr. Lincoln that the speaking was going on.

Lincoln turned out the light and grabbed the first coat he touched, which proved to be that of the janitor himself, who was a short man. Lincoln, on the contrary, was a very tall man.

On this occasion he wore, as usual, a faded red woolen shirt, buttoned neither at the neck nor at the wristbands. There was a space of eight or ten inches between the top of his trousers and the lower edge of the coat, and his trousers were rolled up at the bottom, so that there was a space of nearly a foot of bare leg between them and the tops of his stockings.

He had one suspender, and the sleeves of the coat reached little more than to his elbows. His hair looked as if it had never been brushed or combed since he came from the woods of Kentucky.

He began to speak. His subject was law, its design, its essence, its mission, its power.

He spoke in a low, thin voice. I had heard Beecher, Gough, Phillips, Chapin, Starr King and Webster, but I had never before heard anything like this speech of Lincoln's. Nor did I ever see an audience so scorched and kindled—so held breathless! His speech lasted twenty minutes, and for fine logic and the most touching pathos, I have never heard its equal. When he got through he touched me on the shoulder and said, "Come home with me."

We talked all night, so oblivious of time that when light came I looked out of the window and asked if there was a fire. Mr. Lincoln replied, "It is sunrise."

How Lincoln Played Watchman.

James Etter, a doorkeeper in the War Department, frequently occupies a chair from which he could not be induced to part, because it was once occupied by Abraham Lincoln when he was President of the United States, although at the time he acted as watchman with a badge pinned on the lapel of his coat. Mr. Etter explains the incident by saying: "One day during the war I was sitting here, when a tall, angular gentleman entered the main door and asked if the secretary was in. I told him that it was too early for the secretary to be in his office.

"'At what hour can I depend on finding him here?' he asked. I told him, and with a pleasant 'Thank you' he walked away.

"Promptly on the hour the tall gentleman ascended the steps, walked in the door, and I was almost struck dumb when he asked me if I would not go into the secretary's room and tell him to step out in the hall. I could not leave my post of duty, and even if I could I did not think the secretary would come out to see him.

"He replied: 'O, I guess he will, and as for leaving your post, I will be personally responsible for that. I am Mr. Lincoln, and I will simply take your badge and keep door while you step in for me.'

"Well, I couldn't doubt him, and he pulled off my badge, pinned it on his coat, and took my chair, just like an old-time watchman.

"A smile played over his face as I left him, and you can rest assured it was not long before he and the secretary were holding a quiet talk in an out-of-the-way corner in the hall."—Washington Special.

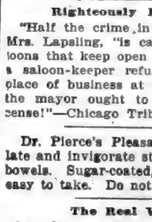
WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills



Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

Scratched So She Could Not Sleep.

"I write to tell you how thankful I am for the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. My little niece had eczema for five years and when her mother died I took care of the child. It was all over her face and body, also on her head. She scratched so that she could not sleep nights. I used Cuticura Soap to wash her with and then applied Cuticura Ointment. I did not use quite half the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, together with Cuticura Resolvent, when you could see a change and they cured her nicely. Now she is eleven years old and has never been bothered with eczema since. My friends think it is just great the way the baby was cured by Cuticura. I send you a picture taken when she was about eighteen months old.

"She was taken with the eczema when two years old. She was covered with big sores and her mother had all the best doctors and tried all kinds of salves and medicines without effect until we used Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. H. Kiernan, 663 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1909."

Righteously Indignant.

WESTERN CANADA

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Power.

"The greatest need of this country [United States] in another generation or two will be the providing of homes for its people and producing sufficient for them. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are gone. Canada is to be the great wheat country."

Upwards of 125 Million Bushels of Wheat

were harvested in 1909. Average of the three provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be upwards of 25 bushels per acre.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre), are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured; mixed farming a success. EIGHTEEN YEARS AGO HE HAD LESS THAN THREE DOLLARS.

Arriving in Canada in 1891, just eighteen years ago, E. A. Guillemin could speak but his native language. He is a Frenchman. He had but a little over $2 in his pocket, thus being short over $7 of the $10 required to secure entry for a homestead of 160 acres. He eventually borrowed the money, and, near Forget, Saskatchewan, he started life in Canada on the homestead in which to-day he is the fortunate possessor of fifty quarter sections of land, or 8,000 acres.

Now Mr. Guillemin did not acquire all these acres as a result altogether of his farming operations, which were extensive. He looked with satisfaction upon what he was doing on his limited area, he was saving, careful and had foresight. Surrounding land could be had for about $3 per acre, and he continued buying as his savings would permit, until now he has fifty quarter sections, some of which he can sell at $25 per acre.

Threshed Fifty Thousand Bushels.

This year he was engaged in threshing on his place for 54½ days. He threshed out 50,000 bushels of wheat, of which he sold 34,000 bushels, one train load, at a price varying from 84 to 87 cents per bushel. He has on hand still 16,000 bushels. In addition to wheat he raised 30,000 bushels of oats, 7,000 bushels of barley and 500 bushels of flax. He owns 104 horses and a number of cattle, but since the construction of the railway he has been engaged chiefly in raising wheat. This year he bought his first threshing machine, paying for it the sum of $2,100. He estimates that the machine earned for him this fall $3,000, thus paying for itself in one season, and leaving him $900 to the good. The weather was very propitious for farm threshing, not a single day being lost in the two months which were spent in this work. The wheat averaged 23 bushels to the acre and graded No. 1 and No. 2 Northern. In the past nine years, seven good crops have been harvested on this farm. For six successive years the returns were excellent, that is in the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906. In the two following years there was a partial failure. As the years have passed the quality of the buildings on the farm have been steadily improved, and are now as good as can be found in the district. About $10,000 has been invested in this way by Mr. Guillemin. The farm consists of 6,880 acres, of which about 6,000 acres were under crop this season.

A Soldier's Beginnings.

We were visiting at Sandringham. Sir Evelyn Wood, who is very deaf, crept up as near as he could to the musicians, and in one of the pauses he said to me, "Are you fond of music?" I answered, "Yes." "Do you play anything?" I said, "No." "Well," he went on, "I am so fond of it that, would you believe it, I began to practice scales at twenty-four. But one day my sister came up and put her hand on my shoulder and said, 'My dear boy, you had better give that up,' and so I did." He also told me that he began life as a sailor, then went to the bar and finally entered the army. The only profession he had not tried was the church, and his enemies say he would have tried that, only he did not know what church to choose.—"Life of Sir William Broadbent."

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

The management of the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern Traction Company is contemplating the purchase of some new passenger cars for use between Seymour and Indianapolis. As yet the style of car and the number to be purchased have not been decided. It is said that the new cars may be different in style from the cars now used by the road.

Jonathan J. Forney, age seventy, a retired farmer of Madison County, and Mrs. Nancy Foster, aged seventy, of Greenville, O., were married recently at the home of the bride's daughter, Mrs. A. C. Blevins, in Anderson. The Rev. Theodore Frech conducted the ceremony. Following a wedding supper Mr. and Mrs. Forney went to a farm home near Ovid, where they will live.

Stanley, the nine-year-old son of George Coons, district manager of the Indianapolis Insurance Company, was drowned at the plant of the Central stone mill in Bloomington. The boy was playing on the edge of a quarry hole, which was filled with water, and slipped and fell in. It was ten minutes before the body was taken from the water and every effort to revive the boy failed.

Charles Barker, of near Newberry, was found dead in a sixty-acre corn field belonging to Mike Yancey, near Bushrod. It is supposed that Barker has been dead for about three weeks, as he has been missing that length of time from his home. No marks of violence were found on his body. Barker had been dead so long that field mice had made nests in the pockets of his clothing.

Fred Freeman and Harvey Launis, of Bedford, have returned from Floyd County, where they have been duck hunting, and have in their possession a golden eagle, which they trapped after they saw the big bird swoop down on a barnyard near New Albany and carry away a small pig. The eagle measures five feet two inches from tip to tip and will be presented to the Bedford Aerie of Eagles, or which organization Freeman and Launis are members.

Another step to increase the number of his hearers was taken recently by the Rev. Benjamin F. Nye, of the First Presbyterian church in Muncie, when he placed several private telephones in the auditorium of the church building, by means of which persons almost totally deaf are enabled to hear his sermons and the music. Mr. Nyce says that many who are partially deaf would attend church services if they could hear, and thinks this difficulty in many cases may be overcome by placing private telephones in certain pews.

Logansport people have become so good that one individual, who did not possess a Bible, broke into the Railroad Young Men's Christian Association rooms and stole the one that belonged there. And F. H. Shepherd, secretary, says that any man who is so determined to get religion that he will steal to obtain it, should be commended instead of punished. Although the thief took Shepherd's best Sunday trousers, the secretary will not prosecute him if found, for he believes that the robber will become interested in the Bible and probably will reform.

Mrs. Caroline Hypes, of Greencastle, celebrated her ninety-fifty birthday anniversary at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carrie H. Swahlen, wife of Dr. W. F. Swahlen, head of the Greek department in DePauw University. A family reunion was held and her three living children were present. They are: Mrs. Swahlen, Dr. Benjamin M. Hypes, of St. Louis, and Mrs. A. S. Meguire, of Chicago. Mrs. Hypes was able to sit at the time with the rest of the family and enjoy her birthday dinner. Mrs. Hypes is a remarkable woman for her age. She keeps informed on all events, both in national politics and in local affairs. She is a fluent conversationalist and is very active.

With accommodation for only a portion of the applicants for treatment, the Anti-Tuberculosis League will soon re-open its camp for the treatment of tuberculosis patients, at Pottawattomie park near South Bend. The cottages will provide for the treatment of but six patients at a time, although many times that number have applied for treatment. The colony was closed at the beginning of winter on account of the open construction of the buildings. Extensive improvements have been made and hereafter it will be possible to keep the camp open the entire year. The administration building has been thoroughly repaired and has been placed in good condition. A heating plant has been installed and the building has been securely closed to the wintry blasts. Walks have been built about the camp and various other repairs have been made.

Corn is still being husked by many farmers in the vicinity of Wadena. It is something unusual for the farmers of Benton County to have corn unhusked at this time of the year.

It is only a coincidence that an order has been issued by the postoffice department prohibiting rural route carriers from killing rabbits and other game when on duty should come at a time when meat prices are high. A circular order to that effect has been received at the Terre Haute postoffice

While on their way to church, in Hortonsville, the buggy containing Jesse Timmons, age twenty-six, and Miss Cox, daughter of Joseph Cox, was struck by a Monon accommodation train, just north of Sheridan. The young man's neck was broken and he died instantly. Miss Cox was seriously hurt and her recovery is doubtful. The horse Timmons was driving was killed.

Patrick Farman, a Fort Wayne boy, who was injured in a fall nine months ago and has been unconscious since, has recovered sufficiently to talk disconnectedly. Farman's case has attracted the attention of physicians throughout the country. During his long sleep he grew steadily in stature, although the left side of his body is paralyzed. The boy is blind and it is evident he cannot hear perfectly.

Joseph Reviiee, aged 59, of Connersville, is dead of pneumonia. He was widely known because of his unusual physical strength. During his life he had been in several accidents which might have killed an ordinary man. Once he was struck by a moving train and the bones of his forehead were broken. Later he fell forty feet in a barn, alighting on a harrow, and once he was accidentally shot, the bullet touching the tissues of his heart.

Mrs. George Kinney, wife of a fireman in Company No. 2, at Columbus, drew a bucket of water from the cistern at her home and filled the tea kettle. As the water in the tea kettle began to get hot Mrs. Kinney heard some commotion in the kettle and investigated. She was surprised to find an eight-inch catfish swimming in the water and incidentally getting boiling hot. The fish was thrown into cold water, where it remained until it was killed and prepared for a meal.

A call for bloodhounds and the Sheriff to a point six miles northeast of Bedford, in which it was refused to divulge the nature of the trouble, caused much excitement from the belief that a terrible crime had been committed. The call was answered and, as a result, Oscar and John Watson are in jail, charged with the theft of meat and lard from the smokehouse of a Mrs. Ramsey. They were trailed by the hounds, and a search of Watson's home revealed nine hams and other meats hidden under five feet of fodder.

Mrs. Viola Allen Steeley, wife of M. F. Steeley, is dead at her home, in Covington, after an illnes of several weeks. She was born February 29, 1848, and was the only daughter of Joseph and Mary Allen, pioneers of Western Indiana. Mrs. Steeley had always lived in Covington. She was a member of the Wabash Temple No. 167, Pythian Sisters, being a charter member, and the first most excellent chief, and when she became ill she was serving as district deputy of district No. 8. She also was a member of the Daughters of Rebekah.

Dr. Charles L. Williams, a St. Paul physician, has grafted sixteen pieces of cuticle to the leg of F. W. Avery, a business man of the town. Avery has been confined to his bed for the last eight weeks with an ulcerated leg, he having been troubled with the disease for more than fifty years. Sixteen patches of "live" skin, each about three-fourths of an inch square, were taken from the bodies of Cumberland Bush, Burley Evans, Wayne Davis and George Jewell. There were grafted on Avery's leg and the doctor now has hopes of his patient's ultimate recovery.

Emmanuel Souders, marshal of Jasonville, is making his power felt as an officer of the law. He is waging relentless war on the illegal sale of liquor, and has caused a number of convictions. He has given orders to merchants that all slot machines must go, that shaking dice in any form will not be permitted and that any and all screens for any purposes whatever shall be removed. Souders has the temperance people back of him and the wave for better morals there will be steadily increased. His orders so far are being generally obeyed. Souders was formerly night watchman at Jasonville, and during his short service he made eighty-two arrests.

With clothing on fire six-year-old Verna Rogers crawled under the bed at her home in Jackson township, Brown county, when she hear her father's footsteps approaching. Attracted by cries and the blazing clothing of his little girl Rogers dragged the child from her hiding place and smothered the flames with a blanket, but not until the little girl was badly burned. During the absence of her parents the child set fire to a celluloid comb which she held over a lamp. Accidentally she set fire to her dress and fearing that she would be scolded for what she had done the child sought a place of refuge. The little girl is a daughter of Walter Rogers, a farmer.

Mrs. Susie Hays, wife of William Hays, colored, died at Jeffersonville at the age, according to her husband, of 107 years. Hays and his wife had been married fifty years and were both born in Kentucky.

As the result of an assault made on Lee Melson, aged 52, by Roy Barkdull, 17 years old, at the Boyer-Kandell glass plant at Daleville, eleven miles west of Muncie, Melson may die with a broken skull. Barkdull, who surrendered, is in jail at Muncie.

Pleasant, Refreshing, Beneficial.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna appeals to the cultured and the well-informed and the healthy because its component parts are simple and wholesome and because it acts without disturbing the natural functions, as it is wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance. In its production a pleasant and refreshing syrup of the figs of California is united with the laxative and carminative properties of certain plants known to act most beneficially, on the human system, when its gentle cleansing is desired. To get its beneficial effects, always buy the genuine, for sale by all reputable druggists; one size only, price fifty cents a bottle. The name of the company — California Fig Syrup Co.—is always plainly printed upon the front of every package of the genuine.

Professor Munyon has just issued a most beautiful, useful and complete almanac. It contains not only all the scientific information concerning the moon's phases, in all the latitudes, but has illustrated articles on how to read character by phrenology, palmistry and birth month. It also tells all about card reading, birth stones and their meaning, and gives the interpretation of dreams. It teaches beauty culture, manicuring, gives weights and measure and antidotes for poison. In fact, it is a Magazine Almanac, that not only gives valuable information, but will afford much amusement for every member of the family, especially for parties and evening entertainments. Farmers and people in the rural districts will find this Almanac almost invaluable.

It will be sent to anyone absolutely free on application to the Munyon Remedy Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

ST. JOE INDIANA.

A Letter

By J. C. McCain, Keokuk, Iowa.

Dear Friends:—

When I left St. Joe, I promised you that I would write you a letter, but as yet have failed to do so.

In as much as this is Ground-Hog Day. I thought I would come out and redeem my promise to you.

The move was a very expensive one to us as all my goods were badly damaged by water, occasioned by the car in which they were shipped leaking. Our piano was ruined and other things damaged. The R. R. Co, has promised to make partly good.

Our family came to us the last of December and we have a very nice home at 316 S. 8 St.

This is a thriving river town at the Junction of the Des Moines River, with the Mississippi, and has a population of about 18,000. The Father of Waters is a mile wide here and is crossed by a bridge to the Illinois side. A big dam is now being built across the river, which is to be the most wonderful piece of masonry in the west.

The dam is to be 34 feet high and more than a mile long. It will furnish power for all the surrounding cities. St. Louis is to get 120,000 horse power of electricty from it. This gigantic enterprise will cost about $20,000,000 and will take two or three years to complete it. Two hundred men are at work upon it now. It is supposed that the population of Keokuk will double within three years.

Our church here is nearing completion, and when done it will have cost $20,000 or more. It is a beautiful structure.

The people here are very kind. They "pounded" us good and hard the other night. More than a hundred came in on us unawares. They take very kindly to me, and it appears that we are going to be fairly successful. We are all happy and contented with our place and our lives are already made better by the association here. We often think of the dear friends left behind at St. Joe. They are very dear to us and will never be forgotten. THE NEWS comes every week and everybody wants it first, it is read with interest even the ad's. We send our love and good wishes to you, and to all our friends. We would be very glad to hear from them all.

NOTICE!

We the undersigned wish to announce to the citizens of St. Joe and vicinity, that we have organized a Company for the purpose of handling real estate, such as buying and selling farms, houses or lots, or any other real estate that we may be able to list. Said Company to be known and hereafter recognized as the St. Joe Valley Realty and Investment Co. We therefore request that all parties wishing to buy or sell farm property, houses and lots, or any other real estate, consult us, as we expect to be in shape at all times to render you such service as will be beneficial to you. We wish to say that all business entrusted to us will be handled in an honest and confidential manner, asking only a compensation that will justify us for services rendered. We only ask, in soliciting your business, a continuance of same only as long as we treat you honestly.

While the two little children of Elsworth Traxler were playing one day last week, one of them struck the other in the face with a knife cutting him quite badly.

While driving through the streets of Hicksville, one evening last week, with a team and hay-baiter belonging to Bird Euzor, Mike Friend had quite an experience as a large touring car, which was not lit up, was coming from the opposite direction and ran into his team. Mike found himself about forty feet from the baiter, and one of the horses had both front legs broken so that it had to be killed immediately, while the other one was quite badly hurt, making quite a loss to Bird.

Do you know that croup can be prevented? Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It is also a certain cure for croup and has never been known to fail. Sold by H. L. Dunkle, St. Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

Over fifty friends of Mrs. Matthias Paulen and Mr. Milton Simanton gathered at the home of the former in a joint birthday party Feb. 1, 1910. They have had a celebration of this character for several years and each one seems more pleasant than the last. Mrs. Paulen received a number of post cards, a beautiful chair and numerous other rememberances.

Milton Simanton was very agreeably surprised Feb. 1, 1910. That being his birthday. A post card shower was planned and well expected. It wasn't a shower either, they just poured down. There were 103 cards arrived with only two cards alike which is a very rare happening. Mr. Simanton may well feel proud of his collection of cards, and also of his many friends who so kindly remembered him on his birthday with a beautiful card. He will, no doubt, spend many hours looking over the collection and reviewing pleasant memories of the donor. His thanks cannot be expressed.

Successful Opening.

The Oliver Chilled Plow opening as advertised for the past three weeks, given by J. Beams at Spencerville was pulled off Tuesday and was a success in every respect. Mr. Beams gave away a plow during the day and No. 48 drew it. The ticket was not present and consequently we are unable to say who the lucky person is. While the roads were quite sloppy a large number of farmers attended the demonstration and ten farmers will start to work in the spring with new plows, besides, Mr. Beams has many prospects for sales. As readers know, Mr. Beams is a believer in the use of Printers' Ink and he is finding that it is money well spent. We are glad to note the success of the demonstration as Jack is striving hard to satisfy his many customers and is giving his community A-1 store.

Died Sudden.

James L. Steward passed away after a year's suffering, Tuesday morning of this week at about 8:10. He had been failing more than usual for the past week and his condition was a sad one. Revival Meeting Closed.

Other M. E. Announcements.

The revival at Spencerville, Ind., has closed after five weeks of very successful work. The results at this time are one hundred conversions of the real old fashioned (born again) kind and sixty-five accessions to our church with more a coming. It is wonderful the town is moved as never before and the revival is the topic of the day. People of all walks of life have been converted and miracles have been wrought. We give God all the praise and glory.

Homes have been blest. Spiritual strength renewed in many, as many as twenty-five renewals. Forty baptized. Rev. D. A. J. Brown is his own evangelist and preached the straight gospel that made people awake in their seats and certainly he has put people thinking what sin was doing for them.

He was ably assisted by a good choir of persevering and excellent singers and he feels very much inbebted to them for singing the gospel into the hearts of people. Nearly all the high school children were happily saved.

The house for three weeks has been unable to accomodate the crowds and the very best of order ruled throughout the meeting. The people of Spencerville certainly ought to feel proud of this glorious victory and ther pastor. Rev. Brown quit the factory to preach to people and has not yet been in the ministry three years but God is blessing his work.

Come with us and we will do you good, enter our Sunday school and learn of Jesus. With a Holy Ghost Sunday School Superintendent, Geo. Gloyd, and a Holy Ghost pastor, the revival fire will burn this entire year.

Six Die in Mine Explosion.

An unexplained explosion in mine No. 1, of the Stearns Coal Company at Stearns, Ky., killed six men outright. It is thought that the victims ran into a pocket of gas which ignited when it came into contact with their lamps. The dead, who are all white, are: A. B. Thrasher, Edward Thrasher, G. W. King, Elihu Grandy, Benjamin Grandy and John Troxell. None of the other workers in the mine were so much as scratched. The explosion took place in one of the innermost recesses of the workings and expended its force upon the men in the immediate vicinity. The hoisting machinery was not damaged and no difficulty was experienced in recovering the bodies. Word of the accident was sent to State Mine Inspector C. J. Norwood, at Lexington, and he left there at once. Whether work will be resumed at once in the colliery will be determined after his inspection.

Parrot Cries Fire; Saves Humans.

"Oh my, Dear Me, Fire! Fire!" were cries from the kitchen that awakened Mrs. William Bows in her apartments on First avenue in New York City. Running into the room Mrs. Bows found it full of smoke from the thick of which her highly prized South American parrot, an educated talker, had given an alarm in plain language that probably saved the building from burning over the heads of scores of tenants. Mrs. Bows saved her parrot. The fire, which started in a store on the second floor, was extinguished with comparatively small damage. The tenants fled from the building during the excitement and stood shivering in the cold until the firemen had the blaze under control.

N. W. Gilbert Goes Higher.

Newton W. Gilbert, of Indiana, has been nominated by President Taft as vice governor of the Philippines, and Charles B. Elliott, of Minnesota, as a member of the Philippine Commission and secretary of the Department of Commerce and Police. Charles E. Magoon, former provisional governor of Cuba, was offered the position of vice governor and secretary of commerce and police, but declined owning to his doctor's advice that he should remain in this country for the present. Mr. Gilbert will continue as secretary of public instruction in the islands.

No Trace of Kellner Girl.

It is now two months since Alma Kellner, the 8-year-old girl, disappeared from her home in Louisville, Ky., and although a score of clews have been run down, the mystery remains unsolved. Frank Fehr, the millionaire brewer and personal representative of the Kellner family, says that he is without a vestige of information that appears trustworthy, the last hope apparently disappearing when the advertisement inserted in Cincinnati papers failed of results.

One Killed; Many Hurt.

Miss Lizzie Ryan, of Hinsdale, was killed and between twenty-five and thirty persons were injured in an electric car accident at Hinsdale, Mass. A car bound for Pittsfield jumped the track and crashed into the abutments of the Boston & Albany railroad bridge.

Killed at Spot where Son Met Death.

Robert Buick, aged 73, a furniture manufacturer, of Laporte, Ind., while crossing the Lake Shore tracks was struck and instantly killed by westbound Lake Shore passenger train No. 15. He leaves a family. A son was killed at the same spot eighteen years ago.

Three Die in Fire.

A fire in the First National Bank building in Jersey Shore, Pa., caused the death of three persons, the injury of two others and the complete destruction of the building. The dead are: A. L. Dravenstadt, Mrs. A. L. Dravenstadt and Wm. O'Conner.

Peary to Be Made a Rear Admiral.

Washington dispatches say: A bill making Commander Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the north pole, a rear admiral, was passed by the Senate. Indications are that the measure will also receive the approval of the House.

Wreck on the Burlington.

Two through passenger trains on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad collided head-on near De Sota, thirty miles south of LaCrosse, Wis. No one was killed.

Fred Cohen Out on Bail.

Ferdinand Cohen, the hotel waiter who is charged with kidnaping Roberta De Janon, the young heiress of Philadelphia, Pa., was released from prison in $1,500 bail.

CHERRY WORK SLOW; MEN ARE BURROWING

Explorers in Mine Have Penetrated Only 400 Feet of Many Miles Underground.

KICKING MULES TAKE LIFE.

Bodies of Animals Which Hurt Those Trying to Escape Found—New Timbers Placed Under Roof.

After three days of incessant labor only 400 feet of the many miles of subterranean passages of the St. Paul mine in Cherry, Ill., were open, and it was problematical when the 167 bodies could be brought to the surface. Every effort was being made to clear a runway from the main shaft to the air pit. Inspection of the cleared portion of the second level showed that from the bottom of the main shaft 350 feet underground, westward for 250 feet, the main road is in good condition. Some of the heavy timbers near the shaft are charred, but they are solid and intact. The main passage to the east is walled up. Behind this wall is a smoldering fire. Back of the fire lie about 100 dead.

About 250 feet west of the shaft the bottom level ends in a blind alley, in which lie the bodies of two mules, covered with disinfectants. These mules kicked viciously at several miners as the men ran for their lives through the smoky passageways after the fire started. One miner was kicked into unconsciousness and could not escape, while his companion was injured so severely that he is still under the care of a surgeon.

Near the end of the main road a tortuous runway branches off to the south, ending in the air shaft. The top timbers in this passage are broken, letting shale rock through. Some of the fractured scantlings appear halfrotted. Ther was no fire in this tunnel.

As fast as men clear the runway new timbers are placed under the crumbling roof, making the ceiling so low that a man cannot stand erect. Rocks as large as a steamer trunk were piled as high as the roof. So narrow was the tunnel and so dangerous was the work that only two worked at a time.

AGREEMENT WITH GERMANY.

Commercial War Averted and Door Opened for Other Settlements.

By the tariff agreement with Germany announced the other day the United States has not only avoided a commercial war with the empire, but has paved the way for a settlement of the differences existing with France and Canada.

It seems certain now, that the business interests of the United States may look forward to a period of peace in the commercial relations of the country. To obtain this result, Secretary Knox and his advisers in the State Department, as well as the tariff board, were compelled to abandon their demands for concessions on American live cattle and meat products and for the modification of the German customs rules governing drawback of duty allowed on flour when exported from Germany.

A promise was obtained, however, that the German government would discuss these matters diplomatically with the United States. As German goods now will enjoy the benefit of minimum rates of duty, the French government must seek like treatment for its products, many of which compete with those of Germany. Otherwise the market here will be lost to them.

If an arrangement be made with France as expected American goods will enter French territory upon precisely the same grounds as those of other foreign countries. This will mean that the Franco-Canadian reciprocity treaty will be of small benefit to Canada, and the latter probably will decide, in view of the circumstances, to accord to American imports treatment equivalent to that offered to those of France.

ROBBERS HOLD UP TRAIN.

Three Men Commit Bold Robbery on the Missouri Pacific.

Three unidentified men held up and robbed the passengers on an east bound Missouri Pacific passenger train five miles east of Pittsburg, Kan., the other night. They were unmasked. About $400 and a small amount of jewelry was taken from the passengers.

The robbers boarded the train on the outskirts of Pittsburg. They took seats in the chair car and rode quietly along until the train was near Cornell, Kan. There they leaped from their seats, backed Conductor Garrity into a corner and drawing revolvers warned him not to call for assistance. One of the robbers then covered the passengers with two large revolvers. "You will now prepare to give up your valuables," he said. "My partner here will pass among you. Please be quiet." The "partner" thereupon produced a gunny sack and started on his collecting tour. From each passenger he took everything of value. Money, watches, diamonds and rings all went into the sack.

SOMEBODY SAYS WE CAN LIVE ON 20 CENTS A DAY.

CONSEQUENCE OF BIG PRICES.

High Cost of Living in New York Cause of Suicides.

Effects of the increased cost of living upon the working classes are shown in the largely expanded number of applications to the city of New York, for aid as disclosed in figures made public the other day. The rising tide of inability to make income keep pace with living expenses is indicated in the fact that during the last twelve months more than 60,000 persons sought relief from the charities department, an increase of more than 80 per cent in five years. There were 32,995 applications in 1904. In seven years, the number of persons seeking shelter in the city lodging house has increased until last year 102,400 persons applied, an increase of more than 100 per cent for the period. From 112 in 1906, the daily average has risen in three years to 281. Suicides have increased nearly 50 per cent from 1904 to 1909.

FAITHFUL DOG BARES SUICIDE.

Youth Found Dead Asks That Letters Be Buried with Him.

Harry Hill, aged 19 years, son of the chairman of the County Board of Supervisors, disappeared from his home near Hastings, Neb. Nearly a week afterward the actions of his pet shepherd dog prompted the young man's mother to follow the whining animal to a strawstack on their farm. Partly under the hay and nearly covered with snow, she found the body of her son, who had committed suicide by inhaling chloroform. A letter directed that letters from his sweetheart be buried with him. Her parents objected to his attentions, and this is supposed to have caused him to take his life.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

Congressman Dawson, of the Second Iowa District, has decided to be a candidate for re-election.

With the installation of the new regime in governmental affairs in New York City, for the first time in six years the chief offices of the municipality are not filled by men allied with the Tammany Hall organization.

The joint committee of Congress, composed of six Senators and six Representatives, created to investigate the official acts of Messrs. Ballinger and Pinchot, began its sessions. Lewis R. Glavis, special agent, was the first witness to be examined. His testimony raised a question of professional ethics on the part of Ballinger rather than of official misconduct, the point being that Ballinger, before becoming land commissioner, had drawn up an agreement designed to convey the rights of dummy entrants on certain public lands in Washington to the Wilson Coal Company. At this point Glavis was asked by one member of the committee to state what he intended to prove against Ballinger. Thereupon Lewis G. Brandies of Boston, appearing as counsel for Glavis, said that his client was averse to formulating a specific charge and felt that this should be left to the committee after hearing the testimony. He promised that the investigation would bring out more than was contained in the charges filed by Glavis with the President.

ENFORCES SUICIDE AGREEMENT.

Letter Carrier Shoots Spouse and Her Father and Then Kills Himself.

Six years ago, when they were married, Sandie Morrison, an Omaha letter carrier, and Miss Hattie Sumner entered into a suicide agreement. Frequently since then Mr. and Mrs. Morrison have talked of suicide and agreed that one could not live without the other. Last Saturday, when Morrison came home from his work, he remarked: "Hattie, I have decided that we are to go." The wife begged for delay. He attacked her with a knife, wounding her on the neck. Escaping, she ran away and sought safety with her parents. A few days later Morrison held a conference with his wife and her father, J. H. Sumner. He apeared rational. She plainly told him that she had changed her mind. Morrison then urged his wife and her father to accompany him to the office of a justice, where, he said, he wanted to deed over his property. As the three reached the street he pulled a revolver and shot his wife in the back of the head and Sumner in the right eye. As the two fell to the sidewalk he turned the gun upon himself and sent a bullet in his forehead, dying instantly. Mrs. Morrison may recover, but Sumner will die.

DERRICK DROPS; TWO DEAD.

Second Fatal Accident in Building Makes Death List Five.

Two men were killed and two will die as the result of a second accident at the Freidberg Building in Cincinnati. John Zeach, an employe of the Bishop Wrecking Company, was killed instantly, and Charles Fox was so badly hurt that he died when a gigantic derrick upon which they were working collapsed. This makes five lives which have been lost in the one location within a fortnight. Two weeks before the east wall collapsed and hurled an adjoining house beneath it. In this accident three were killed and one other is fatally injured.

ARMOURS PLAN MODEL TOWN.

Buy Hill City, Minn., Site and Wooden Ware Company There.

Armour & Co. have begun to make Hill City, Minn., a model factory town. New houses are under way and 175 families will be moved from Ithaca and Marble, Mich. The Chicago packers have closed a deal with the owners of the Hill City town site and will expend $200,000 in improvements within a year. They have purchased all the property of the Hill City Wooden Ware Company. The Mississippi, Hill City and Western Railway, built into that section six months ago, was backed by Armour interests.

Falls Dead in Court Room.

As the cases of John J. Keane, P. J. Needham and T. T. O'Leary, the insurance solicitors charged with conspiracy to defraud life insurance companies, were called in the police court in Louisville, George D. Sparks, a real estate dealer, fell dead in the courtroom.

Boston Has $30,000 Fire.

Fire that broke out in the financial district of Boston, caused general alarm and did $30,000 damage. The seven-story Richards Building at 114 State street was badly damaged. Intense cold and a gale made the firemen's work difficult.

REPORT SHOWS PRICE JUMP.

Climb Since 1899 Indicated by Government Experts.

That there has been a general increase in wholesale and retail prices of food between the years 1899 and 1908 is indicated by a report sent to the Senate by the Department of Commerce and Labor in response to a resolution introduced by Senator Crawford of South Dakota calling for the trend of prices. For purposes of comparison the prices in 1899 are used as normal, and the percentages of increases were about as follows:

Bread—Wholesale, 25.1; retail, 4.9.
Butter—Wholesale, Elgin, 20.8; creamery, extra, 27.6; dairy, 24.6; retail, 30.0, no quality indicated.
Cheese—Wholesale, 26.9; retail, 20.3.
Coffee—Wholesale, 3.9; retail, 5.
Eggs—New laid, wholesale, 39.8; retail, 26.2.
Wheat flour—Wholesale, spring, 43.6; winter, 26.8; retail, 24.4, no quality indicated.
Lard—Wholesale, 63.3; retail, 38.2.
Beef—Wholesale, fresh, 11.8; salt, 41.9; retail, fresh, 14.9; salt, 10.6.
Dressed mutton—Wholesale, 21.4; retail, 26.8.
Bacon—Wholesale, 54.5; retail, 52.9.
Ham—Wholesale, 21.9; retail, 31.8.
Milk—Wholesale, 30; retail, 18.1.
Potatoes—Wholesale, 70.5; retail, 25.5.

The report shows that prices on sugar, tea, spices and soda crackers have been slightly reduced.

LAKE DOMESTIC COMMERCE.

Tonnage in 1909 About 2,500,000 Below That of 1907.

Domestic commerce on the great lakes during the calendar year of 1909 aggregated 80,974,605 tons of freight. This tonnage, while about one-third larger than for the year before, is about two and one-half millions below the tonnage for 1907, the largest total in the history of the lake trade, according to a report by the Department of Commerce and Labor. Of the total, 44,087,071 net tons are credited to ports of Lake Superior, 14,120,029 to ports of Lake Michigan, 1,510,879 net tons to Lake Huron ports, 18,699,221 tons to Lake Erie ports, and 535,943 tons to Lake Ontario ports. In the case of Lake Superior and Lake Michigan the bulk of the shipments were iron ore and grain.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

The 1,200 miners employed at No. 5 colliery of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company went on a strike to enforce a demand for a checking boss.

More pay, shorter working hours and better working conditions are the demands which Ohio miners offer for the approval of the United Mine Workers.

Wisconsin railroads recently issued the order that coal should have the preference of all shipments until the present shortage and urgent need for coal was supplied.

Three head of Holstein cattle were recently sold by the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin, to G. L. Saito, of Tokyo, Japan, who will ship them to his dairy farm in the vicinity of Tokyo.

A corporation in New York capitalized at $300,000,000, to control everything pertaining to the manufacture of women's wearing apparel, is under consideration by the Associated Waist and Dress Manufacturers.

Control of the Fifth Avenue motor bus line and the New York Transportation Company of New York, which operates between 500 and 600 taxicabs, has been acquired by the Interborough Transit Company and the Metropolitan and Securities Companies.

The Week in Congress

The Senate devoted the greater part of Thursday to consideration of the postal savings bank bill, agreeing to several amendments. The Lodge price of food investigation resolution was reported from the committee on finance, and the fact that it received so much more prompt attention than the resolution of Senator Elkins on the same subject was interpreted by the West Virginia Senator as a discrimination against him. He made a speech complaining seriously of the treatment and asserting that it was intended to protect the trusts and the tariff against the inquiry. The House passed the agricultural appropriation bill, carrying appropriations aggregating nearly $13,500,000, a net increase of over $400,000 over last year, this increase being chiefly for the forest service, made necessary by the addition to the national forests of 26,522,439 acres. Consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was begun.

In the Senate Friday Mr. McCumber of North Dakota delivered a prepared argument to prove that the farmer does not obtain his due share of the prices paid for food products. Mr. Heyburn of Idaho concluded his speech in opposition to the postal savings bank bill. On account of the death of Representative Lovering of Massachusetts the Senate adjourned earlier than usual and for the first time this session failed to adjourn over Saturday. Practically no business was transacted in the House and an early adjournment was taken because of the death of Mr. Lovering.

The Senate gave the greater part of the day Saturday to the question of constitutionality of the extradition of criminals from one State to another in cases in which the prosecution is according to the process of "information." No action was taken. The postal savings bank bill was also up for a time. The only important action taken was on a bill opening to settlement the unallotted lands in the Pine Ridge Indian reservation in South Dakota. Early in the day Senator Aldrich reported from the Committee on Public Expenditures a bill creating a permanent commission for the regulation of methods of government expenditure. He failed to obtain the unanimous consent asked to have the measure acted upon, Senator Elkins objecting. The House was not in session.

In the Senate Monday Senator Heyburn bitterly opposed a loan of tents by the government for use at the annual encampment of confederate veterans at Mobile, Ala., next April and strongly condemned the acceptance by Congress of a statue of Robert E. Lee as a contribution from Virginia to Statuary Hall in the capitol. The bill was passed unanimously except for Mr. Heyburn's vote. Mr. Rayner in a speech attacked the constitutionality of the proposed postal savings banks law. The Senate passed a dozen bills for the establishment of fish hatchery stations in various parts of the country. The President's federal incorporation bill was introduced in the House and was opposed by Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, on the ground of unconstitutionality. The House devoted two and a half hours to a discussion of one of its rules recently adopted for the purpose of facilitating business.

The postal savings bank bill and the bureau of forestry were under discussion in the Senate Tuesday. The public expenditures committee was also taken up in debate, some Senators seeing a possible interference with the regular committees because of the comprehensive powers given the public expenditures committee. "Joy rides," wine and other personal extravagances of living were charged against the immigration committee in the House by Mr. Macon, of Arkansas, in discussing the expenses contracted by the commission on its trip to Europe last summer. Tariff and high prices were debated by Mr. Henry, of Texas, and Mr. Boutell, of Illinois.

FROM FAR AND NEAR.

Earthquakes were felt at Imperial Valley points in California. No damage is reported.

Fire destroyed the First Church of Christ, Scientist, at Kansas City. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Fire destroyed the mill building of Wasp mine No. 2 at Lead, S. D. The loss is $97,000; insurance, $35,000.

Speaking at a Tokyo dinner, Baron Shihusawa asserted that two-thirds of American prestige was due to the character of the people, and he said he was especially impressed with the important part played by the Y. M. C. A.

By a majority of 314 in a vote of 6,504 prohibition was defeated at a local option election in Joplin, Mo. Women served free lunch at the polls.

Candidacy of Congressman Butler Ames for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was formally announced in Boston.

Informed by the "Answers to Correspondents" department of a psychic magazine that he was due to die on Thursday at midnight, John Wege, aged 35, of Cleveland, vanished at that time in his night clothes and has not since been seen.

CHAPTER X.—(Continued.)

At the North, as his news ran, affairs remained as they had been, save that now the French king had sent an army to supplement the fleet, and Count Rochambeau and the allies were encamped on Rhode Island ready to take the field.

In the South the distressing situation following the disastrous battle of Camden was but little changed. General Gates, with the scantiest following, had hastened first to Salisbury and later to Hillsborough, and had since been busy striving to reassemble his scattered forces.

A few military partizans, like my host, had kept the field, doing what the few might against the many to retard my Lord Cornwallis' northward march; and a week earlier the colonel with his handful of mounted riflemen had dared to oppose his entry into Charlotte.

"'Twas no more than a hint to his Lordship that we were not afraid of him," said my doughty colonel. "You know the town, I take it?"

"Very well, indeed."

"Well, we harassed him all the way from Blair's Mill, and 'twas midnight when we reached Charlotte. There we determined to make a stand and give him a taste of our mettle. We dismounted, took post behind the stone wall of the court house green and under cover of the fences along the road."

"Good! an ambush," said I.

"Hardly that, since they were looking to have resistance. Tarleton was sick, and Major Hanger commanded the British van. He charged, and we peppered them smartly. They tried it again, and this time their infantry outflanked us. We abandoned the court house and formed again in the eastern edge of the town; and now, bless you! 'twas my Lord Charles himself who had to ride forward and flout at his men for their want of enterprise."

"But you could never hope to hold on against such odds!" I exclaimed.

"Oh, no; but we held them for a third charge, and beat them back, too. Then they brought up two more regiments and we mounted and got off in tolerably good order, losing only six men killed. But Colonel Francis Locke was one of these; and my brave Joe Graham was all but cut to pieces—a sore blow to us just now."

The colonel sighed and a silence fell upon us. 'Twas I who broke it to say: "Then we are still playing a losing hand in the South, as I take it?"

"'Tis worse than that. As the game stands we have played all our trumps and have not so much as a long suit left. Cornwallis will go on as he pleases and overrun the State, and the militia will never stand to front him again under Horatio Gates. Worse still, Ferguson is off to the westward, embodying the Tories by the hundred, and we shall have burnings and hangings and harryings to the king's taste."

I nursed my knee a moment and then said: "What may one man do to help, Colonel Davie?"

He looked up quickly. "Much, if you are that man, and you do not value your life too highly, Captain Ireton."

"You may leave that out of the question,' said I. "I shall count it the happiest moment of my life when I shall have done something worth their killing me for."

Again he gave me that curious look I had noted before. Then he laughed. "If you were as young as Major Joe Graham, and had been well crossed in love, I could understand you better, Captain. But, jesting aside, there is a thing to do, and you are the man to do it. Our spies are thick in Cornwallis' camp, but what is needed is some master spirit who can plot as well as spy for us. Major Ferguson moves as Cornwallis pulls the strings. Could we know the major's instructions and designs, we might cut him off, bring the Tory uprising to the ground, and so hearten the country beyond measure. I say we might cut him off, though I know not where the men would come from to do it."

"Well?" said I, when he paused.

"The preliminary is some better information than our spies can give us. Now you have been an officer in the British service, and——"

I smiled. "Truly; and I have the honor, if you please to call it so, of his Lordship's acquaintance. Also, I have that of Colonel Harleton and the members of his staff, the same having tried and condemned me as a spy at Appleby Hundred some few weeks before this chase I have told you of."

His face fell. "Then, of course, it is out of the question for you to show yourself in Cornwallis' headquarters."

I rose and buttoned my borrowed coat.

"On the contrary, Colonel Davie, I am more than ever at your service. Let me have a cut of your venison and a feed for my horse, and I shall be at my Lord's headquarters as soon as the nag can carry me there."

Colonel Davie gave me bite and sup, and I was soon ready to take the road. My plan, such as it was, had been determined upon, and to the furthering of it, the colonel had written me a letter to a friend in the town who might shelter me for a night and make the needed inquiry for my belongings. Also, he had given me another letter, of which more anon, and had pressed upon me a small purse of gold pieces.

When all was done, two of my late captors were ordered to set me straight in the road; and some half-hour past noon I had shaken hands with the big fellow in homespun who had been so bent upon hanging me without benefit of clergy, had crossed the river, and was making the first looping in a detour which should bring me into Charlotte from the westward.

I had recrossed the river a mile or more below Appleby Hundred, when I began to meet the outposts of the British army. I was promptly halted by the first of these; but my borrowed uniform and a ready word or two passed me within the lines as a courier riding post to headquarters from Major Ferguson in the west. The lieutenant in command of the first vedette line asked me a few questions, and was so obliging as to give me the password for the night to help me through the inner sentry lines.

When I was come to town it was well past candle-lighting; and the patrol was out in force. But by dint of using the password freely I made my way unhindered to the house of the gentleman to whom Colonel Davie's letter accredited me. Here, however, the difficulties began. Though the camp of the army lay just without the town to the southward, the officers were quartered in every house, and that of Colonel Davie's friend was full to overflowing. What was to be done we knew not, but at the last moment my friend's friend thought of an expedient and wrote a note for me whilst I waited, half in hiding, in the outer hall.

"'Tis a desperate chance, but these are desperate times," said my would-be helper. "I am sending you to the town house of one of our plantation seigneurs—a man who is fish, flesh or fowl, as his interest demands. I hear he came in to-day to take protection, and there is a chance that he will shelter you for the sake of your red coat and a gold piece or two. But I warn you, you must be what you appear to be—a soldier of the king—and not what this note of Colonel Davie's says you are."

Seeing a wide field of danger-chances in this haphazarding, I would have asked more about this trimming gentleman to whom I was to be handed on; but at that moment there came a thundering at the door, and my anxious host was fain to hustle me out through the kitchen as he could, catching up a black boy on the way to be my guide.

'Twas but a little distance we had to go, and we soon reached the doorstone of a familiar mansion but one remove from the corner of the court house green. I lost no time in running up the steps and hammering a peal with the heavy knocker. Through the side-lights I could see that the wide entrance hall was for the moment unoccupied; but at the knocker-lifting I had a flitting glimpse of some one—a little man all in sober black—coming down the stair. There was no immediate answer to my peal, but when I would have knocked again the door was swung back and I stepped quickly within to find myself face to face with —Margery.

I know not which of the two of us was the more dumfounded; but this I do know; that I was still speechless and fair witless when she swept me a low-dipped curtsy and gave me my greeting.

"I bid you good evening, Captain Ireton," said said, coldly; and then with still more of the frost of unwelcome in her voice: "To what may we be indebted for this honor?"

Now, chilling as these words were, they thrilled me to my finger-tips. They were blankly unanswerable, and had the door been open I should doubtless have vanished as I had come. Of all the houses in the town this was surely the last I should have run to for refuge had I known the name of its master; and it was some upbashing of this thought that helped me find my tongue.

"I never guessed this was your father's house," I stammered, bowing low to match her curtsy. "I beg you will pardon me, and let me go as I came."

She laid a hand on the door-knob. "Is—is there any one here whom you would see?" she asked; and now her eyes did not meet mine, and I would think the chill had melted a little.

"No. I was begging a night's lodging of a friend whose house is full. He sent me here with a note to—ah—to your father, as I suppose, though in his haste he did not mention the name."

She held out her hand. "Give me the letter."

"Nay," said I; 'that would be but thankless work. Knowing me, your father must need conceive it his duty to denounce me."

"Give it me!" she insisted; this with an impatient little stamp of the foot and an upglance of the compelling eyes that would have constrained me to do a far foolisher thing, had she asked it.

So I gave her the letter and stood aside, hat in hand, while she read it. There were candles in their sconces over the mantel and she moved nearer to have the better light. The soft glow of the candles fell upon her shining hair, and upon cheek and brow; and I could see her pulse throbbing in her fair white neck.

'Twas a most practical little thing she did that saved me from falling headlong into this last ditch of dishonor. Twisting the letter into a spill she stood on tiptoe to light it at one of the candles, saying: "'Twas a foolish thing to put on paper, and might well hang the writer in such times as these. He says you are a king's man and well known to him, and you are neither." But when the letter was a crisp of blackened paper-ash she turned upon me, and once again the changeful eyes were cold and her words were stranger-formal.

"What is it you would have me do, Captain Ireton?"

"Nothing," I made haste to say; "nothing save to believe that I came here unwittingly—and to let me go."

"Where will you go? The town is alive with those who would—who would——"

"Who would show me scant mercy, you would say. True; and yet I came hither—to the town, I mean—of my own free will."

Her mood changed in the pivoting fraction of an instant, and now the beautiful eyes were alight and warm and pleading eloquent.

"Oh, why did you come? Are you—are you what they said you were?"

"A spy? If I am, you would scarce expect me to confess it, even to you."

"'Tis dishonorable—most dishonorable!" she cried. "I could respect a brave soldier enemy; but a spy——"

There was a clattering of hoofs in the street and a jingle of sword-scabbards on the door-stone. I wheeled to face the newcomers, determined now to front it boldly as a desperate man at bay. But before the fumbling hands without could find the door-knob Margery was beside me, all a-flutter in a trembling-fit of excitement.

"Up the stair, quickly!" she whispered; and we were at the clock landing when the great door opened and some half-dozen king's officers came in. We crouched together behind the balustrade till they should pass beyond the sight of us, and in the group I marked a man stout and heavily built, walking full solidly for his two-and-forty years. He wore his own hair dressed high in front in the fashion, and as he passed under the candles I saw that it was graying slightly. His face, high-browed, long-nosed, double-chinned, with the eyes womanish for bigness and marked with brows that might have been penciled by the hairdresser, I had seen before; but lacking this present sight of it, the orders on his breast would have named him the ranking general of the army in the field—Lord Charles Cornwallis. With all the houses in the town to choose among, I had blundered into this—my Lord's own headquarters.

I had but a passing glimpse of the incoming group, for when it was well beneath the turn of the stair, my lady had me up and running again, driving me on before her to the chamber floor above, along a dimly lighted corridor with many turnings, and so to a doorless passage with a high dormer window in the end and no other apparent means of egress.

Margery had snatched a candle from one of the corridor holders in the flight, and now she bade me sit on the floor and draw my boots. I did it, shamefacedly enough, being but a foul and ragged vagabond unfit to have her come anigh me. But I might have spared my blushings for she had turned her back and was opening a secret door in the high wainscot.

Beyond the door lay a raftered garret half filled with cast-off house lumber and lighted and aired by two high roof windows. Into this she led me, with a finger on her lip for silence. A hum of voices, the clinking of glass, and now and again a hearty soldier laugh told me that my garret was above some living-room of the house.

While I stood, boots in hand, she found a make-shift candlestick and in a trice had spread me a pallet on an ancient oaken settle big enough to serve for a choir stall in a cathedral.

"You'll be safe here for the night, if so be you will make no more noise than a rat might make," she whispered. "'Tis a terrible risk. How you will get off in the morning I do not know."

The African Market.

The prices of wild animals naturally fluctuate with the demand. An excessive supply of rhinoceroses would soon reduce the market value. Five for sale at any time in the world would glut the market, for one cannot sell a rhinoceros every day. The maintenance of wild animals is costly and they soon eat their value in food, so that every day they are on the hunter's or the dealer's hands he is losing money.

After the animals are captured they have to be transported to the coast. This adds greatly to the cost. Delivered at Nairobi or Fort Florence, which are inland and practically on the African hunting field, a baby rhinoceros of the prehensile lipped species will bring from $375 to $500, a giraffe from $250 to $500 and a baby hippopotamus from $250 to $450, elands and most of the large antelope from $125 to $200, elephants from $375 to $875, lions and leopards, with the exception of the black species of the latter, from $100 to $425, according to size and condition. The gorilla and the square mussled (or so called white) rhinoceros can be sold at auction by telegraph. Their value might run from $5,000 to $30,000, according to the bidding.—Hampton's Magazine.

Physiological.

"Effie," said Margie, who was laboriously spelling words from a first reader, "how can I tell which is a 'd' and which is a 'b?'"

"Why," replied Effie, wisely, "the 'd' has its tummy on its back."—Tit-Bits.

By Comparison.

"I notice some of the old newspaper jokes have got on the stage."

"So?"

"Yes; and they really seem quite fresh in musical comedy."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Richard Cunningham, of Harrison County, is regarded as a busy man. He is managing a farm and looks after a good deal of live stock. He is trustee of Washington Township and teaches school in an adjoining township.

Will Rhoadarner, of Greenfield, is a firm believed that thirteen is a lucky number in the poultry business. He had thirteen hens in his pen that laid thirteen eggs each day during the month of January. He received 40 cents a dozen for most of the eggs.

The town of Spiceland seems to be a haven for unmarried women. In a population of only eight hundred there are forty-three widows and eighteen spinsters. To offset this large number of unmarried women there are only five widowers and five bachelors.

The new buildings erected at Wernie Orphans' Home, south of Richmond, at a cost of $40,000, are completed and occupied and the formal dedication has been set for May 30. The institution is under the care of the Lutheran churches of Indiana and Ohio.

The Hoosier State Poultry Association has elected James McLaughlin president; John Lamber, vice-president; Peter Fetter, treasurer, and Walter T. Smith secretary. The next annual exhibition will be held in New Albany January 13 to 17, 1911, with S. B. Lane, of Ohio, as judge.

The tenth annual breeders' sale of thoroughbred draft, driving and saddle horses which had been in progress at Bloomington for a week, closed after animals to the value of $200,000 had been disposed of, buyers coming from many States. Prominent Chicago buyers included George Ames and C. N. Jones.

Edward Holder, of Richmond, widely known as an animal trainer and circus man, has sold his holding in Richmond, to become head trainer for the Barnum & Bailey Circus at Bridgeport, Conn. Mr. Holder will not accompany the circus, but will train the animals for their acts and then turn them over to others.

Logansport merchants hope to make the business part of their city the best illuminated of any city in Indiana. Plans are now being made to light the business district with a system of Tungsten electric lights. Iron poles will be set forty feet apart and there will be a cluster of five 80-candle power Tungsten lights on each pole.

Apprehension is felt by the farmers of Elkhart and adjoining counties over the condition of the wheat crop. Ice one to five inches thick covers the fields and the wheat is frozen in it. It is feared the roots will be forced to the surface, where the dry winds of March and April will complete the damage. Many are planning to surplant the crop with oats in the spring.

Following the death of Alfred Urion, a 15-year-old Wendel Phillips High School boy, in Chicago, from overindulgence in athletics, the Hammond High School authorities decided to make it compulsory that every boy taking part in any school athletic contest must submit to a rigid medical examination to ascertain whether he is physically fit to enter athletic contests. This is the first time the step has been taken in Indiana.

The maple sugar and maple syrup season will open in Bartholomew county on February 15, if the weather permits. John S. Crump, owner of the largest sugar camp in the county, says the weather for the last few days has been ideal for sugar water and that the sap will be running free a few more thawing days come. Practically all of the camps in the county are arranging to open for business as early in February as possible.

A number of farmers in the vicinity of Seymour have experimented for several years with test crops of tobacco, and are of the opinion that the soil and climate of the county are adapted for producing tobacco that will compare very favorably in quality and quantity with that raised in the tobacco district of Kentucky. One farmer realized over $400 from a crop raised on four acres of ground. The other tests proved almost as profitable. The farmers are arranging to cultivate many acres of tobacco next year.

Residents of Lyles Station, a colored settlement four miles west of Princeton, are wrought up over what seems to have been an attempt to assassinate William Bell, a negro merchant. A small bomb, believed to contain nitro-glycerin, was placed partly concealed in a private pathway over which Bell passed on his way to his store. It is a small cylinder, apparently arranged so that the slightest concussion would touch it off. Bell nearly avoided striking it with his foot. The police are investigating.

The blazing paper with which she was attempting to light her pipe falling from her fingers, Mrs. Minerva Wharton, aged 82, living near Warren, was burned to death before help could reach her.

Mrs. James Cavanaugh went to bed able to see as well as any one and when she awoke she was totally blind. She has been ill at her home in Columbus for several weeks and it is thought that her illness produced blindness.

Another big real estate deal was closed when George Bassett sold his 44-acre farm in Van Buren Township, Shelby County, to Dr. J. A. White for $18,000 or $125 an acre.

Tired of a life which she believed held nothing but toil and suffering for her, Mrs. Charles Bevers is dead at Winthrop as a result of swallowing Paris green with suicidal intent.

Mrs. Teresa Walters, of Washington, is dead after suffering from tetanus for several days. She became ill a few days ago with pneumonia. Later lockjaw developed and the physicians were unable to relieve her. She was 56 years old and had reared a large family.

D. F. Robinson & Co., commission merchants of Jeffersonville, have received a hen which they think is valuable as a freak. The hen has no bill and drinks the same as a four-footed beast, not raising its head to swallow. The hen is normal except for the head. The eyes are like a hawk's.

Washington Conrad, aged 83, a pioneer farmer, died at his home near Darlington, as a result of injuries received a week ago when he fell and hurt his hip while doing some work about the barn. The widow, who is also past 80, is in a serious condition on account of the shock caused by her husband's death.

James Courter, aged 104, declared to be the oldest man in Indiana, is dead from pneumonia at his home, a log cabin on a Switzerland county farm. The aged man was born in Boone county, Kentucky, on April 7, 1805. He was a Democrat and cast his first presidential vote for Andrew Jackson in 1829. Courter had chewed tobacco for ninety-five years.

Mark Burson and L. G. Burson, brothers, each an engineer employed by the Chicago, Indiana & Southern Railroad Company, met in a head-on collision when the freight trains they were piloting crashed together near Schneider, in Lake County. A heavy fog was responsible for the wreck. None was hurt and the locomotives were not irreparably damaged.

A newspaper account of the conversion of Alfred Potts, aged ninety-three and his baptism in a watering trough in the barnyard at the home of his nephew, Henry Pentland, near Greenfield, resulted in the reunion of the aged man and his niece, Mrs. Josephine Horn, of Hillsboro, whom he had not seen or heard from in thirty-five years. Mrs. Horn believed her aged relative was dead until she read of his being baptized in the unusual manner.

Fargo, a female elephant belonging to the Norris & Rowe circus, now in winter quarters at Evansville, went insane several days ago and was killed. The animal was strangled. A rope was placed about its neck and each end slipped through pulleys and attached to horses which were driven in opposite directions until the animal was dead. Fargo was 15 years old and valued at $5,000. It had been suffering from rheumatism for a long time, and finally went crazy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Keys, of Oklahoma, is visiting her sister, Mrs. William Morrow in Carmel, whom she had not seen for thirty-five years. The sisters separated in Porter County, Indiana, Mrs. Keys going with her husband to Tennessee to live and from there to the southwest, where they made their home until two years ago, when Mr. Keys died. Mr. and Mrs. Morrow have been residents of Hamilton County for nearly fifty years. Mrs. Keys came to Carmel from South Bend, where where she visited her children, Mr. and Mrs. George Keys.

A committee of physicians and officials of the Lafayette Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, headed by President Severance Burrage, inspected a site for a tuberculosis sanitarium with the idea of having a number of pavilions erected on the spot for the Indiana Red Cross Society. The site inspected is six miles east of Lafayette on a wooded bluff overlooking the southern fork of Wildcat creek. The land belongs to the Presbyterian church of Dayton. It is probable this site will be selected, and the erection of the sanitarium begun in the spring.

The Columbus Chautauqua Association has announced that the Chautauqua this year will be given from Aug. 19 to Aug. 28. On the same day the announcement came from the Bartholomew County Fair Association that the Bartholomew county fair and race meeting this year will be given from Aug. 23 to 26. The Chautauqua management declares that its dates were selected some time ago and can not be changed. Officials of the Fair Association say they were not aware of a conflict with the Chautauqua dates and that their dates can not be changed because of the fact that they are members of the Southern Indiana Fair Circuit.

The Delaware County Corn Club will be organized at a meeting of farmers in Muncie, the organization to be effected under direction of Cary Sunderland, former instructor in the agricultural school at Purdue University.

The handsome dwelling owned by J. C. Halbert and occupied by Charles Webster, in North Meridian street, Brasil, caught fire from a defective flue and was badly damaged. The loss amounts to over $3,000, covered by insurance.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

The Weekly Review of Chicago Trade, published by R. G. Dun & Co., says:

The course of business generally reflects steadiness in operations and a satisfactory accumulation of new demands in the prominent industries. Bank statements this week impart strength to the general situation by their exhibit of gains in both deposits and discounts and the evidence of ample resources to meet needs of an expanding activity. With the liquidation in securities the direction of the money market is easier and a reduced cost of borrowing will promote wider effort in manufacturing and new enterprises.

Movements of commodities again approach normal proportions and transportation returns disclose sustained gains in gross earnings, indicating that recovery from recent adverse conditions permits satisfactory running of the Chicago roads. The more seasonable weather has brought better buying in the leading retail lines here and at the interior. Winter stocks of general merchandise have undergone adequate reduction and this favorable factor encourages increasing number of visiting buyers to attend the wholesale markets. Higher prices for some staples occasion little objection, their scarcity being apparent.

Bank clearings, $267,236,872, are 3.3 per cent under those of the corresponding week last year and compare with $220,223,175 in 1908.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 36, against 31 last week, 27 in 1909 and 32 in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 7, against 7 last week, 5 in 1909 and 6 in 1908.

NEW YORK.

Trade in general displays a certain degree of quietness, not, by the way, unusual at this, a between-seasons period, but in several quarters there is a greater disposition to act conservatively in the matter of purchases. For one thing, the agitation for lower prices tends to the belief that quotations may recede to more attractive levels, and at the same time some large interests seem to fear inimical action from the Federal authorities at Washington. These factors, together with the marked weakness in the country's leading stock market and the natural tendency of trade to mark time at this season of the year, tend to a quieting of the current of trade. There is some uneasiness over labor matters. Business failures for the week ending with Feb. 3 in the United States were 242, against 295 last week, 286 in the like week of 1909, 272 in 1908, 198 in 1907 and 204 in 1906. Business failures in Canada for the week number 30, as against 43 last week and 47 in the like week in 1909. —Bradstreet's.

The Coming Census.

Here are some of the question that the enumerator will put up to the man of the house:

What is your name?

The names of the members of your family?

What is the relationship of these people to you?

How old are you?

Are you single, married, widowed or divorced?

How long have you been married, if at all?

How many children have you?

Where were you born?

Where was your father born?

Your mother?

How long have you been in this country?

Are you naturalized?

Can you speak English? If not, what can you speak?

What is your occupation?

Are you employed or an employer?

Were you out of work April 15, 1910?

How long out of work in 1909?

Can you read and write?

Do you own or rent your home? Any mortgage?

Are you a survivor of the union or confederate navy or army?

Are you blind? One or both eyes?

And—lastly—

Are you deaf or dumb?

A few minutes delay in treating some cases of croup, even the length of time it takes to go for a doctor often proves dangerous. The safest way is to keep Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and at the first indication of croup give the child a dose. Pleasant to take and always cures. Sold by H. L. Dunkle, St Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

How does the village editor manage to make the newspaper he does is a question which has been often asked and never answered in but one way, by work. He is his own editor, reporter, business manager, foreman, mailing clerk and frequently compositer. Alone, or with an assistant or two, he turns out every week a paper which, while perhaps not as brilliant, it contains substantially all the general news of the day and all of the news of the locality. The paper has an influence far greater in proportion to its circulation than any of the great metropolitan dailies and it has done more to educate and reform the people than the churches and public schools. The overworked country editor is not properly appreciated, for he does more for the community in which he lives than any other individual. He must have a firm belief in a reward hereafter or his nerve would desert him early in his career. And yet there are men who say that the editor is a knocker if he don't just fall in with his ideas, and that he don't practice what he preaches.

An attack of the grip is often followed by a persistent cough, which to many proves a great annoyance. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been extensively used and with good success for the relief and cure of this cough. Many cases have been cured after all other remedies had failed. Sold by H. L. Dunkle, St. Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

The bell buzzard, whose tinkling has been heard for many years in different parts of the country and reported to have been heard in Hancock county at one time, was captured by a lad of 18 in West Virginia. The big bird was almost starved and after being fed for a week was again vigorous and impatient in captivity. An ordinary sleigh bell was found riveted about its neck and the number "172" on it. Its tinkling has been heard for forty years in Virginia, it is said.—Bluffton News.

It is always best to wait for the evidence before passing judgement. When you hear reports detrimental to young ladies or gentlemen, don't be hasty in forming conclusions. It is better to be charitable when any one is in trouble. Today it is some one else's boy or girl; tomorrow it may be yours. Trouble comes to us all, and we should be willing to extend the same charity we should expect from others. Gossip distorts and magnifies occurances that have no foundation in fact, and injustice is often done innocent parties. If your boy is guilty of a crime don't shield him and take his part, but give him the lesson while he is young. If let go you will probably suffer for your lemiende toward him in after years.

First Annual Minstrel

The first Annual Minstrel Show was given by the Coburntown band in Widney's Opera House, last Friday evening, and was a success in every way and all seemed well pleased. The members were all local and they kept the house in an uproar for nearly an hour, each member being well adapted to his special part. The farce entitled "The Baby Elephant" was a laughable and the players were right at home. The director, Mr. C. A. Woodcox is to be congratulated upon his efforts in making the affair a success as he worked hard and seemed to be more interested than those giving the play. An open air concert was given at 6:30 and as soon as over, the crowd began to gather until the receipts showed it to be over a $38 house. The event will be made annual and will be a looked for attraction each year. The public can always rest assured that when the Coburntown band is at the head of an entertainment that its alright.

Rag Sewing

A rag sewing bee was held at Mrs. Ira Bone's last Thursday to which about thirty of her town and country friends attended. At the noon hour she had prepared a fine chicken dinner to which the ladies did ample justice after sewing about twenty pounds of carpet rags. The dinner was thoroughly enjoyed by all and a good social time was had.

Golden Age of Farming Near.

During a conversation with a leading business man recently, the talk drifted towards the causes that have contributed to the high prices of living and it was shown that in the last few decades the cities have grown more rapidly than the rural districts. But another change is in the process of developement. The high prices of farm products has attracted attention towords the farm as a means of investment. Gradually the drift cityward is letting up and the call of nature is becoming more clear and distinct. It has not been many years ago that the tide ran from country to city. The glamour of life under electric lights, the play houses, parks, public buildings, expensive homes, gay throngs on the streets, fine clothes, jewelry and diamonds, lured the young men and women away from the pure air of the farm to the fetid atmosphere of the city. It has always been a false life, full of temptations. The promises held out to youth were nearly all illusive. Few ever rose to the top. The very flower of American manhood and womanhood reared in the clean air and under pure skies were engulfed in the maelstrom; they ended their lifes in factories and died in tenement houses.

But see the change, it is voiced in the president's recent message. Everything is leaning towards the land and increasing its production. The magnificent promises of agriculture and fruit raising are as tempting to hoarded wealth as were the stocks in fabulous gold mines a few years ago. The talk in business circles in the cities and towns turns towards the country. Spruce looking traveling men, who were want to sneer at the "Reubens", now express a longing for the time when they can own and live on their own land. Merchants, manufacturers, bankers and professional men turn their weary eyes towards the country and long for the hour when they can steal away from the nerve-killing and soul-destroying atmosphere of the cities. The green meadows, the waving trees, the aroma of the rose, the song of the bird, all make up the call of nature. The city offers nothing like it, because it has it not to give.

There is no legitimate business that pays as well as farming has in the last few years, and land values have shot upwards everywhere. The golden age of the farmer is near at hand. Science, invention and capital are pouring their wealth at the feet of the farmer. He is no longer sneered at or despised. He is different from his father. Everything is within his reach, improved labor saving tools, engines to furnish power for the house and farm. He boasts of automobiles; he can live in a residence as luxurious as his city cousins, wears as good clothes; his home is warmed with a furnace, hot and cold water, both roomy and lit with a light plant. He reads his daily papers, is in touch with the commercial and political life of the world, his mail is brought to his door, electric cars speed by his place, the telephone is at his elbow. His wife has her magazines, her social and literary clubs and is dressed as well as her city relatives to say nothing of the glow of health on her cheeks.

This is the evolution of agricultural life. We are speeding forward. We have laid the primers aside because we know the laws of cause and effect. Specialists explain new methods and discoveries. Farmers institutes are clearing houses for the latest ideas in scientific farming. The young people are being aroused. There is room for conquests, room for inventions, room for experiments. A young professor last week surrendered a $2,000 position to accept $2,000 as superintendent of a farm. The waste places are made fruitful by new discoveries, the swamp has vanished and the deserts rejoice and blossom as the rose.

This great government that for years has lent its aid to the upbuilding of commercial and manufacturing centers is now tending its credit to those who are opening up the great farms of the west.

The golden age of farming is near at hand. Speculators have seen it coming and are filling newspapers with tempting stories of lands in the south and ranches in the west. Young man if you have an interest in DeKalb county land cling to it, and if you have not, get some of it as soon as you can. Land is growing valuable everywhere, the public domain is nearly exhausted and still the cry is for more wheat and corn to feed the hungry millions. The farmers and the farm are the colossal figures that loom up in the national horizon. There is no better land than DeKalb county when once it is developed by the highest scientific methods. Stay by it and it will stay by you.—Auburn Dispatch.

Ten Doctors Said He Would Die

"In 1903 we wrote you regarding my husband, who was suffering from heart trouble. He was superannuated by the North Georgian Conference. Ten doctors at different times said he would die. You advised Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Restorative Nervine; we did as advised, and improvement was apparent from the very first. He recovered and the Conference in 1904 gave him a charge. He never felt better, although he has very heavy work and does a great deal of camp meeting work. I am so glad we took your advice and gave him the medicine, and feel that I ought to let you know of the wonderful good results from its use."

10th. Wedding Anniversary

Mr. Clinton Wearley and daughter Zenith, attended the celebration at Ole Brabrooks' of their tenth wedding anniversary held at their present home on the John Swaidner farm in Springfield township, and a jolly good time was had by all. The guests assembled at 7 o'clock and were highly entertained by music and song. At 10 o'clock the ceremony was read followed by prayer, after which a three course luncheon was royally served. The guests then revelled in song, chat and laughter. The younger people played games until a late hour. After singing "God be with you till we meet again," the guests all departed wishing the kind host and hostess many returns of their wedding anniversary. Following is a list of the guests present:—Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Kinsey and daughters Gladys and Joy, Ed Kinsey, wife and daughters Irene and Jenevieve, Clint Kinsey and sons, Mrs. Chas. Kinsey, Grandma Kinsey, Mrs. Caroline Helney of St. Louis, Mo., David Sowers, wife and son Ray, Mark Gorrell and wife, Robert Moore and family, Dave Moore and wife, Guy McCurdy, wife and baby, Ed Brace, wife, and daughter Vergia, Mrs. Lorenzo Swaidner and sons Vernie and Lee also daughter Edith, Ben Dorsey and family, Earl Tustison and wife and Chas. Girls Club Entertained

The young Ladies Club was entertained last Saturday afternoon by Armintie Steward. It being so near St. Valentine day, everything was made to suggest the day as much as possible. The girls after sewing awhile were given a two course luncheon, consisting of sandwiches, fruit, pickles, ice cream, cake and coffee. Then at 4:00 o'clock they were invited upstairs and were each given a string and told to tie it to their finger and then follow it up without taking it off, and as they were twisted over and over each other and all around furniture and pictures, in and out of two rooms, they had quite a time and lots of fun. But they finially came to the ends of them and found heart shaped boxes filled with home made candies. As the day was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mrs. Steward's marriage, the girls went down stairs and Mrs. Audry Wade in behalf of the club, presented her with a beautiful silver berry spoon, which was quite a surprise as she did not know that anyone knew of the day. Mrs. Fannie Beams also gave her a fine salad fork, for which all have the sincere thanks of Mrs. Steward. The invited guests, out side the club, were Miss Pearl Goldsmith, Miss Ida Reed and Miss Ruth Essick.

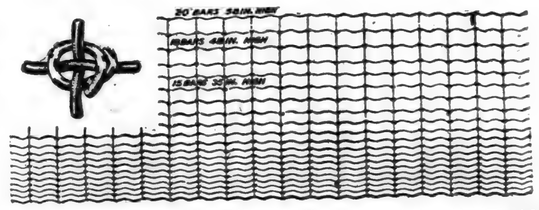
"The Michigan" Wire Fence.



Is made of a good quality of carbonized steel wire, having a tensile strength nearly double that of common annealed steel or soft wire. Years of experience in the manufacture of wire fencing have demonstrated that the best wire for fence purposes is one that is both hard and tough—hard without being brittle and tough without being soft. The wire of which "The Michigan" is made combines these qualities, having just enough points carbon to give it strength and elasticity, and yet tough enough to admit of splicing without drawing the temper. All wire is thoroughly galvanized and ample provision for contraction and expansion is made in the tension curves.

Note carefully the lock or tie which unites the lateral and upright wires. Observe that it is a simple, smooth and strong lock, having the legs well hooked over the line wire as well as locked over each other, thereby preventing spreading of the legs when under pressure. This lock is not driven down on the line and stay wires; thus they are not injured at the point of intersection.

"Isn't this your street?" he asked the passenger.

"Yes," replied the latter. "It's my street and that's my home yonder, and there's my little girl at the gate. But I'm not ready to leave you yet, conductor."

And he waved his hand toward the roadway. Nineteen powerful racing machines driven by nineteen goggle-eyed demons came swooping down past the car, filling all the roadway. Behind them came more racing cars and more demons, and far in the distance trailed still more.

"Mebby you'll git a chance to drop off on th' return trip," said the conductor kindly.

And he rang the bell.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GET POWER.

The Supply Comes from Food.

If we get power from food, why not strive to get all the power we can? That is only possible by use of skillfully selected food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

Poor fuel makes a poor fire and a poor fire is not a good steam producer.

"From not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach troubles," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me. Hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heartburn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

"A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I have kept up its use ever since. I was surprised at the ease with which it digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heartburn, the inflated feeling which gave me so much pain disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 pounds, my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. Grape-Nuts did it."

A ten days' trial will show anyone some facts about food.

THE FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY.

"This government, the offspring of our own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and support."—From President Geo. Washington's address to the people of the United States, Sept. 17, 1796.

FEBRUARY TWENTY-TWO.

All year we're talked of Dewey,
Of Teddy and the rest—
We've gloried in the knowledge
That they are of the best.
We've sung a song of triumph—
A song that's never done,
We've treated and we've toasted
"The man behind the gun."

Our thoughts must now turn backward
To times long of the past—
To-day the modern heroes
Must be in shadow cast,
For we must sing the eulogy—
(No other song can match it)
The modern hero of the past—
The boy behind the hatchet.

HERO AND STATESMAN.

Washington Well Earned the Place He Holds in History.

Our country has among its statesmen many noble and worthy men whose names and good deeds should not be forgotten and whose memories should live forever in the hearts of a grateful and liberty-loving people. Of all these, Washington stands pre-eminently at the head. Naturally, and very rightly, he holds the first place in our thoughts and in our patriotic affections. The anniversary of his birth has long been a legal holiday, and if not observed with the same demonstrations of enthusiasm that mark Independence day, is yet enough of an event to turn our minds towards this great and commanding figure in American history, to keep before us this noble character and to stimulate within us a truer love of our country, together with a broader and higher devotion to those principles of human liberty for which Washington and our fathers fought.

Washington well earned the place he holds in history and in the hearts of his countrymen; and while he was only human and, therefore, subject to human frailties and weaknesses, he was, at the same time, and despite these facts, a great and a noble character.

A study of the man, as shown in his career from a surveyor to president of the United States, discloses, we think, the leading traits of his character. In the first place, he was of a thoughtful, deliberative nature. He was possessed of tremendous will force, and this faculty, turned as it was in his case into the right channels, enabled him to carry forward that work of self-training which he began in his early youth and continued, so far as we know, to the close of his long and eventful career. He was studious in his habits, loved truth, honesty and sobriety; and these virtues, with the constant use of his reflective powers, soon gave to him a judgment ripened by thoughtful observation, far superior to that possessed by most men of twice his age and experience.

His innate modesty, too, is well known. In about the only letter to his wife that has been preserved he assures her that he did not seek the high place which the continental congress had given him as commander in chief of the American army. He also tells her in the same epistle that he could not shirk the grave responsibilities thus thrust upon him and that he could not, without bringing reproach and disgrace to his good name, decline the proffered honor. At the same time he expresses his fears as to his ability to handle the great interests intrusted to him, but adds, with modest confidence that he will do the best he can and leave the rest to that Providence who had all along guided and protected him in every important undertaking.

This, then, is enough for us to know, that he did succeed in his new and responsible position, and in the discharge of his duties as commander in chief displayed the heroism, fortitude and courage that won for him the undying love and veneration of every true American. Why should we, then, bother about the minor blemishes, if there were any, of such a man?

We was still the great general, the patient, uncomplaining patriot, sharing the sufferings and hardships of his faithful soldiers, and never, for one instant, swerving in his splendid devotion to his country and the great cause of human liberty. Washington was a hero. He was also a patriot and a statesman. And let us rather be guilty, in his case, of a little hero worship than forget what he did for his country and humanity.

He Is in Doubt.

"Do you believe that story about George Washington cutting down the cherry tree with his little hatchet?" was asked of the farmer who had a seat in the smoking car.

"Wall, I'll be hanged if I know whether to believe it or not," he replied.

"How do you mean?"

"Wall, when me'n Martha was married we went to Mount Vernon on a trip, and we saw the family residence and the tomb. I asked one of the fellers about that cherry tree, and he took me out back of the house and showed me the stump of it."

"Did, eh? Then I don't see how you can doubt."

"No, mebbe I hadn't orter; but, you see, I brought a sliver of that stump home with me, and when I came to look at it more closely, I found the wood was elm instead of cherry. Mebbe the feller showed me the wrong stump, mebbe he was a liar, and mebbe I was so in love with Martha at the time that the elms and cherry trees got all mixed up. I hain't sayin' which way it was, but jest contendin' that Washington was a mighty good man and allus heaped up the measure when he sold 'taters."

SHOWED ME THE STUMP.

Washington Still Lives.

There are 96 towns in the United States named Washington. There are 356 fire companies named after the great man. There are over 10,000 meat markets named in his honor. There are 34 steamboats called after the great figure in history. There are 5 mountains, 20 lakes, 40 springs, and 7 rivers that might not have been named had Washington never been born. It is estimated that 4,000 children are named for him every year. There are Washington halls, Washington hotels, Washington clubs, Washington societies, Washington streets, and Washingtonians who sigh for a chance to save the country over again. Think of it! If he hadn't been born everything in the above would have had to be called Smith!

George Versus Willie.

I wonder if George Washington,
When he was nine years old,
Turned out his toes and brushed his hair
And always shut the door with care
And did as he was told.
I wonder if he never said,
"Oh, dear!" when he was sent to bed.
WILLIE.

He was married to Mrs. Custis Jan. 6, 1759, and for seventeen years they lived the simple life on their Mount Vernon estate.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

BRIGHT DAYS AND DARK.

By Rev. Donald Sage Mackay.

But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound.—Rom. v:20.

How much the counterbalance plays its part in the activities of human life! Our bright days are counterbalanced by dark days. Our times of prosperity are offset by times of adversity. For every sorrow there is in the divine providence a corresponding gain, and at the heart of every defeat there is for the man of faith the prophecy of new victory. Go where we will in the great universe of love and we find everywhere the working of this divine law of counterpoise—the divine love compensating for every earthly loss. "Where sin abounds grace doth much more abound." Where death walks with insolent feet life triumphs in exultant song. When earthly joys wither heavenly hope blooms in eternal beauty. When time wears out its vesture into threadbare decay eternity robes herself in immortal splendor.

It has been pointed out that Walter Scott became great as a man and realized the highest expression of his genius not until the wave of adversity swept into his life. "Look at that manuscript," says Ruskin, referring to Scott's novel of "Woodstock," which was in course of writing at the time, "written in the very maelstrom of that adversity and not by the quiver of a hair stroke, not by the suggestion of a single tremor in the hand, not by an erasure or change, not by any falling off in the creative interest of the story could any one detect that when Scott wrote the second part of that novel he did so under a cloud of bitter adversity."

And biography is full of such unmaskings of the reserve forces of character through the pressure of the dark days succeeding the bright days in life. Milton's personality became a far more potent influence after blindness had stricken him. The loss of physical sight intensified the keenness of spiritual vision. Had Bunyan never lain in Bedford jail he had never dreamed the "Pilgrims' Progress." Had Tom Hood never known for himself the bitterness of want and the ache of pain he had never sung the "Song of the Shirt" or sobbed out his immortal dirge, "The Bridge of Sighs." Had David never fallen as he did the world would never have felt the passion of penitence and aspiration of heart which breathed through some such psalm as the fifty-first. Had John never been banished to the island of Patmos we should never have had the revelation of heaven as he has unfolded its glories in the last book of Scripture. In a sense, most solemn of all, had Christ never passed through the darkness of Calvary and tasted the bitterness of death, He had never been exalted as the Savior of the world. In the highest sense, these alternating days in life reveal what is more precious than any human help, the nearness and the helpfulness of God Himself. Prayer grows strong in our day of adversity. Some of us, indeed, would never pray at all but for these dark hours in life. Some of us never would know God in the sunlight unless we had learned to stretch forth hands of necessity to Him in the darkness. God sets the dark days over against our bright days to teach us that through all the changes of life there is One whose presence never fails His children and on whose all-sufficient grace they can at all times lean. That was the deep lesson of the psalmist's life when he said: "It is good for me to be afflicted; before I was afflicted I went astray."

FINDING THE RICH SELF.

By Henry F. Cope.

"Whoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it."—Matt. xvi, 25.

We all recognize the wickedness of selfishness in its grosser aspects, but do we realize its folly in almost any of its forms? Selfishness is regarded as a sin; we do not yet regard it as suicide of our own best, as defeating its own purposes, as being, not simply a violation of some ideal code, but a foolish robbery and despoiling of our own selves.

On us all rests the obligation to bring self to its fullness, to realize our own powers, enter into our own possibilities. We dare not fall anywhere in life, nor stop short of being all that we might be. In the long judgment of the ages, we will find our places according as we have really found and fulfilled ourselves.

A real danger of some types of religious thinking is that they shall miss self-realization in fleeing from selfishness. Many would rather shrink than grow; they seek to prove their sanctity by the way they shrivel into their shells. If religion is a process of denying the beauty and reality of this life in order to assert the virtues of a hypocritical existence it can have no value for us here.

No man is more likely to yield to the subtle temptation of selfishness than he who thinks to please his God by blotting himself out of all real existence. He is selfishly and falsely spiritual, seeking escape from life's real business and burdens, shrinking from its duties, and really coveting an angel's ease when he should take up a man's work.

But the selfishness we most need to fear is that which shrinks and blasts the finest in us when we imagine that we are reaching out for the enriching of our lives. It is that paralysis of the soul which creeps gradually over one who falls into thinking of life as a scheme of each getting all from others and the universe as a grabbag in which the biggest hand gets the eternal prize.

The folly of that way of living is just in the fact that, though a man should gain the whole world by the very process he would lose his own soul, his heart would have dried up within him, and all his being would be but as one great, grasping hand and no more, neither heart to quicken with joy nor eyes to kindle nor powers of any sort to appreciate that which he called his possessions.

To think only of yourself is to lose yourself. It is to narrow the whole life down to that insignificant center of the self. The measure of living is its richness and breadth. Every time your heart goes out in sympathy to another you broaden your very self that much. Every time your hand goes out in helpfulness you lengthen thus the lines of your life. You amount to more in yourself in the measure that you include others in your plan of living.

Do you not see people on the street in whom the lifeless eye and the mechanical mouth mark the growth of the brute, the habit of blind indifference to the rights and needs of others? Now, what are they worth? Who so poor as to do reverence to any good thing in them? They have lost themselves in seeking things for themselves alone.

If we would find life, if we would keep alive in ourselves the nerves that give life its sweetness and value, if we would enrich our true selves, we need ever to keep the heart open to others, ever to fight against the suicide of selfishness. It is all a simple matter after all, just to give thought to the lives that touch our own, to let the heart grow by sympathy and service.

It takes us all a long time to learn that love and joy are never found by running after them; they are glowing lights that shine within us when we step into the ways of service and sacrifice. We try to snatch them and they fade; we seek to give them and they become our own.

The man who seeks heaven for himself alone will miss it just as truly as the man who seeks the earth for himself alone will die without discovering any of it. That is the law of life; he who would find life must take the way of losing it; if we would be rich indeed in the imperishable treasures of life we must cease to seek them; we must try to give them.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

WALKING WITH GOD.

By Washington Gladden.

[The Rev. Washington Gladden, D. D. (Pittsgrove, Pa., Feb. 11, 1836), is the pastor of the principal Congregational church in Columbus, Ohio, and at present the president of the American Missionary Association. He was educated at Williams College, graduating in 1859. As the editor of the New York Independent and of the Sunday Afternoon, and as a writer of religious books he has become well known, while his campaign against the acceptance of "tainted money" made him yet more widely known. This hymn appeared in Sunday Afternoon in March, 1879. In view of the time usually necessary for a hymn to come into general use "Walking with God" has attained a remarkable degree of popularity; it undoubtedly belongs already in the ranks of the standard favorite hymns.]

O, Master, let me walk with thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

Help me the slow of heart to move
By some clear winning word of love;
Teach me the wayward feet to stay,
And guide them in the homeward way.

Teach me thy patience! still with thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong.

In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's broadening way;
In peace that only thou canst give,
With thee, O Master, let me live.

SERMONETTES.

The church that does not fit for life is not fit to live.

You cannot wound the devil of greed with the fork of envy.

A man is worth only as much as makes him useful to his day.

The only ideas that cannot be revised are those that are dead.

It is not a sin to be rich, but it is a sin not to be enriching.

The proof of living in the light is making other lives bright.

No amount of anxiety to save the folk can make up for unwillingness to save and serve folk.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't miss the place of power by dodging all pain.

Don't expect to do the impossible if you never dream of the impossible.

Don't try to lead a boy into your faith until you have much faith in him.

Don't aim at respectability in the hope of hitting the mark of righteousness.

Don't forget that no man can be wholly free as long as any remain bound.

For Sprains

Sloan's Liniment is the best remedy for sprains and bruises.

It quiets the pain at once, and can be applied to the tenderest part without hurting because it doesn't need to be rubbed—all you have to do is to lay it on lightly. It is a powerful preparation and penetrates instantly—relieves any inflammation and congestion, and reduces the swelling.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. L. ROLAND, Bishop of Scranton, Pa. says:—"On the 7th of this present month, as I was leaving the building at noon for lunch, I slipped and fell, spraining my wrist. I returned in the afternoon, and at four o'clock I could not hold a pencil in my hand. I returned home later and purchased a bottle of and used it five or six times before I went to bed, and the next day I was able to go to work and use my hand as usual."

Sloan's Liniment

Sloan's Liniment is an excellent antiseptic and germ killer—heals cuts, burns, wounds and contusions, and will draw the poison from sting of poisonous insects.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

Misfortune of Dullness.

Dullness means a lack of imagination, and without imagination life and happiness are both impossible. Religion and art, from one point of view, share the same mission. They bring to man the sense of amazement. They teach us that the world is a wonderful fairy palace, the place of hourly miracles. Then we discover that we ourselves are most amazing creatures. The dull man is not interested in himself, has no self-love. I am certain that no man can love his neighbor unless he has learned to love himself. From ourselves we discover humanity.

Attention Sick Women

If you had positive proof that a certain remedy for female ills had made many remarkable cures, would you not feel like trying it?

If during the last thirty years we have not succeeded in convincing every fair-minded woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary relief, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and wrote to you for advice. I have faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five bottles of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial." —Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y.—"Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to three weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to say that I am cured, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the good of others." —Mrs. J. H. Breyere, St. Regis Falls, N. Y.

There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Full of Meaning.

Richard Croker, a few days before his departure for Florida, was a guest of honor at a dinner at the St. Regis. Mr. Croker, praising Judge Gaynor's oratory, said:

"His oratory is so concise. He packs so much meaning into so few words. He is like the old clerk whose master said to him:

"'John, that's a very shabby office coat you're wearing.'

"'Yes, sir,' said the old clerk, meaningly. 'I got this coat with the last raise you gave me.'"

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS.

A good honest remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Sore Throat is Hamlins Wizard Oil. Nothing will so quickly drive out all pain and inflammation.

Ah, Yes!

How easy it is to "remember the Maine,"
When 'tis only to mourn or to praise her!
How hard to recall her when some one would fain
See a few dollars voted to raise her!

WHEN YOUR JOINTS ARE STIFF and muscles sore from cold, rheumatism or neuralgia; when you slip, strain or bruise yourself use Perry Davis' Painkiller. The home remedy 70 years.

A Matter of Necessity.

"Papa, why don't you close your store on Christmas?"

"Why, child, mine's a cigar store. People have got to have their smokes on Christmas, same as any other day."

THE ENGLISH ELECTIONS.

Liberals Will Continue to Direct Policy of British Empire.

The Liberals will continue to direct the policy of the British empire. The lead is cut down some in the present appeal to the voters. The last time the Liberals had 354 over the Unionists, counting 83 Irish Nationalists and 55 Laborites. Now this supremacy has been reduced to 124, including 82 Irish Nationalists and 26 Laborites.

The result is disappointing to the party of progress. It was expected that the Liberals would elect at least 50 members more than they have and that they would carry all the measures they advocated through Parliament without the aid of any other party. As it is now the vote is so close between them and the Unionists that they must count upon the Irish Nationalists or the Laborites to get certain of their bills through. The rightful abridgment of the power of the House of Lords can only be done by an alliance with the two lesser parties. That will come, as the Home Rulers and the Laborites are in full accord with the proposal. The policy of protection gets a setback because the textile centers voted overwhelmingly against it.

The granting of home rule is quite unlikely, much as it was hoped that this might come to pass. Premier Asquith promised Ireland the prize it has been valorously contending for, but even he will hardly be able to gain it, for the landlord strength among his party is sufficient, by joining hands with the Unionists, to prevent its consummation. The failure to achieve this after the premier's pledge is most regrettable.

The system of labor exchanges will be established now that the Liberals have been continued in office. There will be 250 of these authorized, which will bring labor and capital into closer touch by providing work for idle men in a clearing house in which the employer is as anxious for help as the honest seeker for work is after employment.

WARRINER NOT BELIEVED.

Disagreement in Ford Trial Shows Eight Jurors Voted for Acquittal.

After twenty-four hours' deliberation the jury in the case of Mrs. Jeannette Stewart Ford, charged with blackmailing Charles L. Warriner, defaulting treasurer of the Big Four Railroad, was unable to reach an agreement and was discharged in Cincinnati. Judge Swing stated after he dismissed the jury that he had been informed that on the last ballot eight jurors had stood for acquittal and four for conviction. The unexpected end to the case was explained by two of the jurymen as due to the fact that a majority of their colleagues refused to give any credit to the testimony of Warriner. They asserted that a man who had confessed embezzling for twenty-five years would not hesitate to perjure himself against a woman whom he believed to have been the cause of his exposure.

OPERATE ON KING GUSTAVE.

Swedish Monarch Submits to Drastic Remedy for Appendicitis.

King Gustave of Sweden was operated on in Stockholm for appendicitis. The official reports given out state that the operation was a success. The King had been suffering from continual internal pains. It was not for several hours that the physicians diagnosed his case as one of appendicitis, requiring an immediate operation. The physicians first diagnosed the King's illness as catarrh of the stomach, and the matter was taken with such little seriousness that several members of the royal family attended a concert. At 10 o'clock they were all summoned to return to the palace, where they were apprised of the physicians' intention to operate on his majesty.

KING REX RULES NEW ORLEANS.

Mardi Gras Festivities at Height Under Carnival Monarch's Sway.

Hailing "Rex, King of the Carnival," New Orleans the other day approached the climax of Mardi Gras festivities. The siren of river craft and the cheering of thousands on shore welcomed the approaching monarch, as he came up the Mississippi river and landed from his royal yacht. The formality of turning over the keys of the city to him followed. Every train into the city, including many specials, brought hundreds of visitors. It is believed that the Mardi Gras attendance is the largest on record. The pageant and ball of Proteus took place at night. The next day the parade and ball of Rex was given, followed at night by the pageant and ball of Comus.

MANY SLAIN BY PIRATES.

Robber Bands Raid Villages, Loot Stores and Kill Chinese.

Depredations of pirates on the West and the Pearl rivers have caused a reign of terror among Chinese, say advices brought from Hongkong to Victoria, B. C., by the Awa Maru. Tip Kow village was captured by the pirates, who looted houses and stores, carried away two officials for ransom and killed many villagers. Pirates took possession of Sheung Shan island and a nearby village on the mainland, fortifying both. Troops drove them out after a hard fight.

Raw Eczema on Hands.

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. I had three good doctors but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle, together with the Cuticura Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle, I was entirely well. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to fool with nothing else, but to get Cuticura and get well. My hands have never given me the least bit of trouble up to now.

"My daughter's hands this summer became perfectly raw with eczema. She could get nothing that would do them any good until she tried Cuticura. She used Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Ointment and in two weeks they were entirely cured. I have used Cuticura for other members of my family and it always proved successful. Mrs. M. E. Falin, Speers Ferry, Va., Oct. 19, 1909."

Saving the Situation.

Dr. Hilary Little Laycock, of Wheeling, at the recent diocesan convention in New York, said of a certain resolution:

"It was, perhaps, unintelligible, like the Wheeling man's prayer. This man, praying in meeting for a brother who lay very ill, cried:

"'Oh, Lord, reveal unto us our brother, if it does not interfere with Thy perquisites.'

"The situation was saved by a deacon who shouted:

"'Hallelujah, the Lord knows what he means!'"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Cynic and the Curio.

Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth collector, was showing his beautiful collection of Louis Seize furniture to some ladies.

"I believe in collecting nothing," said Mr. McWade, standing among his treasures of Gobelin tapestry and pale, delicately carved wood—"nothing that is not intrinsicaly beautiful. Too many collections remind me of the cynic's definition of a curio.

"'A curio,' the cynic said, 'is something that costs ten times what it's worth.'"

Her Bright Idea.

The daughter of a Providence clergyman was reading in her ecclesiastical paper an account of a religious ceremony in a western diocese: "The solemn eucharist was sung by Bishop Weller, with Bishop Grafton pontificating from the throne."

"What does pontificating mean?" she asked her father.

"Have you studied Latin and don't know the meaning of a very simple word?" was the reply.

"Oh, yes, I see, it means he bridged it."—Boston Transcript.

THE KENTUCKIAN WAS PLEASED.

He Secured a Good Half-Section in Central Canada.

It is not only from Kentucky, but from thirty-five to forty different states that there comes the expression of satisfaction from those who have taken up lands in Central Canada as a free homestead or have purchased lands.

Mr. E. K. Bell, of Frankfort, Kentucky, writes to a Canadian government official, and says: "I have just returned from Alberta, overjoyed with my trip. Your literature was very flattering, but not half what I found it. I bought a half section between Calgary and Edmonton, one mile from railroad, near a good town. This is the best country I ever saw or ever expect to see. I will go in the spring and get to work on my place. I think it is the coming country of the world." Some of the papers describe the settling of the Canadian West as "becoming a fever with a great many people. The lure of its golden promises is creeping into their hearts and many are they who are answering the call of that unsettled territory." This paper editorially cautions its readers to exercise care and thought before moving to a distant country. This would be a wise precaution, and is exactly what the Canadian officials ask.

The success of the settler who has made Canada his home for years is the best evidence that can be offered. And of the large number of Americans who have made their homes in Canada, very few have returned. All are satisfied.

WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

Farmer's Institute

The Institute was opened Tuesday morning, February 8 by Mr. Martindale giving a lecture on "Selecting, Storing and Testing Seed Corn." During the lecture he gave the Indiana method of scoring a prize exhibit of corn which is reproduced here, as very few people know exactly how to grade an exhibit of corn. In the grading of an Indiana exhibit of corn there may be 100 points of excellence and they are graded as follows:

The exhibit should contain ten ears.

1. Uniformity of exhibit. 10 points.
2. Shape of ears. 10 points. Should be cylindrical and of full size well toward the tip.
3. Length of ears. 10 points. In this part of Indiana should be 8½ inches long and the circumference ⅓ of length.
4. Color of grain and cob. 10 points. Under this head the speaker said that any exhibit so impure as to show a white cob in a yellow variety or a red cob in a white variety would be barred from competing.
5. Tips of ears. 5 points.
6. Butts of ears. 10 points.
7. Kernel
   (a) Shape. 10 points.
   (b) Indentation. 5 points.
   (c) Uniformity. 10 points.
   Rows of kernels should be straight not less than 16 nor more than 22.
8. Seed condition. 15 points.
9. Proportion of grain to cob. 10 points.

The speaker said for this part of the state the model field of corn should be drilled in rows 3 feet 6 inches apart with a single kernel every 16 inches apart. Morris Widney sang "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." The chairman appointed the committees on location and nomination to report after the noon intermission.

Prof. Arthur Goss was introduced and gave a very comprehensive address on the work done by the experimental station maintained by the state at Purdue University. The Station receives $100,000.00 from the state per annum with which to make their experiments and their subjects included all grains, grasses, fruits and domestic animals, also the preservation of timber. He confined his talk almost exclusively to the increase of grain crops produced by good cultivation, good fertilization with manure or commercial fertilizer. In wheat the field crop had advanced from 13 bushels per acre to 31.3 bushels per acre in 20 years.

Corn had gained 5 bushels per acre in 3 years. All other farm crops and domestic animals had alike responded to care and careful selecting seed corn had advanced in vitality alone from 70 to 95 per cent. The speaker recommended the extensive use of manure and fertilizer, and feeding of all that was grown upon the farm into some kind of live stock because, 1st it brought more money that way and 2nd it preserved the fertility of the soil.

The last lecture of the Institute was on "Good Pasture" by Martindale.

James L. Steward

James L. Steward, son of Harris and Margaret Steward, was born March 16, 1847, and departed this life February 15, 1910. His age being 62 years, 10 months, 29 days. He was born in Concord township, DeKalb County, in which he made his home until the day of his death. He was married to Miss Jennie Holton, the 25th., of February 1877. To this union were born three children, two sons and one daughter, Wm. Hord, who resides in Iowa; Mulford Minor, who is now in the navy, and Nellie J. Abel, who is employed by the Western Union in Tennessee. While residing in Spencerville he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal church, and when he removed to St. Joe he became identified with the M. P. church. He was a kind and loving husband, an indulgent father, and a kind and obliging neighbor. He was well respected by all who knew him. He was a great sufferer for many months, but was patient through all of his suffering and in his last hours on earth he had resigned himself to the will of God. He leaves a loving companion, three children, one brother and three grandchildren besides a host of friends and neighbors to mourn their loss, but we trust that their loss is his eternal gain. The funeral services were held from the home at 10:00 A. M., Thursday. Services conducted by Rev. L. Commer. Elza Kinsey, funeral director Burial Friday morning at the Spencerville cemetery.

When does an unmarried woman change from a young to an old maid? That was the question, and it is one of perennial interest, discussed in a Chicago woman's club the other day. No agreement was reached, but when one speaker declared that at twenty-eight a woman is not yet an old maid, and is "probably better-looking than at any other age," she was heartily applauded by the other women present. It is interesting thus to discover that the members of the club are all about twenty-eight years old.

From Indianapolis comes a report that the township trustees of Indiana are going after the salary proposition with both feet and they declare that when the next legislature meets they are going to be in a different position than they have been in the past. For a great many years the township trustees of Indiana have been trying to get more salary, but usually when the legislatures have convened the economy cry has been raised and they have not met with success. This year they are going after the question in another way. They are going to do the work before the election is held and it is their plan to work for the election of members of the legislature who will listen to their pleas.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Frat House Burns at Bloomington.

Twenty fraternity men were turned out into the worst snowstorm of the winter with nothing but the clothes they wore when the house of the Indiana university chapter of the Phi Gamma Delta was burned to the ground at Bloomington, Ind. The fire department was snowbound and when it reached the fraternity house the fire was so well under way that it could not be checked. The loss is estimated at $12,000. Robert S. Peyton, of Rochester, Ind., was seriously injured when the roof of the porch upon which he had climbed with a hose collapsed.

Timber Thieves In Brown Co. Ind.

Timber thieves in the wilderness of Southern Indiana have been driving away the farmers with fire, according to reports received from Nashville, the seat of Brown county, into which until lately no railroad penetrated. Houses and barns on 18 farms lately have been destroyed. C. H. M. Harbet and his family had to run for their lives from their blazing home. Timber thieves are cutting and hauling walnut and hickory logs by the hundreds. On the edges of thinly settled territory in which the bands of depredators work the farmers, armed with shot guns, patrol the roads at night.

Is Not Mrs. Gunness.

Another attempt to identify a woman as Mrs. Belle Gunness, owner of the Laporte "murder farm," failed when Sheriff Antiss, of Laporte county, Ind., telegraphed from Everett, Wash., "Not Mrs. Gunness." Mrs. Sophia Hopkins, who is living on a ranch near Bellingham, Wash., is the woman whom Sheriff Antiss was called upon to identify. She was declared to be Mrs. Gunness by several amateur detectives, but the Laporte sheriff could find little resemblance to the woman he had known in Laporte.

Young Hoosiers Fight Fatal Duel.

Emmett Owen and Ray Anderson, two young men living near Cuzzo, Dubois county, Indiana, fought a duel with pistols and both were fatally wounded. When the young men met they drew their revolvers and began firing at each other. Owen was shot twice and Anderson once. It is said there has been a secret feud of long standing between the men, both of whom are sons of well-to-do farmers.

N. Y., O. & W. Train Leaves Rails.

While running 80 miles an hour the Chicago limited train, westbound, on the New York, Ontario and Western, jumped from the track in Mulligan's cut, thirteen miles south of Middletown, N. Y. All the passengers were severely shaken up. The cars remained upright, although the first coach was swung across the rails. Ice on the tracks was the cause of the accident.

A Fatal Wreck in Ohio.

An engineer was killed and fifty people more or less injured, seven trainmen seriously, in a head-on collision between the Hocking Valley passenger train No. 80, from Columbus, south bound, and the Hocking pay train, north bound, at Kimberly, three miles south of Wilsonville.

"Bug" Holliday Dead.

James W. ("Bug") Holliday, famous as a batter and outfielder, died after a long illness at his home in Cincinnati, Ohio. Holliday joined the Cincinnati club in 1889 and played left field for ten years. He later became an umpire in the American Association.

Life Terms For Brothers.

Clinton and Allen Glassburn, brothers, aged respectively 22 and 19, were sentenced to life imprisonment at the Michigan prison for the murder of Herman Schaufula on January 24. They confessed their motive was robbery, but they obtained only $1.30.

Morgan Goes to Europe.

J. Pierpont Morgan has sailed on the steamship Cedric for his annual vacation in Europe. The financier said he was going to the Mediterranean and that his trip had no special significance.

Sixteen May Be Lost.

The Danish steamer Cambodia was wrecked near Grimstad. Thirteen of the crew were saved, but it is feared that a small boat containing sixteen others was lost.

Three Hurt In Wabash Wreck.

Three persons were injured in a headon collision of two Wabash passenger trains near Des Moines, Iowa. Engineer William Rucker, of Moberly, Mo., probably will die.

TRADE SAFE IF LEGAL, IS AS TAFT VIEWS IT

President in New York Speech Says Policy Toward Corporations Is "Live and Let Live."

SEES PERIL ONLY IN HYSTERIA

Executive in Vehement Talk Says He Will Safeguard Prosperity and Fufill G. O. P. Pledges.

President Taft, speaking at the Lincoln day celebration of the New York Republican Club, made defense in detail of the policies of his administration. He declared business "hysteria," due to agitation and fear of drastic action against corporations in general, to be unjustified, and throughout his talk pleaded for the sinking of factional differences toward the future of the Republican party and the carrying out of its pledges.

"If the enforcement of the law is not consistent with the present method of carrying on business, then it does not speak well for the present methods of conducting business, and they must be changed to conform to the law," declared the President, and his audience at the banquet tables in the Waldorf-Astoria cheered the utterance. Governor Hughes, who shared the honors of the evening with the President, joined in the applause.

Mr. Taft adhered to his purpose of discussing platform pledges and how they should be kept. It was at the conclusion of a detailed argument as to how the Republican party is redeeming its pledges that he came to a discussion of the anti-trust law and Wall street, on which his utterances had been awaited with the greatest interest. The President declared that the administration would not "foolishly run amuck in business and destroy values and confidences just for the pleasure of doing so." Its policy was "Live and let live."

"No one," he continued, " has a motive as strong as the administration in power to cultivate and strengthen business confidence and prosperity.

"But there was no promise on the part of the Republican party to change the anti-trust law except to strengthen it. Of course the government at Washington can be counted on to enforce the law in the way best calculated to prevent a destruction of public confidence in business, but it must enforce the law."

The President declared there were signs which many construed to indicate that the Republican majority in Congress might be replaced by a Democratic majority. The cause he asserted to be dissensions in the Republican party arising out of differences of opinion in regard to the rules in the House and to the personnel of the leadership in the Senate.

He declared there existed a growing tendency to the assertion of individual opinion and purpose at the expense of party discipline. The movement was toward factionalism and small groups.

All this, Mr. Taft said, should be forgotten in furtherance of the one great aim—party success. To this end, he asserted, a campaign of education was required.

"I am far from saying the Republican party is perfect," declared the President, and then he gave a warning that party insurgents should be punished.

The high cost of living, Mr. Taft asserted, primarily was due to the "increase in the measure of value of gold and, in some measure, to combinations in restraint of trade."

FAMOUS SEA FIGHTER IS DEAD.

Brigadier General Robert Leamy Meade Succumbs to Illness.

Brigadier General Robert Leamy Meade of the United States Marine Corps, retired, died at his home in Lexington the other day after an illness of several months. Gen. Meade was born in Washington, D. C., Dec. 26, 1841. The son of Commodore Richard W. Meade, United States Navy he came of fighting stock. Educated at St. Mary's College, and at the United States Naval Academy, he entered the navy as a midshipman in 1856 and resigned in 1858. Reappointed in 1858, he served continuously until his retirement in 1906.

At the breaking out of the civil war he was assigned to blockade work and commanded a battalion when Norfolk was rescued from the Confederates. In 1863 he commanded a company in New York during the draft riots. In a night assault on Fort Sumter he was captured and made a prisoner of war for fifteen months at Libby and Richmond prisons. After the war he remained in the marine service and was one of the party from the Shenandoah that invaded Korea and captured its capital in the cruise of that vessel between 1865 and 1869 in the waters of India, China, Japan and Korea. At Nagasaki he commanded both the American and the British marines.

In the Spanish war he was fleet marine officer of Admiral Sampson's fleet and led the marines in Cuba. In 1900 he participated in the Chinese expedition and for a time he was in command at the Brooklyn navy yard. For his services at Tientsin, China, he received a medal from Congress.

SENTENCE CALLED TOO SEVERE.

Found Guilty in Navy Case, but Penalty Is Light.

Action was taken by the Navy Department the other day on the recommendations of the court martial in the cases of Paymaster George P. Auld, U. S. N., and Passed Assistant Surgeon A. H. Robnett, U. S. N., and in both cases the department held the sentence of the court too severe, although Paymaster Auld and Surgeon Robnett were sentenced only to loss of five numbers. Paymaster Auld's sentence was entirely remitted by the Navy Department and he is ordered restored to duty. Passed Assistant Surgeon Robnett had his sentence mitigated to loss of two numbers. It was made known to-day that the Navy Department found much provocation for the assault on Dr. Cowles by Paymaster Auld on the night of the navy hop on Dec. 11.

FEARS LAW; LEAVES KIN TO DIE

Cleveland Man Hunts Coroner While Father-in-Law Hangs, Alive.

A misconception of American law on the part of Otto Pich gave John Zahour, his father-in-law, ten minutes extra in which to die. Pich found the old man hanging in the pantry of his home in Cleveland. He was still alive, but Pich says he believed him dead. Pich had heard that it was illegal for anyone but the coroner to disturb a hanging man, and he left at once in search of somebody who could summon that official. Meeting a policeman he explained the case to him. The policeman made a quick run for the Zahour home and succeeded in cutting the father-in-law down before life was extinct. Zahour died in an ambulance, however, on the way to a hospital.

The first Canadian conservation conference, which came to an end in Ottawa recently, has developed a sentiment in favor of the prohibition of all pulp wood export. This may have a serious effect on the situation now existing between the United States and Canada.

With the giving of bail of the five men caught in the dragnet of the latest graft probe, Pittsburg has settled back to wait for her municipal government to again be dragged forth and hear evidence charging multi-millionaire bank officials with bribery, city councilmen selling out the city and see the strange intermingling of her local banking business with politics.

There is a proposal in London, Eng., to amalgamate three important tube railways, namely, the Baker Street & Waterloo, the Charing Cross & Hampstead and the Great Northern & Picadilly lines. The total capital will be $80,000,000, of which $47,350,000 is to be in ordinary stock, $21,000,000 in debentures and the balance in preference shares. The name of the new company will be the London Electric Railway.

SCARCITY CAUSE OF HIGH MEAT PRICES

Government Report Shows Live Stock Receipts of 1909 Smallest Since 1904.

GREATEST DECLINE IN HOGS

Last Year's Aggregate Meat Shipments from Chicago Is the Lowest in Five Years.

One contributing cause to the high price of meat, according to a report of the Department of Commerce and Labor, is the fact that live stock receipts for the year 1909 at seven leading interior markets of the United States were the lowest since 1904. The live stock receipts for the year 1909 in these markets aggregated 39,545,725 head. The receipts of hogs for the last year fell off particularly. For each of the four years previous to 1909 the hog receipts had been in excess of 19,000,000 head, totaling more than 22,000,000 in 1908, falling to 18,834,641 last year.

Cattle receipts for 1909 in these markets, 9,189,312, while comparing favorably with those of the previous year, fell below the totals for the three years before 1908. Sheep fell below those in 1905 to 1907, but compared favorably with 1908. Receipts of hogs at the Chicago market for 1909 show a decrease of 1,627,074, as compared with the year before, or a decline of 19 per cent, receipts at Kansas City decreased 17 per cent, receipts at Omaha 12 per cent, at St. Joseph 28 per cent, while the decline at St. Louis was only 4 per cent.

While the total number of cattle received at these seven principal markets was larger than the year before, the 1909 cattle receipts at Chicago, 2,929,805 head, fell below the 3,000,000 mark for the first time since 1902.

The annual aggregate shipments of packing house products from Chicago, 2,151,663,713 pounds, were below those reported for any of the previous five years, says the report. All the items in the grand total with the exception of pickled beef and pork show large declines, as compared with the figures for the previous years.

The report also shows that grain receipts at fifteen of the principal markets during 1909, 744,624,068 bushels, were lower than for any year since 1904.

BURN UP AS MUCH AS BUILD.

Figures Lead Brick Men to Launch "Safe and Sane" Campaign.

Building brick manufacturers, members of the National Brick Manufacturers' Association, have formed an organization to move for the construction of "safe and sane" buildings. Statements and figures showing that the people of the United States are burning up as many buildings as they construct each year brought about formation of the under organization.

Cures All Pneumonia.

Six cases of pneumonia, ordinarily fatal, were cured by means of inoculation with a vaccine of killed pneumococci, it is announced by Dr. Henry A. Craig. He is assistant physician at the Sailors' Sung Harbor Hospital, New Brighton, Staten Island.

THEODORE, JR., TO WED.

Oldest Son of Former President Engaged to Miss Eleanor Alexander.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., oldest son of the former President of the United States, has won the hand of Miss Eleanor Butler Alexander, daughter of Mrs. Henry Addison Alexander of 42 West Forty-seventh street, New York. Their betrothal was announced by the mother of the bride-to-be. The wedding, which is to be celebrated on an elaborate scale, will be deferred until the arrival in America of the bridegroom's father next June.

The announcement came as a surprise to even the close friends of the couple, for recently young Mr. Roosevelt has been attending strictly to business and so he has had small opportunity for those social excursions in which he might meet the young lady.

"Teddy Junior," as his friends call him, is slightly more than 22 years of age. Since he was graduated from Harvard in 1908, taking the four years' course in three and graduating with high standing, he has been at work in the factories of the Hartford Carpet Company at Thompsonville, Conn., just outside the State capital. He has been thorough and diligent in his work and his trips to New York have been few and far between.

BLAZE ROUTS HOTEL GUESTS.

Three Seriously Hurt Leaping from Windows in Washington.

Fire in the Hotel Harris near the Union station in Washington, at 2 o'clock in the morning threw the hundred guests into a panic. Three of them, Orville A. Henry of Berwick, Pa., and his wife, and child, leaped from a third story window. They are in the Casualty hospital seriously injured. The origin of the fire is unknown.

PLANS FOR CANADIAN NAVY.

New Naval College, to Be Built, Will Be Located at Halifax.

The new naval college, which is to be built in connection with the Canadian government's navy, will be located at Halifax, as the Atlantic station of the two new Bristol cruisers, the six destroyers and the cruiser Niobe, which is to be purchased at a cost of $2,000,000.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

Charles Guerney, of Red Cloud, Neb., sold $9,240 worth of cattle in one day. He says he fattened a large herd of cattle on alfalfa, sold $300 worth of hay and has 500 tons left.

Carl J. Calvin, Lancaster, who was graduated from the University of Wisconsin department of civil engineering in '06, has been made chief engineer of the Consumers' Iron Mining Co., of Virginia.

A lad near Waverly, Mo., sold $280 worth of sheep, the product of one ewe lamb given him several years ago. He sold his wool to buy another ewe, sold the buck lambs, bought more ewes and developed a large flock.

John Kurtz, a farmer in Colorado, with a shotgun and two dogs stood off 100 men and teams of the railroad grading outfit which attempted to go through his crops without paying for them. He forced the railroad company to settle.

The principal speaker at the recent annual meeting of the Moorhead, Minn., Commercial Club was President Huntoon, of the First National Bank, who made a strong plea for the club to get busy after cars to move the potato crop. He said that no less than 1,300 refrigerator cars would be needed to move the crop from that vicinity. He said upon the crop being sent East it would mean $260,000 to be distributed in the vicinity.

ROB AN ILLINOIS BANK OF $8,500 AND ESCAPE

Burglars Blow Safe in Citizens' National at Chatsworth, Ill., and Steal Cash.

BIND AND GAG TWO MEN.

Explosions Ruin Structure, but Wake No Citizens—Bandits Flee in a Buggy.

The Citizens' National bank of Chatsworth, Ill., was entered early the other day by burglars, who fled with $8,500 after blowing open the safe with heavy charges of nitroglycerin.

Five unmasked men approached the night policeman near the pumping plant of the water works of Chatsworth soon after midnight, engaged him in conversation, then overpowered, bound and gagged him. Afterward they took him to a garage near the Citizens' bank, where they left him under guard. A baker employed in a nearby bakery was also bound, gagged and placed under guard in the garage.

The watchman and baker were the only residents awake in the business section at the time. After securing these men four of the robbers took a number of tools from the garage, went to the bank and began working with deliberation to get the money. They blew the large outer door off the safe, then the inner door. The first explosion wrecked the interior of the bank. After blowing open the second door the burglars helped themselves to the money inside. They took $6,500 in paper money and $2,000 in silver.

Completing their work in the bank, the four men went back to the garage and carried the baker to the bank and laid him on the floor. One of their number then drove up in a carriage, the rest of the party entered the vehicle and all departed.

No one in the village heard the explosions. The burglary was not discovered by the authorities until 6:00 a. m. The bank carried $5,000 in burglary insurance. The night policeman, William Cahill, and the baker, Albert Kerber, were found half dead as the result of being bound and gagged. Both revived, however, soon after their rescuers removed the bonds. The robbers were described by Cahill as desperate looking. One was tall and two were short and heavy set.

TRAIN ROBBER PLEADS GUILTY.

Implicates One Suspect and Exonerates Two in Confession.

Following his confession that he took part in the robbery of a Missouri Pacific train near Eureka, Mo., on the night of Jan. 21, George Ebeling pleaded guilty in St. Louis to a charge of robbing the mails. W. W. Lowe is implicated by Ebeling's confession, as also are his brother, James Lowe and S. W. Emerson. The Lowes and Emerson deny the charges. Ebeling in his confession to Postoffice Inspector Dickson said James Lowe and Emerson had no part in the holdup and robbery. W. W. Lowe, according to Ebeling, ran the locomotive after the engineer and fireman were forced to leave their posts. Ebeling said he and Lowe walked to St. Louis, a distance of thirty miles, after the robbery.

DEATH LAID TO WITCHCRAFT.

Parents Never Ill, but 17 Out of 20 Children Die Queerly.

That seventeen of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Carl's children died as the result of witchcraft was stated by the parents in Reading, Pa. A daughter, 28 years of age, was buried a few days ago. The majority of the children died when quite young. The parents have never been ill a single day, while their children wasted almost to skeletons. Several, physicians said, were afflicted with marasmus, a wasting of the flesh without any fever or apparent disease, while "pow wow" doctors declared the little ones were bewitched by an old woman.

PARDON PUTS HIM IN GOOD JOB.

Ohio Convict Released So He Can Accept Lucrative Position.

Governor Harmon of Ohio has pardoned Richard Jenkins, a prisoner paroled some time ago from the penitentiary, so he could leave the State and accept a lucrative position in West Virginia. Jenkins is now foreman in a tin plate mill at Uhrichsville, and a paroled prisoner cannot leave the State. Jenkins was in company with another man who killed a man in a saloon row at East Liverpool and got a ten-year sentence.

Singer Buys Western Land.

Mme. Schumann-Heink has purchased 500 acres of San Diego County, California, land for $20,000. The property is in the El Cajon valley and includes lemon and orange ranches. The singer will build a home for her children on the property.

Rearraigned on Murder Charge.

Mrs. Grace Ledbeter, acquitted of first degree murder of her husband, H. J. Ledbeter, was again arraigned in Mankato, Minn., on an indictment charging her with murder in the second degree.

CHAPTER XI.

"Leave that to me," I rejoined. Then I remembered the portmanteau and the promise that it should be sent hither. Here was a further complication, and I must needs beg a boon of her. "A black boy will bring my portmanteau in the morning. I have a decent desire to be hanged in clean clothing; may I beg you to——"

She make a quick little gesture of impatience; at the further complication, or at my boldness in asking, I knew not which. But her whispered reply was of assent, and then she turned to leave me.

At that a sudden fierce desire to know why she had thus befriended me came to throttle prudence.

"One more word before you go, Mistress Margery. Will you tell me why you have done this for the man who can serve you only by thrusting his neck into the hangman's noose?"

She was silent for a little space, and I knew not what emotion it was that moved her to turn away and cover her face with her hands. But when she spoke her voice was low and tremulous with pent-up anger, as I thought.

"Truly, Captain Ireton, you have done a thing to make me hate you—and myself, as well. But I may not forget my duty, sir."

And with this cruel word she was gone.

You are not to suppose that the hazards of this hiding place in my Lord Cornwallis' headquarters would keep me from sleeping well and soundly. One of the things a soldier learns soonest is to take his rest when and as he can; and after peering curiously into the nooks and corners of my garret to make sure I was alone, I flung myself asprawl on the broad settle and was dropping off into forgetfulness when I heard a tapping at the wainscot.

Groping my way cautiously to the secret door, I crouched and listened. All was silent save for the intermittent clamor of the wassailers in the room beneath. After waiting a full minute I opened the door and looked without. The high dormer window in the end of the corridor made the darkness something less than visible, and I could see that the passage was empty. But on the floor at my feet was my supper; a roasted fowl on a server, hot from the spit, with maize bread and garnishings fit for an epicure.

I tumbled out of my settle-bed in the morning and made for the door. But some one had been before me, entering whilst I slept. On a broken chair were a basin and ewer, with soap and towels; beside the chair was my portmanteau; and on a deal box, neatly covered with a linen cloth, was my breakfast.

Having my Austrian uniform, I was now ready to move in that venture outlined in part to Colonel Davie; but to set my plan in action I must first get free of the house unseen by my Lord or any of his suite. How to do this unaided I could not determine; and, since any fresh blundering would surely breed new trouble for Margery, I was forced to wait for her return.

I made sure she would come, if only to be the sooner quit of me; and so she did, tapping at the wainscot door while I was dallying with the breakfast leavings. 'Twas worth something to see her start of surprise when I opened to her; but she was far too true a lady to be one thing to the unwashed vagabond and another to the gentleman-clad. I gave her good morning, and was beginning in some formal fashion to thank her for her thoughtful care, when she cut me short.

"'Tis my bounden duty, sir," she said, twanging once again upon that frayed string. "You are my guest and my—husband; though I would you were neither."

"As once before, I am your poor misfortunate pensioner; but this time you are not less willing to give them than I am to receive."

She gave me a look that I could not fathom, and for a flitting instant there was a mocking smile a-lurk at the back of the beautiful eyes. Then she went straight to the subject-matter of her errand, brushing aside the small passage at arms as if it had not been.

"You are in a most perilous situation, Captain Ireton; do you know it? News of your presence in Charlotte has got abroad, and at this very moment Tarleton's dragoons are making a house-to-house search for you. There are no doors unwatched. You must stay here till nightfall."

"Nay, that I will not. Will you tell me who it was set them on?"

"'Twas a man you hate—and who hates you heartily in return. He saw you come here last night; he knows you are here now—or guesses it. 'Tis Owen Pengarvin."

"If he knows I am here, why does he let them search elsewhere?"

"He has reasons of his own; reasons of—of——" but instead of telling me what they were she broke off to say: "But now you know why all the doors of this house are under guard."

"Truly," said I; and therewith I fell to pacing up and down the narrow clear-way in the garret, striving to see how I might come off with nothing worse than the loss of my burdensome life. I paused to ask if my Lord Cornwallis were yet in the house.

"He is writing letters in his bedroom," was her answer.

"If you will show me the way thither I shall be your poor debtor by that much more."

"I will not—unless you first tell me what you mean to do. You are going to give yourself up," she said; and when I would not deny it, she darted before me and set her back against the wainscot door. "'Tis folly, folly! I say you shall not go!"

I took her gently in my arms, set her aside, and stepped out into the corridor. I looked for nothing less than a volcano-burst of righteous indignation to pay me out for this piece of tyranny. But now my lady showed me how little a man man know of a woman's moods.

"You need not be so masterful rough with me," she said, with a pouting of the sweet lips that set me back upon that thought of the wayward child wanting to be kissed. "If you say I must, I am in duty bound to show you the way." And so she led on and I followed, in a deeper maze than any she had ever set me in.

Arrived at a pair of doors in the main passage, she showed me the one that opened to my Lord's bed-chamber and ran away; ran with her hands to her face as if to shut out a sight which would not bear looking upon.

I turned my back stiffly upon this newer wonder, pulled myself together and rapped on the door. A voice within bade me enter; the door opened under my hand and I stood in the presence of the man who, as I made no doubt, would shortly summon his guards and have me out to my rope and tree. My Lord was busy at his writing-desk when I entered; but when he looked up I saw the light of instant recognition in his eye. Never, I think, did another prisoner at the bar strive harder to read his sentence in his judge's eyes than I did in that moment of suspense.

"Ah, Captain Ireton; 'tis you, is it? We are well met, at last. They told me you were gone to join the rebels, did they not?"

Here was an opening for a bold man, and in a flash I came to the right-about, choked down the defiance I had meant to hurl at him, and took quick counsel of cool audacity.

"Indeed, my Lord, I know not what they have told you. In times past, the king had no truer soldier than I; and when I came across seas 'twas not to fight against him. But that I have not joined the rebels is no fault of certain of your Lordship's officers."

"Say you so? But how is this? Surely I am not mistaken. I could be certain Colonel Tarleton reported your taking as a spy, and his trying of you. And was there not something about a rescue at the last moment by a band of these border bravos? But stay; let us have the colonel's story at first hands. Have the goodness to ring the bell for me, will you, Captain?"

The crisis was come. A pull at the bell-cord would summon the guard, and the guard would be sent after Colonel Tarleton. Well, said the demon Despair, 'tis time you were gone to make room for Richard Jennifer; and I laid a hand upon the tasseled rope. But when I would have rung, all the man-pride, of race and of soldier training, rose up to bid me fight for space to strike one good blow in freedom's cause by way of leave-taking.

So, as it had been an afterthought, I said: "A word further with you first, my Lord, and then, if you please, I will call the guard. All you remember is true, save as to the principal fact. So far from being a spy in intent, or even a partizan of either side, I was at the time but newly come into the province, knowing little of the cause of quarrel and caring still less. But Captain Falconnet and Colonel Tarleton did their earnest best to make a rebel of me out of hand."

"Ah? But the proof of all this, Captain Ireton."

"The best I can offer is the present fact of my coming to place myself at your Lordship's disposal, being moved thereto by your Lordship's own desire expressed in an order sent some weeks since to Sir Francis Falconnet."

"So?—then you knew of that order?"

"Captain Falconnet showed it to me after I was condemned and the firing squad was drawn up to snuff me out."

My Lord Charles gave me the courtier smile that so endeared him to his soldiers—he was well-loved of his men—and bade me sit.

"The plot thickens, as Mr. Richardson would say. Let me have your story, Captain Ireton. I would rejoice to know why Captain Sir Francis Falconnet saw fit to disobey his orders."

I was clear of the lee shore and the breakers at last, but I was fain to believe that not Michiavelli himself could hope to weather the storm in the open. How much or how little did Lord Cornwallis remember of Colonel Tarleton's report? How explicit had that report been?—was there any mention in it of my eavesdropping at the conference between Captain John Stuart and the baronet; of my attempt to warp the over-mountain men against the Indian-arming? Could I hope to tell his Lordship a tale so near the truth as to be unassailable by Tarleton and his officers, by Gilbert Stair and the spiteful little pettifogger, and yet so deftly garbled as to keep my neck out of the halter for the time being?

All these questions thronged upon me as a mob to pull cool reason from her seat, and I could only play the part of the trapped rat and snap back at them. Yet my Lord Cornwallis was waiting for his answer, and a single moment's hesitation might breed suspicion.

You must forgive me, my dears, if I confess it beyond me to set down here in measured words the tale I told his Lordship. A lie is a lie, be it told in never so good a cause; a thing deplorable and not to be gloxed over or boasted of after the fact. So I beg you to let these quibblings to which I was driven rest in oblivion, figuring to yourselves that I used all the truth I dared, and that I strove through it all not wholly to sink the gentleman and the man of honor in the spy.

'Twas but a bridge of glass when all was said; a bridge that carried me safely over for the moment into my Lord's confidence, yet one which a pebble flung by any one of a dozen hands might shiver in the dropping of an eyelid.

"Truly, you have had a most romantic experience," said his Lordship, when I had made an end. Then he lay back in his chair and laughed till the stout body of him shook again. "And all about a little wench of the provincials. But all this was in the early summer, you say; where have you been since?"

Here was a chance for more romancing, this time of a sort less dangerous. So I drew breath and plunged again, telling how I had been carried off by my captor-rescuers; how I had fallen into the hands of the Indians—not all of whom, I would remind his Lordship, were friendly to the king; and lastly how I had but lately escaped from the mountain fastnesses back of Major Ferguson's camp at Gilbert Town. At this point my Lord interrupted the tale-telling.

"So you know of the major and his doings? I would you had brought me late news of him. 'Tis a week since his last courier reached us."

This was the moment for the playing of my trump card—the only one I held. I rose, bowed, took from my pocket that other letter given me by Colonel Davie and handed it to his Lordship. 'Twas Major Ferguson's last report, intercepted by one of Davie's vigilant scouting parties.

"Ah!" said my Lord; and I strolled to the window whilst he read the letter.

When I turned to front him again he was all affability; and I knew I was safe—for the time, at least.

"The major commends you highly as a good man and a true, Captain Ireton," he said, and truly the letter did contain a warm-hearted commendation of "the bearer," whose name, for safety's sake, was omitted; and not only this, but the writer desired to have his man back again. Then my Lord added: "You are here to take your old service again, I assume?"

I hesitated. There be things that even a spy may balk at; and the taking of the oath of allegiance to the other side I conceived to be one of them. So I said:

"I have worn many uniforms since I doffed that of King George, my Lord, and——"

He laughed cheerily. "'But me no buts,' Captain Ireton; once an Englishman, always an Englishman, you know. I shall assign you to duty in my own family."

At this I made a bold stroke. "Let it be then as an officer of her service, and your Lordship's guest for the time. Believe me, it is thus I may best serve your—ah—the cause."

"As how?" he would ask.

I smiled and touched the braided jacket of my hussar uniform.

"As an Austrian officer on a tour of observation in the campaign I may go and come where others may not, and see and hear things which your Lordship may wish to know. Does your Lordship take me?"

He laughed and rose and clapped me on the shoulder.

"You may call the guard now, Captain."

"It is your Lordship's meaning that I should be quartered here?—in this house?" I gasped.

"And why not? Ah, my good Captain of Hussars, I have made you my honorary aide-de-camp and a member of my family so that I may keep an eye on you."

He said it with a laugh and another hearty hand-clap on my shoulder, and I would fain take it for a jest. Yet there be playful gibes that hint at gibbets; and I may confess to you here, my dears, that I left my Lord's presence with the conviction that my acquittal was but a reprieve conditioned upon the best of future good behavior. So it took another turn of the audacity screw to tune me up for the battle royal with Gilbert Stair and the pettifogger, Owen Pengarvin.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Mrs. Laura Myers sold to William Knecht, of Glenwood, a hog weighing 620 pounds at $8.50 a hundred, a total of $52.70. It was of Poland China stock.

At a conference between Commander Somers and the local committee, it was decided to hold the State G. A. R. encampment in Terre Haute May 25 to 27.

Edward Williams, of Laporte, age 61, a farm laborer, employed by E. D. Hook, fell form a hay mow and received injuries which caused his death. He leaves a widow and four children.

Ethel McCaskell, a pretty circus girl, who was arrested at Evansville several weeks ago, charged with having violated the immigration laws when she entered this country, was sent to Vancouver, B. C.

James E. Whitaker, of Nashville, is the owner of a cow, that has puzzled all the stockbuyers and veterinary surgeons in the vicinity. In five months the hoofs of the cow have grown until they are fourteen inches in length. The cow is apparently in good health and is able to walk around.

Arthur Spafford, of Hammond, saw his nineteen-year-old son, Arthur Spafford, Jr., an electrician, fall from a signal tower of the Chicago & Northwetsern railway at Evanston, Ill. The young man suffered a fractured skull and died at St. Francis hospital without regaining consciousness. Spafford decided to visit his son and arrived just in time to see him fall.

The best oil well in the history of the local field was drilled in recently by Michael Murphy & Co., on the John Clifford farm near Oakland City. The well has over sixty feet of sand, fifty-two of which is oil-bearing and the other gas. The well is estimated to make a daily production of more than five hundred barrels. It makes a large block of land valuable from the producer's standpoint.

South Bend authorities have begun a crusade in behalf of pure milk and pure butter. John T. Willett, city food inspector, has received instructions from the city health department to go after dealers hot and heavy. Dr. J. B. Berteling, secretary of the board, in an interview said that bad butter is no better than oleomargarine and that if good butter can not be had the only recourse is the use of oleo.

Acid and cereals caused a threatening blaze, damaging a freight car on the Indiana Union Traction line after the car was wrecked when brakes failed to work in the North Main street grade in Anderson. The freight car, heavily loaded, toppled over on a sharp curve, overturning several carboys of acid and cases of cereals. The wreckage then caught fire. None was injured. The loss is estimated at $2,000.

Within a short time the board of public works of Fort Wayne will legally advertise for bidders upon the city's part of the work of elevating the tracks of the Pennsylvania and the Wabash railroads through Fort Wayne. It is expected that actual work on the separation of the grades will be begun by April 1. The Wabash is preparing to erect temporary stations at Broadway, nearly a mile from the present stations of that road.

The little town of Roanoke, in Huntington county, fifteen miles southwest of Fort Wayne, is now electrically lighted by current supplied from the Fort Wayne power station of the Fort Wayne & Wabash Valley Traction Company. This is the first step in extensive development of this kind the company is expected to make. Early in the new year it purchased a private eelctric lighting plant at Delphi. Within a short time this will be dismantled, and current for the Carroll county capital will be supplied from power stations at Fort Wayne and Lafayette.

A mail box on rural route No. 3, out of Greenville, has been robbed of a number of letters in the last few days, and the last time the box was looted the thieves were caught in the act, a pair of English sparrows being the culprits. When the letters first began to disappear it was thought some person was getting them, but the mystery deepened when the letters were found unopened in a fence corner nearby. It was decided to watch the box from a distance and the owner was rewarded for his trouble. He saw the sparrows fly to the box and work their way through the opening with a letter and worked away until they got it out, after which one of the birds flew to the fence corner with it. After they had repeated the operation several times they were driven away. It is believed the birds had selected the box in which to build a nest and for this purpose were removing its contents.

While carrying a mattress from a house in Seymour formerly occupied by the late Mrs. Jennie Boughman, who was supposed to be penniless at the time of her death, a roll of bills amounting to $550 was found.

Philip Pettiford, a grocer at Washington and Twenty-seventh streets, Marion, was held up and robbed at the point of revolvers in the hands of two unknown boy bandits. Pettiford surrendered a canvas sack containing $50 that he carried in his pocket.

Wallace Hackleman, a farmer, living four miles southeast of Knightstown, escaped injury when his buggy was struck by a fast train on the Pennsylvania railroad near that city. The buggy was demolished but Hackleman was unharmed.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Anderson, of New Waverly, Cass county, is ill with African fever. The parents have been engaged in misionary work in Africa for several years, and only recently returned home. The little girl was ill before leaving Africa and is now in a sanitarium in Logansport.

Thomas Rider, aged 80, whose home was fifteen miles southeast of Washington, hanged himself with a piece of binder twine. He had been in a despondent mood for several days. He was missed from the home of his son and a search revealed his body hanging from a rafter in a shed on the farm. Coroner Holder was called to hold an inquest.

Fire destroyed a two-story house in Brookville, a suburb of Washington. Alfred Meads, a young farmer, was seriously injured while fighting the fire. He was on top of a ladder pouring water on an adjoining house, lost his balance and fell twenty-five feet, striking the frozen ground on his back. He will recover. The loss by fire will reach $2,000.

Dr. L. H. Wirt, a young dentist of Muncie, has departed for Bombay, India, in response to the call of the British government for English and American dentists, to care for the teeth of persons of those nationalities in that city. The government guarantees a good salary and pays the expenses of each dentist who goes there, provided he agrees to remain there for a period of three years.

Longcliffe officials deny the story published under a Columbus date line, to the effect that Dr. Max C. Hawley, physician, and Miss Josie Quinn, nurse at the Northern Indiana Hospital for the Insane, were forced to leave the institution because they married. It is said that the newlyweds voluntarily resigned, and it is denied that there is any rule in effect which prohibits married couples from working at the institution.

Renwick E. Crockett, chief engineer at the Jeffersonville reformatory for the last three years, will sever his connection with the institution on the first of March, it being desired, it is stated, to employ a lower priced man. Mr. Crockett is a skilled engineer. He is nearly the last of the Carroll county employes at the institution, of whom there were several, among others W. H. Whittaker, general superintendent, and M. M. Barnard, assistant superintendent, who were both formerly from Delphi.

An oil well shooter had an exciting experience near Oakland when he attempted to ford a flooded stream with a wagon loaded with eighty quarts of nitro-glycerin. The bridge gave way under the horses, throwing them down, and for several minutes it seemed impossible to keep the wagon from overturning with its deadly load. The shooter stayed with his wagon and called lustily for help. Teamsters working nearby came to his assistance. They did not know until it was all over that the wagon contained nitro-glycerin.

The cause of the present high cost of living was discussed by Professor J. H. Skinner, of Purdue University, before the Fayette County Farmers' Institute. Professor Skinner says the trouble is with the farmers, who have not been raising enough meat, either in point of quantity or quality. "If farmers will have all the feed of all kinds grown on their farms consumed by live stock of good breed," said he, "there would never be a shortage of meats." He strongly advocated the feeding of more stock in preference to the selling of grain, hay and the like.

As a result of a conference between the city council and the local board of health at Columbus, City Attorney Cooper will be instructed to prepare some new ordinances to safeguard the health of the residents of Columbus. At the conference sanitary officer Riddle reported that the local street cars were in a bad sanitary condition and that the street car barn was also unsanitary. This report resulted in instructions to prepare an ordinance requiring street cars and, in fact, all passenger-carrying vehicles, to be cleaned every day. The practice of sweeping business houses from rear to front and then dumping the dust into the gutter is going to be stopped by ordinance, and the practice of sweeping the sidewalks and raising a dust will be stopped. A more sanitary method of cleaning the paved streets than by scraping is to be adopted. The board of health has also announced its intention to rigidly enforce the pure food laws.

Due to the prevalence of diphtheria, the public schools have been ordered closed at Decker. One death resulted from the disease and four new cases have developed.

John E. Robbins, a stock buyer, was injured by being gored by an infuriated bull, which he was trying to drive to Thorntown. When the animal attacked him Robbins attempted to escape, but before he could save himself the bull crushed him about the lower limbs. His condition is serious.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"The usual tests of trade activity indicate that favorable conditions prevail. Commercial defaults still show largely in number, but the record includes none of especial significance as to liabilities.

"The volume of solvent payments through the banks compares favorably with that of a year ago, testifying to sustained recovery in the leading industries, but the aggregate of new demands for finished factory products is lower than recently noted and the markets for iron and steel are in a waiting attitude pending the action of heavy consumers. Future requirements are known to be unusually large and the present lull in commitments is regarded as temporary. Weather conditions have favored most branches of production and distribution and testimony to improvement is seen in the steadily rising freight tonnage and railroad earnings.

"Movements of hides, leather and lumber disclose seasonable aggregates and the markets for raw materials, general merchandise, furniture and automobiles are stimulated by an enormous attendance of buyers.

"Bank clearings, $259,067,099, are 25.1 per cent over those of the corresponding week of five business days in 1909, and compare with $201,416,856 in 1908.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number 33, as against 35 last week, 23 in 1909 and 33 in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 7, as against 7 last week, 6 in 1909 and 16 in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade still maintains the quiet undertone previously noted, and not unusual, by the way, at this season of the year, when buyers are gathering at the leading markets in preparation for the opening of the spring campaign.

Reports of buyers being numerous but of buying being conservative come largely from the leading northern and central western markets. Fears of a coal strike in the bituminous regions have led to heavy buying by railroads and manufacturers.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Feb. 10 were 249, as against 232 last week, 211 in the like week of of 1909, 326 in 1908, 204 in 1907 and 208 in 1906. Eleanor Robson, the popular actress, is to marry millionaire Belmont. Her departure from the stage reminds us that Mary Anderson, perhaps the most distinguished of American actresses, left the stage in the zenith of her fame, under similar circumstances a quarter of a century ago. How much better it is for actresses and all women to be, rather than to seem. All the world is a stage, but the domestic stage and a simple life for the woman who can appreciate it?

United States army officers have started to Panama to select sites for fortifications for the defense of the Panama Canal. The British Government has taken every means to fortify the Suez Canal. Besides local protection it is fortified many hundred miles west by Gibraltar and many miles southeast at the entrance to the Red Sea at Aden. Our fortifications really begin at Porto Rico and at ports in Cuba retained by us after the Spanish war, but fortifications commanding the approaches to the Canal on both the Pacific and Atlantic sides will be established and maintained.

The laying hen develops a great appetite and an enormous thirst.

Owner of the coop: 'Who's in there? Rastus: "Aint nobody in here, 'ceppin' us chickens."

Lack of a constant supply of clean, pure, fresh water before the fowls means defeat in the end.

Egg-shells are largely lime. The hens can't make good shells unless you furnish plenty of lime.

A feed of finely-chopped onions, once a week, is a tonic that helps to keep broilers lively and healthy.

Keeping too many fowls in a pen with an insufficient amount of floor space is a pitfall to be avoided.

Lice which sap the life blood and undermine the flock furnish a pitfall into which far too many stumble.

Deal pretty sparingly with red pepper as a spice for poultry. It is sharp stuff. Better warm your chicks up some other way than by feeding it.

You can not feed hens that lay colored eggs so that they will lay white ones. If you want white eggs get the kind of hens that lay them.

The white-feathered broilers always have the more attractive appearance in market, as the pin-feathers do not show as they do on dark-plumaged birds.

A nest egg makes a nest more attractive to most hens, especially of the smaller breeds. We like the china eggs. An egg eater will pick at them for a little bit and give it up as a bad job.

Ice-cold water can not help chilling the hens. It must be warmed up somehow, and that takes vitality. Save the hen's strength of body by warming the water on the kitchen stove. You can do it cheaper than the hen can.

Here is a new plan for killing mites on poultry roosts: Take two pieces to make a roost seven-eighths inch thick and two inches wide; bevel the edges a little, and nail together, not too close, and set up on edge. The mites will all congregate in the seam between the two pieces. Pour kerosene in the groove formed by the bevel on top, and you have them dead.

Many who keep poultry overlook the importance of grit. Lack of grit means poor digestion and few eggs. A load of gravel near the chickens' home would improve the health and increase the egg yield on many a farm. I know it is claimed that the grit of commerce is the best, but the gravel is good enough grinding material. If you have never tried it you will be surprised how fast it will disappear when placed in a box where the hens can help themselves.

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

The Convictions of a Convert.

Written Expressly for the Spencerville People

The greatness of this age in the world's history has been so often written upon, spoken upon and meditated upon that when we hear a remark commenting on its greatness it has no telling effect either to awaken us to the realization of what part we are of it or what these great blessings, spiritual or material means. One reason for our non-surprise at the great advancement of civilization and Christianity can probably be attributed to the fact that these changes have crept slowly on us without our notice. This is especially true in the spiritial sence and today America is almost the home of "Those that sleep" as well as the home of the free and the brave. Whether America will sleep long or whether she will awake is a question to be solved. Notwithstanding the fact that little can be said if the future indications point to a great world wide everlasting, spiritial and moral series of reforms. During the nearly two thousand years of the history of the Christian church from its feeble beginning on up to its present state of magnitude and prospective futures there has never been a period in its history when so many nations, both wholly and partially civilized have so rapidly and simultaneously shown signs of great spiritial uplifting as at this present time. The present progress of the church, as before stated, has seemingly made but little progress, probably because we see so little of its growth at a time and that the spiritial things are not always obvious to the eyes of man. Spiritial things are spiritially concerned. Taking history at a glance it tells us that the world is better now than ever.

In past ages the church has been extending its roots into the hearts and minds of the great men of the nations and has formed a solid trunk from which many branches have sprung known as our different denominations.

Today the church is in the state of budding. The signs of the times seem to indicate a great universal spiritual awakening. This belief can be proved by the fact that the greatest movement in the world's history is being put in motion namely, "The evangelization of the world in this generation." Can and will it be done? Listen! God gave you and I the word CAN and taught us its meaning, but the word WILL is of our own make. How and where is this awakening showing itself? In all ways and every place.

China with a population of one fourth the entire population of the world and with its hundreds and thousands of educational institutions and educated men, have of late swung wide their gates to American missionaries, thus showing their great desire for the gospel of Christ. The natives of India are coming to our missionaries by hundreds and thousands asking for the story of Christ. In Brazil, S. A. the crowds which gathered to see the representatives of Christ from America have exceeded all previous gatherings, including the great festivals that have been given in honor of the kings and queens, etc. The people every where want to know of God. The islands of the seas, many of which are christianized are sending out missionaries in obedience to the command "Freely ye have received, freely give. Many other instances might be given of the great letting go of Paganism and grappling after christianism, but the limited space will not permit. When half civilized people can see the advantage of being a christian it certainly ought to be time for a civilized country like America to awake from its sleepy erroneous condition. Never the less the light is breaking through. In the past several years, several different companies of missionary inspired men have been touring the United States, holding conventions in the principal cities, organizing mission classes everywhere, exhorting the churches to livelier actions and explaning the probabilities of the success of the movement, of the evangelization in this generation. And they have succeeded wonderfully in placing the problem systematically and effectually before the people of the various denominations. Many wealthy men have pledged themselves to contribute to the cause and many men are giving their lives to go among the natives to spread the gospel of Chirst. It is believed by clergymen and other christian thinkers of the evangelization of the world in this generation is by no means a vague idea nor a vain attempt. This evangelization of the world in this generation means simply the dissemination of the gospel to every person living on earth and not exactly the convertion of the whole world, although this would not be impossible because nothing is impossible with God. The task is surely a great one but so is God. The United States has money enough and men enough to do her share of the work, but she lacks one thing. She need not more men but "more man." Will there be "men" enough to meet the demands of this foreign movement? We must wait and see.

The great spiritual wave is also spreading over the United States and it will place men in a better moral condition and standing from which they can better view their duty and better realize the need of "men" in the world. The world wide Prohibition storm that has struck America is one of the products of the spiritual awakening. At the present rate of advancement the United States will be practically dry in ten years, as predicted by the great temperance lecturer, Stewart. The liquor traffic has been the father of many other vices in our country and when the Old man is dead the children will die of starvation. Thus it is easy seen that our country is on the upward trend, and "Old Glory" will some day float over a dry nation. All men are incurably religious if this be true, why not get the best while we are at it. A man's religion is always the greatest thing that could be said about him, being always foremost in his nature, appearance and influence. Bad religion produces bad results, good religion, good results. In other words we are either a booster for Jesus Christ or a drag in the employment of the devil.

Viewing this great life problem of the evangelization of the world in the generation from our own individual standpoint of view, we cannot deny that we are intended as a factor in this work. Christ said, "Go ye into all the world and teach all nations." That means you. How do you expect to respond in answer to the roll call in eternity in regard to this question? We can, as we all know, respond to this commandment in many ways. First, by becoming a consecrated christian, willing to work at home. Second, by sending finances. Third, by going ourselves. We all can be missionaries at home by living and exhorting others to become christians. God's work in one place is as important as in another. Are all professing christians obeying this commandment and are all professors really possessors of christianity? The present condition of our churches answers the question in mighty tones, no. There are three hindrances which are not only barring the onward march of the church but is making it a laughing stock of the world. And to be honest it is often used as a resting place instead of a working place—in other words a place to grow big in the eyes of the world, and not to help others grow. These hindrances are the idle christian, the hypocrit and the sinner. This middle class is almost wholly responsible for the existance of the other two. If there were no hypocrits the idle christians would be freer to carry on his work and the sinner seeing the works of the christian would be converted. This middle classed, two sided individual is of unknown origin. God only recognized two characters, the Christian and the Sinner.

Christ when speaking of hypocrits during his ministry on earth said, 'The sinner shall go into the kingdom of God before you.' The devil himself recognizes that the sinner is nearer God than the hypocrit and to hinder the growth of the church he puts the hypocrit between the sinner and God. Like Sampson of old is the power of this individual. He placed his brawn arms between the two pillars of the temple and not only destroyed it but many thousand lives. Just so with this middle character. This individual forces the sinner from the church and God by his two sided influence. There is not an honest, true blue American citizen but what will say that men ought to be genuine, whether good or bad. God has more respect for a murderer who is honest enough to confess it than he has for a lying, sneaking individual that says he is a christian when he is not and the world at large stands back of this statement as true.

Friends if you are on the fence it is time to get off. The professing christian that is not out for business, has no business to be out. In spite of these conditions the work of God goes on. Never in the late history of old Spencerville has there been such a visitation of God's power as has been manifested in the late revival conducted by Rev. Brown, a man who only sleeps at night. Young men and women have said good bye to hell and the glittering deceiving things of this life and have started the good old christian life never more to turn back.

While honor should not be bestowed on men for doing their duty, yet these young people have made a strong fight and deserve some credit, at least your prayers. The revival at Spencerville has just begun. Many older people will follow the example of the young.

Friends, this written article is meant for one sole purpose. To awaken and convert—in other words to cause us to realize the fleetness of time and the great eternity beyond. Who can be safe on the sands of morality with a flood in view? Friends its time to get right with God. How many of us will be alive tomorrow? Just stop here and think.

While it is often impossible to prevent an accident, it is never impossible to be prepared—it is not beyond any one's purse. Invest 25 cents in a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and you are prepared for sprains, bruises and like injuries. Sold by H. L. Dunkle, St. Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

Word was received by relatives of Milton Wasson, of southern California in which he stated that the frost had not reached them as in some parts of the state, and that prospects were good for a large crop of fruit. Mr. Wasson has rented a ranch containing about 3100 acres and on said land fruit and garden truck is raised by Chinese. The hilly districts are adapted for cattle raising and we are told that he had a drove of 500 spotted cattle. Mr Wasson is doing well.

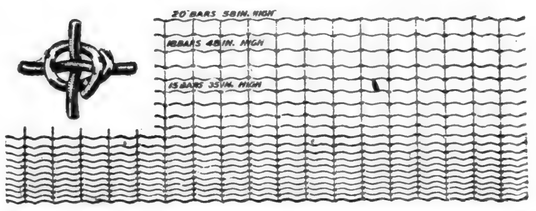
"The Michigan" Wire Fence.



Is made of a good quality of carbonized steel wire, having a tensile strength nearly double that of common annealed steel or soft wire. Years of experience in the manufacture of wire fencing have demonstrated that the best wire for fence purposes is one that is both hard and tough—hard without being brittle and tough without being soft. The wire of which "The Michigan" is made combines these qualities, having just enough points carbon to give it strength and elasticity, and yet tough enough to admit of splicing without drawing the temper. All wire is thoroughly galvanized and ample provision for contraction and expansion is made in the tension curves.

Note carefully the lock or tie which unites the lateral and upright wires. Observe that it is a simple, smooth and strong lock, having the legs well hooked over the line wire as well as locked over each other, thereby preventing a spreading of the legs when under pressure. This lock is not driven down on the line and stay wires; thus they are not injured at the point of intersection.

Oldest Inns In England.

The Fighting Cocks Inn, on the river Ver, St. Albans, said to be "over 1,100 years old," claims to be the oldest inhabited house in the kingdom, but the Saracen's Head, Newark, memorable in the story of Jeanie Deans, can actually, it seems, show title deeds dating back to 1341. The oldest tavern bill extant is that of Richard de Insula, bishop of Durham, at the Angel Inn, Blyth, Notts, anno 1274. The item "In Coquina, 27s, 5½," is somewhat excessive, taking the relative value of money into consideration.—London Athenaeum.

His gloomy forebodings proved true, and it is with the high and noble purpose of doing full justice to the memory of a great man that after the lapse of twenty-four centuries this incident is for the first time given to the public.—Chicago Tribune.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

DON'T FOLLOW THE CROWD.

By Rev. J. Lewis Hartsock.

Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil.—Exodus 22:2.

This ordinance in the book of Exodus is an evidence of that wisdom which marks Moses as the greatest statesman of ancient days. The warning of this old command is simply, "Don't follow the crowd." The peril of the city is the excess of the instinct for association. Civilization, progress is the growth and development of the associate life of men, but the peril of city life is that this instinct is overdone.

People hate to be alone. What proportion of the 10,000 witnesses of a football match would stand for an hour or more in the wind and rain if each man were isolated from the rest of the crowd and saw only the players? In spite of only dirt and disease, congestion and high rents, the cities are growing at an enormous rate, while the towns and villages are diminishing. This instinct to be in a crowd is one of the most serious developments in modern civilization. "New York is not a civilization; it is a great railway station." The inevitable result of association in a crowd is to do as the crowd does. The temper of Broadway, which is damning thousands of careless lives, is the subtle cry which calls, "Do as the crowd does."

All about us are people who lower their standard to suit the crowd. It is astonishing how far we are influenced by the practice and opinion of our fellows. Fear of unpopularity, a desire to be one with the rest, has led many a prodigal into the far country. The history of the sinning world in a nutshell is simply doing as others do, going the way the crowd does. Obviously those who follow others come to have no autonomy of their own. They lose the power of independent judgment, the strength and disposition for personal initiative, and finally the sense of personal obligation.

This is the kind of atmosphere in which many are living to-day, eager, restless to be in the current of things where, in the ceaseless fret and foam of the sea, the man's identity is lost and his personality merged in the great composite. Moses speaking to ancient Israel uttered a warning and command which was never more potent than to-day: "Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil." Resistance is power. Life has been defined as the sum total of the forces that resist death. Resistance is life. In the centripetal force which keeps the planet from flying off into space, there operates the law of resistance, whose might is the secret of creation. In the moral and spiritual world the secret of life is the might of one's resistance.

When one's sense of personal responsibility and obligation is lost, his resistance is gone, and when his resisting power is gone the man is gone. Follow not the crowd, but the challenge of thine own soul. Be a whole man to the whole of life and veritably thy feet shall be established, thou having done all to stand.

THE PATIENCE OF GOD.

By Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D. D.

Text: "Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be like minded one toward another."—Rom. xv:5.

The God of patience! That statement strikes us, perhaps, strangely as coming from the energetic, aggressive and impatient apostle and his describing Him who is enthroned in heaven and glories in His majesty. We think of Him, and think justly, as a God of infinite wisdom, of unbending might and justice, bringing retribution upon those who offend against Him, of eternal authority, carrying on His power from the heights of the throne upon which He is forever established. And this is the correct view of God. This is the greatest thought that has ever entered within the range of human mind. It is the thought on which all noble character and all noble civilization of communities and of states are builded. We do not think of Him as a God of patience.

Every summer in its progress and from its close really reminds us that God is a God of patience. How long a time there is between the setting of the tender shoot to the wealthy growth of grass. How long the time between the flower stem just appearing above the brown earth and the consummate blossom on its stalk, waving its body and exhaling its beauty on the air. A lady spoke to me of her summer having been passed in a hospital, in the trying monotony of a hospital, in the experience of lingering hours when days seem to pass perceptibly. She took no note of time, or, at any rate, hardly knew how long she had been in the ward, suffering with sickness and pain. "When I went into the hospital," she said, "I brought with me a branch of apple blossoms which a friend had sent to me. As I came out and moved across the pavement to the carriage, there were apples on a stand near by, and I felt at once there is an interval from the blossom to the perfect fruit." It was to her a kind of sociological chronicle, a sort of aerial stop watch, making the interval between the beginning and the end.

A God of patience! So events are slowly established and gradually woven. Social relations between men only slowly perfect themselves, forms of government only slowly come to their full power. The simple improvement in society is so slow that man almost breaks his heart sometimes over the slowness, until he feels that he would hurry all if he had the power. God does not. He is a God of patience and it is His way of educating mankind, slowly building up communities and states into order and power, slowly but surely advancing.

THE AMBITIOUS MAN.

By Rev. Vance, D. D.

Text.—"Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be the greatest. * * * And Jesus said unto them he that is the least among you all, the same shall be great."—Luke 9: 46-48.

"The Ambitious Man" is a portrait of all the disciples in one. Unsatisfied lust for place and power has taken possession of the twelve. For the time being they are dead to the great spiritual facts of Christ's kingdom. The holy voices of the beatitudes are drowned in a jargon of strife. The patient, self-denying example of the Master himself fails to act as either restraint or rebuke to these ambition-driven men. They do not stop to consider their fitness for the high places they seek. It does not occur to them that weightier responsibilities attach to positions of larger trust. In their insane scramble for preferment, they are blind to all save self-promotion. Hot words have passed between them, and now, crowding against each other, in selfish haste, they come to Jesus with the question: "Which of us shall be the greatest?"

It is unquestionably one's duty to make the most of himself and his opportunities. The absence of aspiration of this kind is an unspeakable calamity. It makes the difference between a dead man and a living one. If the parable of the talents means anything it is that God expects everyone to get the best. But this is not the spirit that looks down upon us from the face in my text. This is rather ambition sanctified, ennobled, purified, transformed to righteous aspiration.

The highest achievement is not to capture the prize, but to make the race; not to surrender to sense, but to touch the infinite and embody that which will outlive the tick of the clock.

Let us crowd out ambition with the spirit of the cross of Calvary. Let us open the heart to child trust and child love. All hail to self-sacrifice and to that devotion which lays down life for great ideals! This is the spirit of true greatness. It will save the world. As it grows stronger the angel with the drawn sword at the portal of sinless happiness will vanish, the gates of that pristine paradise will turn on their golden hinges again, the light from the better land will fall upon us. Earth will move up to the doorstep of heaven, and the door will be ajar.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

EVENING SONG.

By George Washington Doane.

[The Rev. George Washington Doane, D. D. (Trenton, N. J., May 27, 1799—Burlington, N. J., April 27, 1859), indefatigable pastor, professor, bishop, and writer, is best known to our day as the author of several beautiful hymns. Sung to the appropriate tune, "Seymour," this hymn often is used in the evening service of worship.]

Softly now the light of day
Fades upon my sight away;
Free from care, from labor free,
Lord, I would commune with thee.

Thou, whose all pervading eye
Naught escapes without, within,
Pardon each infirmity,
Open fault, and secret sin.

Soon, for me, the light of day
Shall forever pass away;
Then, from sin and sorrow free,
Take me, Lord, to dwell with thee.

Thou who, sinless, yet hast known
All of man's infirmity;
Then from thine eternal throne,
Jesus, look with pitying eye.

SERMONETTES.

Anxiety tries to see the mountains in the way and trips us up over a pebble.

Character is what you are when it seems that the conductor will not look for your fare.

Many seem to think that the mark of a level-headed man is that he has thrown away his heart.

You cannot tell much about a man's bank account in heaven by his ability to coin plous phrases.

Many men would be religious if their friends were not so anxious to make it seem petty and ridiculous.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't try to keep ideals alive by simply proclaiming them.

Don't fail to practice the truth that you are fighting for.

Don't try to lift the church by hiding your faults beneath it.

Don't try to learn the way to heaven by inquiring as to the waywardness of your friends.

Don't permit the habit of prayer to mean as little as the habit of profanity does to some men.

Smiles of The Day

Proved.

"Jones says he never knew what it was to live till he was married. He says that during all his years of bachelor life he never was contented more than two months at once, but now——"

"How long has Jones been married?"

"Six weeks."—Cleveland Leader.

Specially Fortified.

"Bliggins says he thinks he would like to go into the diplomatic service."

"But he stutters terribly."

"That's where he is strong. He has to think at least twice before he says anything."—Washington Star.

A Modern Phase.

"Ah, my lad, you are a fine little fellow."

"Thank you, sir."

"And are you mamma's boy or papa's boy?"

"I spend six months in the custody of each," answered the urchin, courteously.—Washington Herald.

Couldn't Evade It.

Boy—Papa, I am going to be a good boy and tell you the truth; I just broke a window next door.

Father—Did they see you do it?

Boy—Yes, sir; or I would have ducked, run and forgot it by this time.

Rustic Manners.

"You'd never think he was from the country. His dress and manners are thoroughly urban."

"Yes, but he betrayed his ignoble origin yesterday. He gave up his seat to a woman on a crowded car."—Exchange.

Hard Luck.

Judge—What led you to marry fourteen wives?

Prisoner—Thirteen was such an unlucky number, your honor.

Rural Pastimes.

Subscriber—Hello, central, there's some one listening to our conversation; Mrs. Talkfast and I can scarcely hear each other.

Central—I don't think so, madam; I've been listening for ten minutes to see if I could detect any one doing it.—Boston Herald.

One More Disappointment.

"Poor old Myer is dead, I see. He led a life full of disappointments."

"How glad he would have been to see his name in print."—Fliegende Blaetter.

No Violence Necessary.

"I submitted some humorous sketches here the other day," said Jokeley. "They haven't appeared yet. Did you kill them?"

"I passed upon them," replied the editor, "but I didn't kill them."

"No."

"No. They just died naturally of old age."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Not All Guilty.

"Move inside, gents," cried the conductor on the crowded trolley; "ye're breakin' the rules standin' on the platform here."

"Some o' them ain't," piped up a little man; "they're standin' on my feet."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Warning.

"For goodness sake, be careful, officer! He's orful dangerous when he's mad."

He Did It.

A schoolboy was asked to construct a sentence using the phrase "ready wit."

He wrote: "I saw Reddy wit a goll goin' down the street."—Kansas City Times.

Her Limit.

She—Father, I want to buy a hat; will you give me a check?

He—Certainly. How much do you want?

She—How much have you left in bank?—Judge.

Easy Enough.

"If I could go into a trance before starting I'm sure I could cross the Atlantic without being seasick."

"That's easy. Take a transatlantic liner."

The Week in London.

"Is Lady Jane in?"

"Very sorry, sir, but mistress is in prison this afternoon."—Life.

Ingratitude of the Great.

"Is der anything in de message 'bout dat 'possum I sont de President?" asked Brother Dickey.

"Not a word."

"My, my! De higher up folks climbs, de mo' ongrateful dey gits! An' ter think," he concluded, "dat it wuz a big, fat 'possum—de only one I had; an' I wuz ez hongry ez a b'ar de day I put him on bo'd de Washin'ton westibule—onlimited!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Damages.

"Archie's new automobile blew up with him on the first trip and he sued the firm that sold him the machine."

"Did he recover anything?"

"Everything, I believe but one finger and a part of an ear."

A Valid Reason.

The Count—Vat! Economize?

The Countess—Yes. Father says we are living beyond his means.—Lippincott's.

Hard to Portray.

"I don't think the book will dramatize well."

"Why not?"

"The hero has a good many mental struggles, but them kind of combats don't go well on the stage."—Kansas City Journal.

Fitted for the Task.

"How do you get your hair arranged so beautifully?" asks the admiring friend.

"I'll tell you," candidly answers the owner of the many switches, braids, puffs, ringlets, etc. "Every maid I had simply wore herself out with the heavy work of dressing my hair, until last summer I found a sturdy Swedish girl pitching hay on a farm near our cottage. I engaged her at once."—Life.

Prepared for the Test.

Miss Bronx—Are you going to speak to father to-night?

Mr. Harlem—Why to-night?

Miss Bronx—The football season closed yesterday, and I'm afraid you will be out of training.—Judge.

Evidence.

Patience—Do you know that squirrels love music?

Patrice—I do not.

"Well, the next time you start the phonograph watch the squirrels and see if they don't run away!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Otherwise Engaged.

The Lady—My 'usband, sir, 'as sent me to say 'e won't be able to come and do the little job you arst 'im to; 'e's promised to go round the town with the unemployed.—M. A. P.

James Jeremiah Snored Some.

Aunt—Yes, poor Fido is dead. He was playing in the street and got hit by an automobile.

Nephew—Didn't the chauffeur blow the auto horn?

Aunt—Yes, but the poor little dear thought it was James Jeremiah snoring and didn't pay any attention to it.

Up to Her.

"I want you to give up swearing," said his wife.

"That will be easy if you'll promise one thing."

"What's that?"

"That you'll swear off letting the furnace fire go out in my absence."—Detroit Free Press.

Chalk Bread and Cereal Meats

"One doesn't see so much counterfeit money nowadays."

"No. Money is so cheap and food so high that the talent is counterfeiting food instead."—Kansas City Times.

Once Enough.

She—History repeats itself, you know.

"Not always. You never heard of a man eloping more than once, did you?—Yonkers Statesman.

Same Business.

"Could you find room on your staff for a man who writes features?" asked the aspiring young journalist.

"Not on our staff," replied the city editor. "But you might call on the doctor downstairs who advertises to correct facial deformities. He might need a feature righter."—St. Louis Star.

Circumstances After Cases.

"Some men are so queer."

"And you are going to tell me of one particularly queer one."

"Yes. It's Mr. Barberton. His wife used to beg him for nickels and dimes, and now he's cheerfully paying her a hundred a week for alimony."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

And He Got a Double Term.

"You say it was your 'double' that stole the chickens?"

"Yassuh."

"You know I gave you thirty days once for chicken stealing?"

"Ah remembah, suh."

"Well, this time you get sixty. That's the court's double."—Philadelphia Ledger.

No Organ Recitals.

"Going up to hear that lecture on appendicitis to-day?"

"Naw. I'm tired of these organ recitals."—Cornell Widow.

FASHION HINTS

A late model in a simple evening coat has a queer little cape-hood arrangement, that would be nice for the girl of slender lines. Fur collar, cuffs and tie ends, make a rich trimming, but heavy lace, or something Persian in effect, would be equally good for finishing the neck and sleeves.

Drinking and Smoking in Korea.

The Koreans are inveterate smokers of green tobacco, which they use in pipes with tiny bowls and stems two or three feet long. They stick their pipes down the back of the neck when not using them.

There is a deal of drinking, too, though they have many proverbs against it—"Heaven and earth are too small for a drunken man," "White whisky makes a red face," "There is no bottom to the appetite for drink."

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

De Forest, Wis.—"After an operation four years ago I had pains downward in both sides, backache, and a weakness. The doctor wanted me to have another operation. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my troubles."—Mrs. AUGUSTE VESPERMANN, De Forest, Wisconsin.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

If you want special advice about your case write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel (930 miles north of the International boundary). Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly

70,000 Americans

will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year. 1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item. Cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as lands held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions.

Knee to Ankle a Mass of Humor.

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

No Compulsion.

"Why do I have to pay such enormous prices for round steak?" grumbled the customer.

"You don't," said the butcher. "Here's a perfectly good shank you can buy for a good deal less money."—Chicago Tribune.

Spider Web as a Styptic.

A spider's web, an old cure for bleeding, is an uncleanly application, as it is generally procured from the most neglected corner in a room and is consequently laden with dust. The earliest reference to this remedy in our language seems to be in a translation of that curious encyclopedic work of the middle ages, "De Proprietaribus Rerum," where we read, "Coppe webbe that is white and clean staunchyth blood." But as I have seen it applied to a cut finger it has been anything but white and clean. There is another reference in Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," when Bottom, the weaver, says to his fairy Cobweb, "I shall desire of you more acquaintance, good master Cobweb; if I cut my finger I shall make bold with you."

As a styptic, however, it must be acknowledged a spider's web as somewhat effective. In a case of excessive hemorrhage after the extraction of a tooth a dentist applied a cobweb with most satisfactory results.—Hospital.

In the Long Ago.

Benjamin Franklin, full of his schemes for drawing electricity from the clouds, had dropped in at a hardware store.

"Well," said the salesman, "what is it?"

"Wire, please," answered Benjamin.

"In a moment," the salesman said, turning to wait on a woman customer who had just come in.

Even in those days, as we learn from this, the man who was in a hurry got the busy signal sometimes.—Chicago Tribune.

CLEAR-HEADED.

Head Bookkeeper Must Be Reliable.

The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee did for him:

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago, and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way:

"About three and a half years ago I had an attack of pneumonia, which left a memento in the shape of dyspepsia, or rather, to speak more correctly, neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, but the cook made the mistake of not boiling it sufficiently, and we did not like it much. This was, however, soon remedied, and now we like it so much that we will never change back. Postum, being a food beverage instead of a drug, has been the means of curing my stomach trouble, I verily believe, for I am a well man to-day and have used no other remedy.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co.'s branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee-drinking days I was subject to nervousness and 'the blues' in addition to my sick spells. These have left me since I began using Postum and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion."

"There's a Reason."

The Week in Congress

An investigation of the causes of the high prices of the necessaries of life was provided Wednesday by the passage of a resolution for that purpose by the Senate. The Senate also passed a bill conferring the rank of rear admiral upon Commander Peary and retiring him with the highest salary paid a rear admiral. This was "calendar day" in the House, and several bills were passed, including one for the creation of an art commission to pass upon various works of art erected by Congress in the District of Columbia.

The Senate acted promptly Thursday on the summons of the District Court for the joint committee on printing to appear in the paper award proceedings brought by the Valley Paper Company, by instructing the Senate members of the committee to ignore the summons. The Senate denied the right of the courts to interfere with its legislative function. Senator Borah in a speech on the income tax asserted that the fears of Governor Hughes that the constitutional amendment would make possible the taxing of state and municipal securities were groundless. The House spent the entire day in debating whether the House members of the joint printing committee should obey the court summons to appear in the Valley Paper Company's case. The majority of the judiciary committee favored compliance, but three members, including Chairman Parker, brought in a minority report, taking the view adopted by the Senate. A night session was held and the majority report finally adopted.

The Senate passed the Bennett "white slave" bill Friday, which had previously passed the House. The Senate changed the measure so as to divorce the immigration feature from all others. After a two-hour session the Senate adjourned until Monday. The diplomatic and consular bill appropriating $3,700,000 was passed by the House. Mr. Harrison and Mr. Fitzgerald of New York charged that the activity of the State Department in the interest of American trade resulted in coercing weaker governments and in certain favored banks getting the benefit of loans. The House was in session six hours and adjourned till Monday.

No Senators being prepared to discuss the postal savings bank bill Monday, that measure was laid aside for other business. The Senate passed the House bill requiring the census enumerators to include in their reports all the cattle slaughtered in the United States, and incorporated an amendment requiring the collection of statistics regarding national and state irigation. After considering the rivers and harbors appropriation bill for about seven hours, the House succeeded in disposing of 70 of the 100 pages of that measure without making any important changes. Speaker Cannon obtaining the floor, gave his approval to the pending bill, incidentally telling the Democrats if they should ever come into control of the House they would realize the necessity of providing methods of procedure that will allow them to transact business, or else by inaction disappoint the people who had placed them in the majority.

In the Senate Tuesday Mr. Burkett, in a set speech contended that the postal savings bank bill is constitutional, and Mr. Crawford said the present high cost of comodities is due to the increase in the gold supply. The Senate passed a number of bills, among which were measures to prohibit misrepresentations of the government's guaranty of foods and medicines and regulating hazing at West Point. The House passed the rivers and harbors bill, carrying $35,000,000, with authorization for work that will cost $7,000,000 more.

THE WONDERBERRY OR SUNBERRY

Has Proved a Great Success—Thousands Say It's the Best Thing They Ever Grew.

The Wonderberry or Sunberry, the marvelous garden fruit originated by Luther Burbank, and introduced by John Lewis Childs, the well-known seedsman of Floral Park, N. Y., has proved a great success all over the country. Thousands of people say it is the best thing they ever grew.

Mr. John Burroughs, the well-known author, Naturalist and bosom-friend of Theodore Roosevelt, says it is the most delicious pie berry he ever tasted, and a marvelous cropper.

A Director of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station says it fruits abundantly even in pure sand. In the short season of Northwestern Canada it is a godsend, and fruits long after frost has killed most garden truck.

D. S. Hill, Wichita, Kan., says thirty people grew it there last season with perfect satisfaction.

K. S. Enochs, Hammond, La., says it yields $250 worth of fruit per acre with him. Mrs. J. H. Powers, 4732 Kenwood avenue, Chicago, raised enough berries on a space 4x10 feet to supply herself and friends.

J. P. Swallow, Kenton, Ohio, says its equal for all purposes does not exist.

Rev. H. B. Sheldon, Pacific Grove, Cal., says he likes the berries served in any and every way.

W. T. Davis, Enon, Va., says it is true to description in every way, and fruits in three months from seed.

Judge Morrow, of U. S. Circuit Court, says the Wonderberry is simply delicious raw or cooked.

Mr. Childs exhibited one plant five months old bearing 10,375 berries which measured about eight quarts.

Mrs. Hattie Vincent, Hayden, New Mexico, says it stands long, hard droughts of that climate and fruits abundantly all summer.

It is certainly the most satisfactory garden fruit and the greatest Novelty ever introduced.

Further Particulars.

The man who was going to St. Ives had just met the seven wives.

Their combined luggage, as has been narrated, consisted of forty-nine sacks containing in the aggregate 343 cats and 2,401 kittens.

"Ah," said he, pleasantly, "what have we here? A traveling cat show?"

"No, sir," they explained; "we are answering a want ad."

New England Pie.

Some poor dweller in the benighted beyond of Chicago asks what a real New England pie is like. It probably will not help him to be told, but if it means apple it is like an essay by Emerson liquefied with the music of Massanet and spiced with the cynicism of Shaw. If he means pumpkin it is like some of Gounod's music heard in a landscape all sun and flowers, and if he means mince pie, why, it is like an increase in salary and a present from home arriving on the day when one's conscience was behaving itself.—Boston Globe.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

SUNBERRY—The Improved Wonderberry

LUTHER BURBANK'S GREATEST CREATION. A Luscious Berry Ripening in Three Months From Seed.

SEED 20 CTS. PER PACKET. 3 PACKETS FOR 50 CTS. POSTPAID

This is positively the GREATEST new Fruit and the best NOVELTY of modern times. These are facts which no one can get away from. The proofs are overwhelming in number and conclusive in character. Grown last year by 250,000 people.

Fruit blue-black like an enormous rich blueberry in looks and taste. Unsurpassed for eating raw, cooked, canned or preserved in any form. This great garden fruit is equally valuable in hot, dry, cold or wet climates. Easiest plant in the world to grow, succeeding anywhere and yielding great masses of rich fruit all summer and fall. The greatest boon to the family garden ever known. Leaves and branches are also used for greens and are superb. Everybody can and will grow it.

Luther Burbank, of California, the world famous plant wizard, originated the Wonderberry and turned it over to me to introduce. He says of it: "This absolutely new berry plant is of great interest and value as it bears the most delicious, wholesome and healthful berries in utmost profusion and always comes true from seed."

READ MY CATALOGUE, pages 9 and 3, for full description, culture, uses, etc. (Also Colored Plate). With scores of testimonials from well-known and reputable people all over the country. Also the "Crime of the Wonderberry."

THE SUNBERRY is an improved form of the Wonderberry which I introduced exclusively last year and which proved so satisfactory. It is greatly superior to the original type, and I alone have genuine seed.

SEED 200 per pkt.; 3 pkts. for 50c; 7 for $1.00.

With every packet of seed I send a booklet giving 100 Recipes for using the fruit, raw, cooked, canned, preserved, jellied, spiced, pickled, jam, syrup, wine, greens, etc. It is superior for any of these uses.

Also a copy of my 183-page Catalogue with every order—which tells all about my $12,000 IN CASH PRIZES AND OFFERS. AGENTS WANTED.

MY GREAT CATALOGUE of Flowers and Vegetable Seed, Bulbs, Plants, and Rare and New Fruits FREE to all who apply. 183 pages, 800 illustrations and colored plates. I have been in the business 30 years and have half a million customers all over the country. Complete satisfaction guaranteed to everyone. Do not fail to see the many great Novelties I am offering this year of which the SUNBERRY is the greatest ever known.

Rheumatic Pains

"My mother is a great sufferer from rheumatism, and Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills is the only remedy that relieves her."

MRS. G. DAVENPORT,
Roycefield, N. J.

The pains of rheumatism are almost invariably relieved with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They also overcome that nervous irritation which prevents sleep because they soothe the nerves. To chronic suffers they are invaluable. When taken as directed, they relieve the distress and save the weakening influence of pain, which so frequently prostrates. Many sufferers use them whenever occasion requires with the greatest satisfaction, why not you? They do not derange the stomach nor create a habit. Why not try them? Get a package from your druggist. Take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Saved From Awful Peril

"I never felt so near my grave" writes Lewis Chamblin, of Manchester, Ohio, R. R. No 3, "as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 115 pounds in spite of many remedies and the best doctors And that I am alive today is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I weigh 160 pounds and can work hard. It also cured my four children of croup." Infallible for Coughs and Colds, its the most certain remedy for LaGrippe Asthma, desperate lung trouble and all bronchial affections, 50c and $1.00. A trial bottle free Guaranteed by H. L Dunkle.

Flowery Sentences Retained.

"The mantle of darkness" and "the dome of the sky" are survivals from the days when the sky was believed to be a solid dome resting upon the edge of the earth, over which blankets of different colors hung at dawn and dusk.

Prolific Nut Trees.

The nut trees of the world could, it is calculated, provide food all the year round for the population of the globe. Brazil nuts grow in such profusion that thousands of tons of them are wasted every year.

The Old St. Joe River is on a rampage caused by the rain last week. With the melting of the snow and ice that has covered mother earth for over three months, every little ditch is running at its full capacity. We have reliable information that a large percentage of last year's corn crop was damaged by the severe cold weather early in the winter, and therefore, suggest to all corn growers the advisability of testing a few kernels from each ear of seed corn to make sure that it will germinate, thus avoiding the possibility of a short stand of corn.

L. L. C. Entertains

Of all the many social functions given by the L. L. C. during the years of its existance, it is hardly possible to name one when the success was so over-whelming than on last Wednesday evening, when the members entertained their husbands at the beautiful home of Dr. and Mrs. Lake, in honor of Washington's birthday. On arrival the guests were ushered to an upstairs room where wraps were laid aside and greetings exchanged, when all had assembled in the parlor, Mrs. Jennie Sechler, as mistress of ceremonies, presented each in turn to the Honorable and Dignified George and Stately Martha, who were there in their satin cloths and powdered wigs, making a pretty picture and who greeted every one with all the courtesy of colonial days.

The rooms were gay with the tri-color streamers of the red, white and blue together with shields, swords, hatchets and cherries, making a delightful scene. The program opened with that song loved by all Americans, "America." Sang by all and made a fitting beginning for the events that followed. Quotations, "Sayings of Washington" conducted by "George" himself came next, then followed a poem on "Washington's Birthday" given by Mrs. Francis Lake in a clear and forceful manner. After this Mesdames Patterson, Baker and Sechler sang a trio entitled "The Flag of Our Nation" a rare treat and enjoyed by all. Mrs. Belle Barney gave a very interesting history of "The Children of the Mt. Vernon Household" followed by a musical novelty "Gee, But Ain't America a Grand Old Place," by Mrs. Bessie Tustison, which was enthusiastically received. Then came a test of the musical knowledge of the guests, who searched their minds for titles of old songs as Miss Lela Shilling played the tunes on the piano. S. W. Tustison received the first prize and D. J. Baker the booby prize. After this Mrs. Jennie Sechler conducted a composite history game which proved to be both marvelous and amusing. The much famed cherry tree was now brought forth and each allowed to taste the fruit thereon also finding their fortunes stored within. The delightful program closed with three beautiful tableaus that of George and Martha, the cherry tree episode and John Alden and Priscilla.

The literary part of the program now over the banquet ensued. Each gentleman now represented a state in our union and each lady a capitol. After all the states had located their own capitol they were seated at tables where a most plaborate four course luncheon was served. Here the national colors were ever before us and minature hatchets and cherries were the favors. As the banquet proceeded each course contained some quaint reminder of the occasion and when at the last the ice cream was served each white mound was encircled with a wreath of cherries. Mrs. Cora Price acted as toast mistress during the repast and the responses both witty and logical stirred all the guests with a sudden keen appreciation of our country and a strong feeling of patriotism spread throughout the company.

The club is to be congratulated on the success of the affair and has scored another epoch in its eventful career. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Yeiser of Avilla.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Bookkeeper Got Away With $144,000.

Following the discovery that the National City Bank of Cambridge, Mass., had been looted of $144,000, the doors of the institution were closed, probably forever, by National Bank Examiner Pepper, acting on behalf of the comptroller of the currency. Later a warrant was issued for the arrest of George W. Coleman, the young bookkeeper of the bank, who was last heard from in Kansas City a few days ago. Coleman is charged with embezzlement. The institution is insolvent, the capital stock of $100,000 and the surplus having been wiped out by the defalcation. Former Governor John L. Bates, the receiver, will liquidate the remaining assets.

Flyer Wrecked Near Pittsburg.

The Pennsylvania train (No. 30), which usually makes New York in twenty-four hours from St. Louis, was making a fast run over a level stretch of the Panhandle division when five of the six cars jumped the track a mile west of Scio, Ohio. The passengers, most of whom were enjoying a late Sunday morning sleep, were shaken from their berths and some suffered from shock, but none was injured seriously. They took another train to New York. The railroad officials believe a broken rail caused the wreck.

Women Lead As Students.

"Are women better students than men, or is it that the men are only lazier than the women?" This question is bothering heads of the University of Kansas as the result of recent examinations in the college of liberal arts. The number of men who failed in more than one-third of their work outnumbered the women 5 to 1. The class is composed of about an equal number of each sex.

Street Car Runs Wild.

Its brakes out of commission, a street car dashed a quarter of a mile down a steep incline on Park avenue in St. Louis, Mo., at full speed, causing death and destruction, before it was halted by colliding with the curb. James Voyce was crushed to death, 17 persons were injured, seven of them seriously, and two carriages were demolished. The car was completely wrecked.

All Quiet At Cairo, Ill.

The city of Cairo, Ill., is quiet and the authorities believe the danger of race riots has passed for the present. The five militia companies are continuing to patrol the streets and the soldiers will probably remain in charge of the situation the remainder of the week. Petitions of saloonkeepers to re-open their places were denied by General Dickson.

Ethel Barymore Is Very Ill.

Mrs. Russell T. Colt, known to the theatre-going public as Ethel Barymore, is confined to her residence in New York City, with an attack of laryngitis. Because of her illness the theatre in which she is appearing was closed.

Many Die In Theatre Fire.

Fifty persons are reported to have been killed in a panic following a fire in the Municipal theatre at Trujillo, a town in northern Peru. The fire started among the apparatus used in connection with a moving picture show.

The Big Fight In 'Frisco.

The forty-five-round championship battle on July 4 between James J. Jeffries and Johnson for a purse of $101,000 will be fought in San Francisco. It has just been announced at San Francisco.

Indiana Man Heads Rural Carriers.

Thirty-seven states were represented at the first meeting of the Rural Delivery Carriers' Mutual Benefit association held in Cincinnati, O. Glenn Christ, of Muncie, Ind., was elected president.

Three Fatally Hurt.

As the result of a head-on collision between Bessemer and Lake Erie passenger trains three trainmen, two engineers and a baggageman were probably fatally injured near Meadville, Pa.

Senator Tillman's Recovery Assured.

There was rejoicing at Washington among the friends of Senator Benjamin R. Tillman when the attending physician announced that his patient was practically out of danger.

Famous Stallion Dead.

Regalia, famous sire of many fast trotters, died at Decatur, Ill., at the age of thirty-six. Chris Brown, his owner, had had charge of Regalia thirty-three years.

PHILADELPHIA FACING PARALYSIS BY STRIKE

Walk-Out Which May Involve 100,000 Men Ordered and Attacks on Cars Go On.

POLICE SHOOT TWO YOUTHS.

Bloodshed as Street-Railway Situation Gets Worse—Organizer Pratt Held in $3,000 Bail.

While rioting which may cost the life of at least one victim was going on, the Central Labor Union of Philadelphia declared a sympathetic strike of all organized labor in the city affiliated with the central body. The union claims a membership of 100,000. Its action was the result of the arrest and detention of Clarence O. Pratt, national organizer of the street car men.

Whether the order will be obeyed by all cannot be told now. President Murphy of the Central Labor Union declares that the order will not go into effect before it receives the approval of the presidents of the unions.

The Central Labor body is composed of 300 delegates, said to represent 100 unions, in various trades. The labor leaders are holding conferences to decide when the strike order shall go into effect. If it is carried out to the letter it will mean serious consequences for the city, which probably will be felt in other places than Philadelphia.

Pratt was given a hearing and held in $3,000 bail, charged with inciting to riot, conspiracy and disorderly conduct. President Murphy was indignant against the city officials for taking Pratt into custody.

Trouble was reported from Kensington, in the northeastern part of the city, the great mill district, where two boys were shot. A crowd of youths lay in wait for a car and as it passed hurled a shower of stones. Two policemen who were on the car as protectors of the crew opened fire on the boys and when the youths fled it was found that two had been wounded. Both were rushed to a hospital and an examination showed that one had been shot in the chest and that the other had been injured slightly.

Coming suddenly when least expected, this strike was declared against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway employes the other day. Two cars were burned the same night, a score of cars were attacked, forcing their crews to abandon them, and numerous arrests were made. Except in the central part of the city, street railway service was almost at a standstill. Cars running through the central stations were heavily protected. Along Kensington avenue lumber and other obstructions were piled on the tracks.

Two hundred and ninety-seven cars wrecked, scores of persons injured, and 150 strike sympathizers arrested was the result of the second day's rioting in connection with the strike. The disorders stopped only when the company decided not to operate its lines for several hours. By the time this decision was made conditions had become so serious that Mayor Reyburn had sworn in 3,000 extra police and had issued a proclamation enforcing the riot act and placing the city under what practically was martial law.

ZERO WEATHER CLOSES SCHOOLS.

Indiana and Ohio Snowfall of 20 Inches Frozen as Mercury Falls.

Zero weather froze solid the nine to twenty inches of snow covering Indiana. Schools in Indianapolis and most of the smaller cities of the state were closed. Travel on the interurban electric railways was slow and uncertain and many highways were blocked by drifts. The temperature dropped sharply at the close of a forty-eight hour snowstorm and registered from 2 to 6 degrees below zero in different sections of the state. The public schools at Marion, O., were dismissed the other day, as practically none of the children was able to reach the buildings. A snowfall of nineteen inches covers the streets. The heavy fall caused the collapse of the $10,000 frame auditorium at Zanesville. Complaints are coming in from central Ohio farming districts that live stock is suffering from lack of water, as the small streams are frozen up.

GIRL CAPTURES TWO ROBBERS.

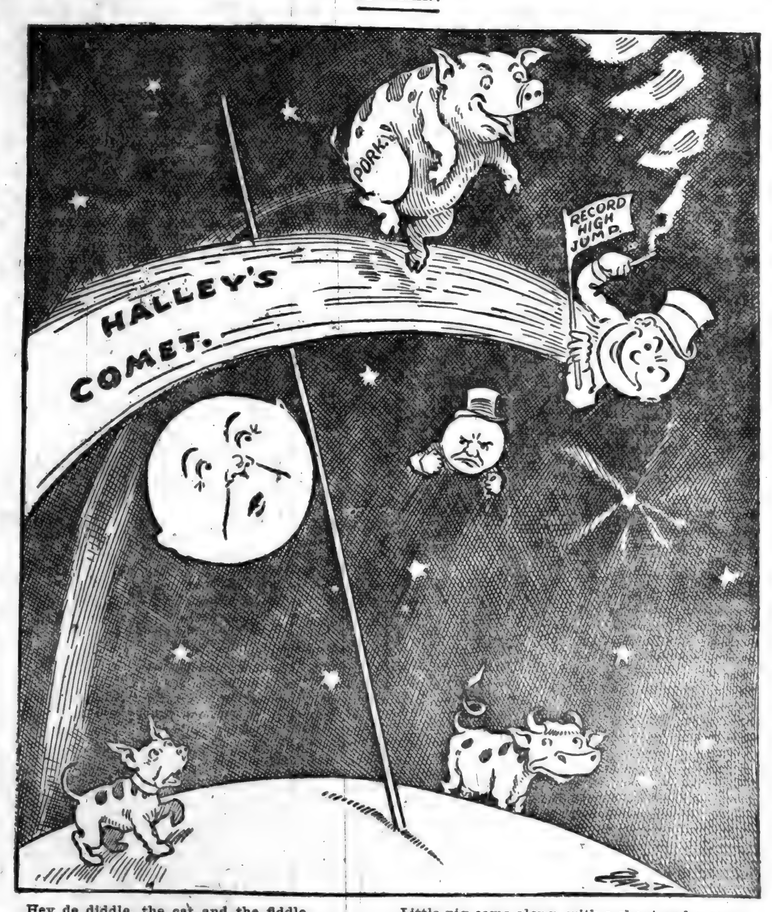
Sees Them Rob Father, Chases Both and Aids in Arrests.

To the courage of Carrie Montgomery, 17 years old, is due the capture of two highwaymen who had assaulted her father, Joseph, and robbed him of $60. From the window of her home on the outskirts of Kansas City Miss Montgomery saw her father struck down. Rushing out, she pursued the robbers. One highwayman turned and felled her with a blow. She was threatened with death if she persisted in following. Undaunted, the girl resumed the chase until detectives, who had been notified by neighbors of the Montgomerys, took up the pursuit and captured the men.

Fierce Gale Sweeps Britain.

A fierce gale has swept over the British Isles, doing an immense amount of damage. The harbors are all crowded with shipping seeking shelter. Incoming vessels report extremely rough passages.

UP AGAIN!



Hey de diddle, the cat and the fiddle
The cow jumped over the moon;
The little dog laughed to see the craft
And the dish ran away with the spoon.

Little pig came along, with a shout and a song,
Vaulted comet and planet and moon;
Doggie no longer laughed at that kind of graft,
For sausage he might be, so soon.

—Minneapolis Journal.

CHICAGO PACKERS INDICTED.

Grand Jury Votes True Bills Against National Company's Officers.

The directors of the National Packing Company—practically all of them Chicago men—were indicted by the grand jury of Hudson county, New Jersey, sitting in Jersey City. The indictments are against the men as individuals. All the directors of the company are included with the exception of Kenneth K. McLaren, a resident of New Jersey and not active in the corporation.

The corporations and its directors are the same ones now the subject of a federal grand jury inquiry in Chicago. That investigation has been under way for several weeks and is expected to continue for three weeks longer before the voting of bills. In the Jersey City grand jury's indictment the National Company's directors are charged with conspiracy in that they kept foodstuffs in cold storage with the purpose of raising the price. The indictments are to be handed up to Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze.

The directors of the National Packing Company, according to the published records are:

J. Ogden Armour,	L. A. Carton,
L. F. Swift,	K. K. McLaren,
Edward Morris,	T. E. Wilson,
E. F. Swift,	C. H. Swift,
Ira N. Morris,	L. H. Heyman,
Arthur Meeker,	Samuel McRoberts,
Edward Tilden,	F. A. Fowler,
T. J. Connors,	A. W. Armour.

The voting of the indictments is believed to be the forerunner of the finding of more true bills by the Jersey grand jury.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

Cornell won the final game of the hockey series between Yale and Cornell. Score, Cornell 3, Yale 1.

At Miller, S. D., a school election to vote $22,000 bonds for a new school house resulted in 302 for and 86 against the project. About 150 women voted.

President Charles R. Van Hise, of the University of Wisconsin, was elected vice president of the Association of American Universities at the meeting in Madison.

The United States Department of Agriculture recommends the establishment of movable schools of agriculture by the State experiment stations wherever fifteen farmers can be secured as students, and the school may be conducted for a year or longer. The kind of instruction should depend on the needs of the section.

State Superintendent C. P. Cary of Wisconsin has issued a letter to superintendents, principals and teachers, in which he deplores the tendency of shaping high school courses chiefly to fit students for entrance to the State University. He also assails the commission plan of supervision suggested by the university educator.

Owing to a disagreement about the conditions imposed by William C. Proctor of Cincinnati on his offer of $500,000 for a graduate school at Princeton, that gift has now been lost, and with it nearly as much more which had been raised for a similar purpose. President Wilson had insisted upon maintaining the right of the university to carry on the grade work in any way that might seem best to himself and the trustees, and in this attitude the board sustained him.

HOGS HIGHEST SINCE THE WAR.

Average Price Reaches $9.11, Breaking Half Century Mark.

Packers at the Chicago stockyards paid more money for hogs Tuesday than on any day since the Civil War, the average cost being $9.11. The previous record day since 1865 was Monday, when the average price was $9.06. In May of 1870, when cattle were selling at unprecedented prices, hogs sold within a range of from $8.35 to $9.35, topping at 10 cents higher than the most recent figures, but showing an extreme range of $1, while all of Tuesday's hogs cleared within a range of 35 cents, the inside figure standing at 55 cents higher than in 1870. In 1869 hogs reached $9.50, but sales were made at $8.50 for light hogs. Files of the Tribune for 1865 show that in that year sales of hogs were made at $12.75, with $10 as the lowest price.

TIME SAVES $173,000 THIEF.

Statute of Limitation Now Applies in Chicago Subtreasury Case.

The mystery of who stole $173,000 from the United States subtreasury in Chicago three years ago may be solved some day, but never in a criminal court. The statute of limitations has run against any sort of criminal action, and the much-sought thief is now free to come out and tell all about it without fear of being sent to jail. All that is now left of the famous case is a libel suit instituted by George W. Fitzgerald, the former cashier in the subtreasury, after he had been arrested and dismissed without trial on the charge of having stolen the money. The defendants to this suit are William Boldenweck, subtreasurer; H. P. Young, manager of a Chicago detective agency, and a morning newspaper.

FIND EDUCATOR POISONED.

Strychnine Is Discovered in the Stomach of Prof. Vaughn.

Poison was found in the stomach and liver of Prof. J. T. Vaughn, educator and author, in an analysis made by Dr. Paul Schweitzer of the University of Missouri. Strychnine was located in the amount of nearly one grain. The grand jury of Adair County, according to a long-distance telephone message, will immediately take up the case and indictments are expected. Mrs. Vaughn is related to several of the wealthiest families in North Missouri, as was her husband.

KILLS A ROBBER IN OFFICE.

Realty Man Answers Intruder's Demand with Shot.

Drawing a revolver from the drawer of a table in his real estate office at 137 East 118th street, Chicago, Jacob Bzdek shot and instantly killed a man known as Bruce Morgan after the latter had threatened to shoot him unless he turned over $1,500 which was in the safe. As Bzdek fired the shot which killed Morgan, the wounded man fired two shots, one of which struck the real estate dealer in the head, causing a serious wound.

Cars Hit Auto; Three Hurt.

Mrs. Charles W. Whitelaw, wife of the president of an ice and fuel company, was seriously hurt and her chauffeur perhaps fatally injured when her automobile was caught between two street cars in St. Louis. Mr. Whitelaw also was hurt.

CANADIAN TARIFF UP.

Secretary Knox Tries to Straighten Out a Complicated Tangle.

Officials in Washington are now deeply interested in the question of the application of the maximum or the minimum tariff to Canada. Secretary of State Knox has summoned John G. Foster, United States consul general at Ottawa, to Washington for conference.

Ambassador Bryce has, it is stated, entirely misunderstood the friendly expressions of President Taft with reference to Canada, and the United States has been represented as "easy" to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. As a result Canada seems to have adopted a close understanding with France that neither is to make any concessions, in the belief that if Canada evades the maximum France will also be able to evade it.

If the United States government had formal assurances from Canada that the Canadian government would countenance no concessions to the United States the situation would be regarded as very critical indeed. That is to say, the American maximum would almost certainly be applied to Canadian products and the Canadian surtax of 33⅓ per cent would be added to American imports into Canada.

Corporations all over the country are being urged to make a heroic effort to secure the repeal of the corporation tax law.

To secure the enactment of a law requiring the teaching of scientific motherhood in the public schools of Iowa, Mrs. B. F. Carroll, wife of the Governor of Iowa, will appeal to the legislators in the interests of the girls at the next session of the General Assembly.

A method of settling the women suffrage question in New York State is proposed by Senator Brackett, who has introduced a bill providing that on the day before next November election all the women of the State be invited to go to the polls and vote the same as men, yes or no, to the proposed suffrage amendment. The plan is not approved by the leading suffragists, who say that if the Legislature could grant women permission to vote on this question it could do so on others, which is impossible, so that the vote of the women, if passed, would be illegal.

Gov. Shafroth and Chief Justice Steele of Colorado have issued a signed statement to contradict the assertion made by Rev. Dr. Underhill, of Denver before the City Club of New York. Underhill said he indorsed from observation an article by an unnamed woman aiming to show that suffrage had demoralized the women of Colorado. The Governor and the judge say these statements are untrue, and that the women of Colorado are the equal of any in refinement, education and feminine graces, none of which qualities have been damaged by their fifteen years of participation in public affairs, while the government has immeasurably improved by such participation.

ONE KILLED, 11 SHOT IN CAIRO MOB CHARGE

Angry Men Storm Prison in Effort to Lynch Negro Youths for Purse Snatching.

SHERIFF AND DEPUTIES FIRE.

Deneen Orders Out the Militia, Which Is Held in Readiness for Serious Work.

A single volley from the force of five deputies mobilized at the county jail in Cairo, Ill., the other night probably averted the second lynching of a negro in Cairo in four months. In the fusillade, in which eleven shots were fired, one of the members of the mob was killed and at least two injured.

Two hundred men, who had been incited to violence by a man related to Miss Anna Pelley, whose murder precipitated the November riots in which "Froggie" James and Henry Salzer were lynched, stormed the jail shortly after midnight. After the sheriff's men had fired the mob returned the volley, breaking several windows in the jail. None of the deputies was injured, however. The militia company was ordered out by Gov. Deneen by long distance telephone after Sheriff Nellis had telephoned news of the rioting to Springfield.

The trouble was precipitated by the arrest on Wednesday night of a negro who twice, it is said, within a week had snatched purses from women. This boy, whose name is John Pratt, was seized just after he had seized the purse of a young woman relative of Miss Pelley. Miss Pelley's brother, who is on a visit to Cairo from St. Louis, immediately began making the rounds of the saloons, crying for vengeance for this second attack on a woman of his family. This led to the formation about midnight of a mob of fifty or sixty members. As this approached the jail it grew to more than 200. Then it was announced that a young woman was in jail charged with having set fire to more than twenty-two houses in Cairo since Christmas. The mob, as it approached the jail, cried loudly for these two negroes, and when it failed to heed the warning called by the sheriff he ordered his deputies to fire.

AD WOLGAST CHAMPION.

Defeat of Battling Nelson Brings Him Light-Weight Title.

Battling Nelson is not the durable Dane any more. The conqueror of Joe Gans was forced to relinquish his hold on the lightweight boxing championship in forty rounds to Ad Wolgast of Milwaukee at Point Richmond, Cal. Nelson was not counted out, but probably would have been in that session had not Referee Smith called a halt and awarded the fight and title to Wolgast. When the battle was stopped the Dane was in a pitiable condition. One of his eyes were completely closed and the other parts of his face were swollen to twice their size. Besides he was tottering around the ring too weak to hold up his hands. This was the first time that Nelson, since he sprang into the limelight in 1902 by beating Geo. Memsic in Milwaukee, was beaten to a standstill at his own game of slugging. He met his master at the identical style which won him the lightweight championship of the world and also made him famous.

Wolgast's victory was complete and decisive. Had Referee Smith not stopped the contest and it had gone the limit he would have been given the verdict. He had the better of nearly every round and during the course of the forty rounds struck probably five blows to Nelson's three in every session. Wolgast has been fighting exactly four years, having entered the game in 1906 in Cadillac, Mich., where he was born Feb. 8, 1888.

YOUNGSTOWN CONVERTED.

"Billy" Sunday Brings 6,500 Into Fold in Ohio's "Toughest City."

One of the most remarkable religious demonstrations ever witnessed occurred at the Youngstown (Ohio) tabernacle Sunday night when Evangelist "Billy" Sunday closed his six-weeks' campaign in what was conceded to be the most wicked city in Ohio. The thousands who heard the evangelist deliver the most hair-raising addresses that ever came from his lips became almost fanatical. Men and women leaped into the air, screamed, cried, hugged each other and prayed in a most beseeching way. The evangelist himself, carried away by the great demonstration, invoked them to continue, and at the end of the services was accompanied to his hotel by thousands of enthusiastic converts, where there was another demonstration. It is estimated that over 5,000 people, anxious to hear and see the evangelist, were turned away from the tabernacle. More than $10,000 was raised Sunday for Mr. Sunday, the only collection taken during the revival, for his personal use.

Parole Law Invalid.

The Illinois Supreme Court has held the present parole law unconstitutional. All paroles under it are invalid. The consensus of opinion is that Paul O. Stensland, the convicted Chicago banker, who was released recently, and all other convicts now at liberty will have to go back to the penitentiary.

CHAPTER XII.

With the house guard for a guide I found my host in a box-like den below stairs; a room with a writing-table, two chairs and a great iron strong-box for its scanty furnishings. The old man was sitting at the table when I looked in, his long nose buried in a musty parchment deed. He recognized me at a glance, despite the hussar uniform. In a twinkling he put the breadth of the oaken table between us, hurled the parchment deed into the open strong-box, slammed to the cover and gave a shrill alarm.

"Ho! you without, there! Here he is—I have him! Help! Murder!"

The guard, a burly Dardstamter, turned on his heel and stood at attention in the doorway, looking stolidly for his orders, not to the shrilling master of the house, but to the man who wore a uniform.

"'Tis naught," I said, speaking in German. "He mistakes me for a rittmeister of the rebels."

The soldier saluted, wheeled and vanished; and I sat down to wait till the old man's outcry should pause for lack of breath. When my chance came, I said:

"Calm yourself, Mr. Stair. You are in no present danger greater than that which you may bring upon yourself. Blot out all the past, if you please, and consider me now as a member of Lord Cornwallis' military family seeking quarters in your house by my Lord's express command."

"Quarters in my house?—ye're a rebel spy!" he cried. "I'll denounce ye to my Lord for what ye are, Ho! ye rascals, I say!"

"Peace!" I commanded, sternly; "this is but child's folly. No man in the British army would arrest me at your behest. Ring the bell and summon your factor lawyer. I would have a word or two in private with both of you."

He dropped into a chair, and I could see the sweat standing in great beads on his wrinkled forehead.

"D'ye mean to kill us both?" he gasped.

"Not if I can help it. But some better understanding is needful, and we will have it here and now, once for all. Will you ring, or shall I?"

He made no move to reach the bell-cord, and I rang for him. A grinning black boy came to the door, and seeing that Mr. Gilbert Stair was beyond giving the order, I gave it myself.

"Find Master Pengarvin and send him here quickly. Tell him Mr. Stair wants him."

There was a short interval of waiting and then the lawyer came. Being but a little wisp of a man, all malignance and no courage, he would have fled when he saw me. But I caught him by the collar and sent him scurrying around the table to keep his master company.

"Now, then; how much or how little have you two blabbed of the doings at Appleby Hundred some weeks since?" I demanded. "Speak out, and quickly."

'Twas the lawyer who obeyed, and now he was the trapped rat to snap blindly in despair.

"You will hang higher than Haman when the dragoons find you," he gritted out.

"Never mind," said I; "what's done is done. But it must be undone, and that swiftly and thoroughly. Lie out of it to Colonel Tarleton and the others as you will; Captain John Stuart and the baronet are not here to contradict you, and you are the only witnesses. Knock together some story that will hold water and lose no time about it. Do you understand?"

Seeing he was not to be put to the wall and spitted on the spot, the lawyer recovered himself.

"'Tis not the criminal at the bar who dictates terms, Captain Ireton," he said, with his hateful smirk. "You are under sentence of death, and that by a court lawful enough in war time."

"You refuse?" I said.

"Speaking for myself, I shall leave no stone unturned to bring you to book, Captain—when it suits my purpose."

I was loath to go to extremities with either of them; but my bridge of glass must be defended at all hazards.

"You would best reconsider, Mr. Pengarvin. At this present moment I am of my Lord Cornwallis' military family and I have his confidence. A word from me will put you both in arrest as persons whose loyalty in times past has been somewhat more than blown upon."

"Bah!" said the pettifogger. "Bluster is a good dog, but Holdfast is the better. You can prove nothing, as you well know. Moreover, with your own neck in a noose you dare not mess and meddle with other men's affairs."

"Dare not, you say? I'll tell you what I may dare, Master Attorney. If you are not disposed to meet me half way in this matter, I shall go to my Lord, tell him how I have been cheated out of my estate, declare the marriage with Mistress Margery, and see that you get your just deserts. And you may rest assured that this soldier-earl will right me, come what may.'

'Twas a bold stroke, the boldest of any I had made that morning; but I was wholly unprepared for its effect upon the lawyer. His rage was like that of some venomous little animal, a thing to make an onlooker shudder and draw back.

"Never!" he hissed; "never, I say! I'll kill her first—I'll—" He choked in the very exuberance of his malignance, and his face was like the face of a man in a fit.

'Twas then that I saw the pointing of his villainy and knew that Margery had meant when she said that for reasons of his own he was holding my betrayal in abeyance. He was Falconnet's successor and my rival. This little reptile aspired to be the master of my father's acres and the husband of my dear lady! And his holding off from denouncing me at once was also explained. Taking it for granted that the wife would bargain for the husband's life, he had made a whip of his leniency to flog Margery into subjection.

My determination was taken upon the instant. There was no safety for Margery whilst this plotting pettifogger was at large, and I stepped to the door and called the sentry. The Darmstadter came back and I pointed to the lawyer. Then, indeed, the furious little madman found his tongue and shrilled out his defiance.

"Curse you!" he yelled. "I'll be quits with you for this, Master Spy! 'Tis your hearing now, but mine will come, and you shall hang like a dog! I'll follow you to the ends of the earth—I'll ——"

I made a sign and the soldier brought his musket into play and pricked his prisoner with the bayonet in token that time pressed. So we were rid of the lawyer in bodily presence, though I could hear his snarlings and spittings as the big Darmstadter ran him out at the bayonet's point.

During this tilt between his factor and me, Mr. Gilbert Stair had stood apart, watchful but trembling. When we were alone I said:

"Now, Mr. Stair, I shall trouble you to billet me somewhere in your house, as a member of my Lord's family. Lead on, if you please, and I'll follow."

He went before me without a word, out of the little den and up the broad stair, doddering like a man grown ten years older in a breath, and catching at the balustrade to steady himself as we ascended. The room he gave me was at an angle in one of the crookings of the corridor, and pointing me to the door he went pottering away, still without a word or a look behind him.

The door was on the latch, but it gave reluctantly, letting me in suddenly when I set my shoulder to it. There was a quick little cry, half of anger, half of affright, from within. I drew back hastily, and in the act my spur caught the door and slammed it shut behind me. Gilbert Stair had shown me to my lady's chamber. I warrant you my lady's flashing eyes would have crisped me to a cinder where I stood fumbling with one hand behind me for the latch of the slammed door. Scorn, indignation, outraged maiden modesty, all these thrust at me like air-drawn daggers; and if need not her, "Fie, for shame, Captain Ireton!—and you would call yourself a gentleman!" to set me afire with prinklings of abashment.

What could I saw or do? The door-latch would not find itself to let me fly; and as for excusings, I could not tell her that her own father had thrust me thus upon her. Yet, had she let me be, I hope I should have had the wit to find the door fastening and the grace to run away; in truth, I had the latch in hand when she lashed out at me again.

"How are you better than the man you warned me of?" she cried. And then, in a tempest of grief: "Oh! you would not leave me the respect I bore you; you must even rob me of that to fling it down and trample it under foot!"

I stumbled from the room, thinking only how I should quickest rid me of myself. Hastening to my garret sleeping-place I buckled on my sword, found my shako, and went straight to my Lord's bed-chamber. My rap at the door went unanswered, and a broad-shouldered young fellow in a lieutenant's uniform, lounging on a settle in the clock landing of the stair, told me Lord Cornwallis was gone out.

I was face to face with this young lieutenant before I recognized him; being so bent upon haste I should have passed him on the landing without a second glance had he not risen to grip me by the shoulders.

"Why!" he cried, 'is it thus you pass an old friend without a word, Captain Ireton?"

'Twas my good death-watch; that Lieutenant Tybee of the light-horse who had sunk the British officer in the man in that trying night at Appleby Hundred. I returned his hearty greeting as well as I might, and would have explained my present state and standing but that I was loath to lie to him. But as to this, he saved me the shame of it.

"I knew you were no rebel, Captain Ireton; indeed, I made bold to say as much to our colonel, after it was all over. I told him a soft word or two would have won you back to your old service. You see I knew better than the others what lay beneath all your madnesses that night."

"You knew somewhat, but not all," I said; and thereupon, lest he should involve me deeper and detain me longer when I was athirst to be gone, I hastened to ask where I might hope to find his Lordship and Colonel Tarleton.

"'Tis the hour for parade; you will find them at the camp," he replied. And then, out of the honest English heart of him: "Have you made your peace, Captain? Do you need a friend to go with you?"

I said I had been granted a hearing by Lord Cornwallis but a little while before; that by my Lord's appointment I was now a sort of honorary aide-de-camp.

"Good!" said the lieutenant, gripping my hand in a way to make me wince for the lie-in-effect hidden in the simple statement of fact. Then he roared at the soldier standing guard at the house door below: "A mount for Captain Ireton—and be swift about it!"

I rode slowly across the common, skirting the commissary's quarters and making mental notes of all I saw; this from soldier habit solely, for at the time I had little thought of living on to make a spy's use of them. I need not drag you back and forth with me on the search I made to find Lord Cornwallis. 'Tis enough to say that after missing him here and there, I ran him to earth at the court house, where, it was told me, my Lord was sitting in council with his staff officers.

The old court house of our greater Mecklenburg was a stout wooden building raised upon brick pillars to leave a story underneath. In the time of the British occupation this lower story served as a market house, and the public entrance to the court room above was reached by steps on the outside. In my boyhood days this outer stair was the only one; but now in wandering aimlessly through the market-place beneath I found another flight in a corner; the "jury stair," they called it, since it provided the means of egress from the jury box above.

The sight of this inner stair set me plotting. Could I make use of it to come unseen into the council chamber of Lord Cornwallis and his officers?

Happily for the success of the adventure there was an angle in the narrow stair to hide me whilst I lifted the trap door in the court-room floor a scant half-inch and got my bearings. As I had hoped, the trap opened behind the jury box, and I was able to raise it cautiously and so to draw myself up into the room above, unseen and unheard.

A peep around the corner of the high jury stalls showed me my Lord and his suite gathered about the lawyers' table in front of the bar. Of the staff I recognized only Stedman, the commissary-general; Tarleton, looking something the worse for his late illness; Major Hanger, his second in command, and the young Irishman, Lord Rawdon. At the moment of my espial, Cornwallis was speaking, and I drew back to listen, well enough content to be in earshot.

"What we have to consider now is how best to reach Ferguson with an express instantly," his Lordship was saying. "This rising of the over-mountain men is likely to prove a serious matter—not only for the major, but for the king's cause in the two provinces. Lacking positive orders to the contrary, Ferguson will fight—we all know that; and if he should be defeated 'twill hopelessly undo his work among the border loyalists and set us back another twelvemonth."

"Then your Lordship will order him to come in with what he has?" said a voice which I knew for Colonel Tarleton's.

"Instanter, had I a sure man to send."

"I can find you a hundred amongst the late royalist recruits." 'Twas young Lord Rawdon who said this.

"I would sooner trust this new aide of mine. He comes straight from the major and can find his way back again."

Tarleton laughed. "I fear we shall never agree upon him, my Lord. I know not how he has made his peace with you, but I do assure you he is as great a rascal as ever went unhung. 'Tis true, as you say, I did not go into the particulars; but were Captain Stuart or Sir Francis Falconnet here, either of them would convince your Lordship in a twinkling."

(To be continued.)

A Mean Trick.

"Talking of mean tricks," said the big man, "there was Ballantine. This man Ballantine came in late to a song recital at Palm Beach, and there wasn't a vacant seat in the house.

"Ballantine noticed Mrs. Jerome Blank. Mrs. Jerome Blank, he knew, had a very handsome husband that she kept a strict watch over. She didn't like him to associate with any of the fair sex.

"Ballantine, edging near to Mrs. Blank, who had an excellent seat, said in a loud voice to a friend:

"'Who was that enormously pretty girl I saw Jerome Blank talking to on the pier?'

"In about four seconds Mrs. Blank was gone and Ballantine was seated comfortably in her chair."—Kansas City Star.

A Cute Child.

"Well," answered his wife, "it may not be exactly polite, but it shows he has a sense of humor."

Accident Statistics.

One man in every twenty meets with an accident yearly.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

While at work in the Sunnyside coal mine at Evansville, Jacob Howard fell before a loaded coal car which weighed several tons and was run over. His body was crushed and little hope is entertained for his recovery.

While out hunting, George Frazee, of Danville, was accidentally shot in the legs and seriously wounded by his uncle, Thomas Keel, of Westville, whom he has been visiting. The boy's legs may have to be amputated.

Statistics supplied by the Pennsylvania company show that 1,100 men are now engaged in the train service on the Fort Wayne division of the Pennsylvania lines. Of this number 200 are conductors, 360 are brakemen, 250 are engineers, 240 are firemen and the remainder are employed in the yards as switchmen.

Mrs. Mary K. Landis, mother of ex-Congressman Charles Landis, of Delphi; ex-Congressman Frederick Landis, of Logansport; Judge K. M. Landis, Chicago; Dr. John Landis, Cincinnati, and Walter Landis, Postmaster of Porto Rico, is reported dying with pneumonia. Four of her sons are at her bedside. Walter Landis has been summoned from Porto Rico.

Thomas Taggart was in Indianapolis one day last week the first time since his serious accident in the south on a hunting trip. Taggart came to get a few of the shot removed from his neck and face. Taggart's right eye, which suffered most seriously when he received the discharge from a shotgun in his face and breast and shoulders, is getting along satisfactorily, and there is no doubt, it is said, that the sight will be preserved.

John D. Haseman, who has been on a scientific expedition in South America for the last two years, returned to his home in Linton. He brought many species unknown to scientists from the jungles of South America to the Carnegie institute at Pittsburg. The most impotrant of the many specimens brought back by Haseman is a species of animal life that is said to be the missing link between the salamander and the fish. This specimen, according to Haseman, is supplied with feet.

The home of Col. H. P. Dorsett, of Belle Union, was destroyed by fire and only the heroic efforts of the aged man succeeded in saving the life of his little granddaughter, Maria Hitch, of Gibson county, who had been visiting him. The colonel awoke in the middle of the night to find the house in flames. He rushed to the room of his granddaughter uptsairs, and by groping his way through dense smoke and flames, reached her bedside in time to seize the child in his arms and carry her out just before the collapse of the floor in the room. The house and contents were lost. The fire started from a defective flue.

Chicago capitalists have sent a representative to Fort Wayne to interest business men in a project to establish a plant for the manufacture of peat fuel at some point near that city. It is said that there are in Allen county some sitxeen thousand acres of peat bog from which abundant material can be obtained, and an effort is being made to arrange with local coal dealers to handle the output of the factory. It is a $50,000 enterprise, and the claim is made that the fuel can be supplied to the consumer at a lower price than that of soft coal. It is hoped to have the new fuel on the market in time for next winter's use.

Frank Taylor, principal of the East Columbus schools, holds the record for spanking in Bartholomew county, and local school officials are inclined to believe that he also holds the state record. A few days ago a great many of the pupils became unruly, and Taylor ordered twenty of them to remain after school. He suspended one for two days, disposed of the case of another and then forced the remaining eighteen to bend over their seats. Armed with a paddle Taylor administered punishment to each and every unruly pupil. He finished the job with neatness and dispatch and found, on consulting his watch, that the entire operation had only taken twenty minutes.

All records for house moving were broken near Tipton recently and in his anxiety to expedite matters Vern Harlow, aged 23, lost his little finger in a cogwheel and may lose his right hand. William Shuck sold his farm and reserved his house, which he intended to move to another farm purchased about a mile away. He hired two big 30-horse power engines to move the house, which had been placed on runners like a bob-sled. In exactly thirty minutes from the time the work began the house had been removed to the new farm. Harlow was running one of the engines and in his anxiety to make time reached over the boiler for an oil can and caught his hand in the machinery.

Will P. Blair, of Terre Haute, president of the National Brick Manufacturers' Association is in Washington to exert his influence in favor of the creation of a federal bureau of mines.

Marion Black, of Fort Wayne, is at work on the construction of an airship of the monoplane type with which he expects to give exhibitions in aerial navigation. Black is constructing a motor, which he says will develop 40-horse power, although it weighs but 125 pounds.

The Washington city council has passed an ordinance requiring all dogs to be muzzled. In case the police find a dog unmuzzled the ordinance demands that the officer at once kill the animal.

James Crockett, a farmer living 17 miles southeast of Washington, in Reeve township, captured an American eagle in a trap. The bird had been stealing the farmer's chickens. The eagle is a fine specimen of its kind and is being held in captivity.

It was learned at Valparaiso from Linkoping, Sweden, that John Bleckman, of Chesterton, who died at the poorhouse last month, left an estate in his native country valued at $35,000. He has heirs in this country, but their whereabouts are unknown.

Patrolmen of Muncie will don women's clothes in the near future and serve as decoys in an effort to capture purse-snatchers if the plan of Chief of Police Otto Williamson does not miscarry. The latest victim of a purse-snatcher in Muncie is Miss Gertrude Feldman.

Fred Gretchen, aged 55 years, had a peculiar accident. He was sitting quietly in a chair at his home in Bedford when his left limb became affected by a muscular contraction which gave it a severe jerk. The involuntary action caused the bone above the knee to snap. Medical attention was summoned and the fracture reduced.

The Brandon-Henderson insurance agency at Anderson was sold by the assignee, Charles P. Colchen, to Wallace B. Campbell, of that place, for $392. The agency recently assigned, showing assets of $600 and liabilities of $1.90. Campbell will probably continue the busines of the company. He had no interest in the old agency, but owns the building in which the office was located.

A movement has been started by Spencer members of the Grand Army to consolidate all the Grand Army of the Republic posts in Owen county. The action has been made necessary by the falling off in membership of all the posts in this vicinity and the lapsing of some, due to numerous deaths in the ranks of the veterans. If the merger can be affected the new organization will retain the name of Spencer post, Gettysburg, No. 93.

William Ned Harmon, living west of Owensville, has offered a reward of $5 for the capture of a strange animal that has been prowling through his premises. The animal is half cat and half rabbit. It first appeared at the home of James Land. The animal has a head resembling that of a common house cat. It has cat claws, but its legs and tail are like those of a rabbit. The strangest thing about this creature is that it runs like a rabbit and makes a noise like a cat.

Judge Frank Feely, of Muncie, is adopting the "pledge cure" for habitual drunkards. The first to take the "cure" was Frank Dennihan, who has been frequently arrested. Dennihan, in the company of an officer, went to the St. Lawrence Catholic rectory and there on his knees before the Rev. Father Kohl, agreed not to taste liquor for a period of two years. Then Judge Feely released him. Others are to receive similar treatment in the hope of working permanent reform in them instead of punishing them.

The death of Martin L. Bundy, aged 92, in Newcastle, recalls his explanation of the cause for longevity, given to a friend some years ago. Mr. Bundy said: "There is nothing, I think, which contributes to longevity more than an even temper of mind. We know that certain things must happen, and therefore, it is better not to worry and fret when they occur. If any one must walk the floor and wring his hands in agony, let the other fellow do it." Mr. Bundy did not use liquor in any form, and was never addicted to the use of tobacco.

It is understood at Peru that negotiations have been opened between the Hagenbeck & Wallace, Sells-Floto and "101 Ranch" shows to enter into a routing arangement which will amount to a concentrated opposition to the three circuses controlled by the Ringling Brothers. During the lively circus war which was waged in the south last fall, all three of these shows are said to have felt the handiwork of the Ringling opposition force. When the smoke of the battle had cleared away there was an exceedingly bitter feeling toward the Baraboo, (Wis.), circus men. It is pointed out that the three "independent" shows which are among the biggest of the tented enterprises outside of the Ringling family, can be so routed that while they would not come in direct opposition to the Barnum & Bailey, Ringling Brothers and the Forepaugh-Sells shows, they would sap the "feeders" which contribute to the territory where the "circus kings" might be operating.

Frightened by an alarm of fire which caused $30,000 damage at Henry, Miss Clete Erne, daughter of William Erne, was so badly shocked that physicians were unable to save her life. She had been ill several days.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Chicago Trade says:

"A slight comparative decrease in the volume of payments through the banks, additional storms interfering wth freight movements, rising security markets and still higher levels for breadstuffs and meats furnish the outstanding features of current developments. There is also a slower flow of new demands in prominent branches of manufacturers, which is due to temporary causes and does not weaken confidence in the general business outlook.

"Commercial defaults in both number and liabilities make the best exhibit thus far this year, and the position of credits is very encouraging and favorable to a larger use of capital. Other gratifying factors which impart strength are the easier tendencies in money and the steady progress which appears in production of the mills and factories.

"Some accumulation appears in hides, with prices more favorable to tanners, and the buying is steady in leather, footwear and novelties. Building materials again are under widening request for the coming spring work. Country buyers attend the general merchandise markets in remarkable force and the buying is broad in dry goods millinery, clothing, shoes and house furnishings.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number 19, against 33 last week, 25 in 1909 and 41 in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 5, against 7 last week, 6 in 1909 and 12 in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade reports are rather more cheerful. Visible evidences of expansion in the jobbing trade, in consonance with the advance of the season, are found in the reports that the large numbers of buyers in the leading markets, especially in the West, Southwest and parts of the South, have taken hold more freely, although even in the markets of the Southwest, whence the best reports come, there are evidences of conservatism, based largely on the high prices asked for goods. The least favorable feature in the country's trade at present is the continued sagging in export trade in farm products, an effect easily traceable to the high prices ruling for breadstuffs, meats, animals and cotton.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Feb. 17 were 269, as against 249 last week, 232 in the like week of 1909, 326 in 1908, 177 in 1907 and 186 in 1906.—Bradstreet's.

Tickling in the Throat

"Just a little tickling in the throat!" Is that what troubles you? But it hangs on! Can't get rid of it! Home remedies don't take hold. You need something stronger—a regular medicine, a doctor's medicine. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral contains healing, quieting, and soothing properties of the highest order. Ask your doctor about this. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Constipation positively prevents good health. Then why allow it to continue? An active liver is a great preventive of disease. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. What does your doctor say?

That's Money Enough.

We don't care how fine or large a building they make of the proposed new court house—the finer the better, if they keep within the proposed limit of $250,000 for the building complete and ready to move into. But just watch and see if they don't let a contract for the bare building for about $250,000. Then the architects will get $12,500 on top of that, and perhaps $50,000 will be spent for furnishings, heating apparatus, etc. If they put up a building on the plans set out and complete it and furnish it for $250,000 we shall be agreeably surprised to say the least. Excuse us for being suspicious. We can't help but think that a building on the plan laid out cannot be constructed for the amount of money the promotors have led the people to believe that would be sufficient.—Butler Record.

Many of the troubles that we see coming down the road toward our farm pass by without stopping.

When hoops come off barrels, hoop them with wire. Cheaper than buying new barrels and anybody can do it.

The man who puts a lot of cider in his cellar to get hard is laying up for his boys something that can not be kept in barrels.

The windy days of spring are here. Rattle a log chain down the chimney and get the soot out before it burns out, and maybe burns the house, too.

Two good eyes to a hill of potatoes are a plenty. We make a mistake many times in seeding too heavily. Good stocky shoots are better than spindling ones.

Burn all the old brush heaps now and get rid of a thousand and one pests that have had their home there waiting for warm weather to bring them into activity again.

Keep the boys from fooling with any of the farm animals. Joking with calves or colts will surely bring jokes that make us laugh out of the other corner of our mouths.

Beams & Baker.

The subscribers using telephone line No. 76 had a merry time, last Sunday afternoon, listening to the copious flow of refined language between two families using the line. We thought the telephone was to be used for a purpose different than airing family troubles, and the use of such language should be prohibited over all telephone lines, especially party lines.

Subscriber.

The above clipping was taken from last week's issue of THE NEWS. Subscriber thinks the telephone should be used for a different purpose than that of "Airing family troubles." Well, we'll agree with him, or her as the case may be, in regard to this question; but it seems while Subscriber is right on this matter, we wonder how he discovered this breach of the rules of the telephone company unless he, was violating another of the company's rules, that of listening to conversation not intended for them. The writer believes the rule against "rubbernecking" is just as important as the one forbidding bad language and we believe from the standpoint of the telephone company, more so, as party lines are generally loaded to their full capacity and sometimes more, and when several receivers are taken down the service is weakened, so the party desiring service is defrauded of what is due him on account of a lot of "pin headed rubbernecks" who have no other motive for listening than that of gratifying a morbid curiosity for that which is none of their concern. People of this stripe will not hesitate to read your letters, and on every occasion in a variety of ways poke their inquistive proboscis into your business. If Subscriber found out in a legitimate use of the 'phone of this quarrel we have nothing to say as he has a right to listen (a short time only) to see if the line is in use, they might catch a few words that way, but any person who lays claim to the title of lady or gentleman, would not be guilty of such a breach of etiquette, as listening at length at any conversation not intended for them, neither will they deprive any person the benefit of a business conversation by a lot of silly nonsensical gossip. Telephones are intended primarily for business purposes and should not be used as a means of spreading scandal or for the entertainment of feather brained pin heads.

WOVEN WIRE FENCE.

There is so many makes of fence on the market, some good, some very poor. I have handled a number of different makes and am convinced that the AMERICAN FENCE is the best value for the money of any fence on the market. The strength of fence depends on the weight of the wire in the fence. Now compare the weight of a ROD of AMERICAN FENCE with the weight of a rod of any other fence then compare the price. Do not take the dealers word as to how much it weighs but put it on the scales and weigh it. I can sell you

American Fence at Less Than 3 cents per pound

Can you buy any other fence so cheap?

I have eight different styles on hand now. The American Steel and Wire Company make nearly all the wire that is woven in the different makes of fence and it is folly for an agent of any other make of fence to claim a superior quality of wire or of galvanizing. Every manufacturer of fence has an idea as to what temper the wire should be for a fence and orders his wire tempered accordingly, in other words he experimenting at the Farmers expense. The American Steel and Wire Company have passed the experimental stage and are producing a composition of Steel for Fence that is perfectly adapted for it. Every farmer that has had any experience with wire knows that wire exposed to the weather becomes hard and brittle, this feature has been largely eliminated in the special wire used in AMERICAN FENCE. While the wire is stiff and springy it is flexible enough to be easily spliced and will remain so. We will explain other good features if you will call and see us.

The court house question is the topic of the day in DeKalb county and some of our neighboring towns are making an effort to get it moved to their town, namely Garrett and Waterloo. We would offer a suggestion that it be moved to St. Joe. We can raise money toward that but it's useless to think about such a thing. Just the other evening a number of men assembled themselves together and moved the court house after dark to Waterloo, but they thought they would leave the jail where it is. Yes we had better leave it all set. Don't you think.

A Letter From Boston

Rev. Owen W. Rummell of 72 Mt. Vernon St, Boston, Mass., writes an interesting letter regarding his sightseeing in that great city.

Editor St. Joe News:

It has been suggested that my old friends and acquaintances, as well as your readers in general would be interested in knowing what an ordinary observer can see about the city of Boston. Any American naturally appreciates references to things and places which concerned our early history and independence. No city I think can boast of so many things of such interest as this. Add to this, the fact that the interest of her citizens in educational and reform projects has been sustained from the origin of the colony 1620 (Harvard College having been founded but sixteen years later) and one will scarcely dispute the titles of "The Hub" and "Classic" which have so long been applied to her. Yet in spite of the gags in the funny columns about the precariousness of her children and the exactness of her "school manus" one sees occasional things which are calculated to disillusion him, with respect to the general culture of her citizens. For instance, I recently noticed a big real estate sign with "easey payments" advertised—and was told not long since that an old gentleman appeared at a prominent book store and asked for a Bible in the language in which it was written—referring to the King James version. Then if we remember that the present population is largely immigrant, in-so-much that it is 75 per cent Roman Catholic, the conviction that Boston is not wholly Classic, becomes fixed. The foreigners find much attraction in our eastern cities. The city of Charleston, a suburb of Boston, may be cited as an example. Twenty-five years ago it was 80 per cent protestant, largely native Americans, now with a population of 48,000, 40,000 are Catholics, mostly Irish.

As I do not wish to take up too much of your valuable space, I will do little more than indicate the points of interest in this letter, leaving for a later time the larger treatment of these things.

The ordinary Boston guide will take you on a tour of two hours duration, a foot, for which he charges you fifty cents, or for one dollar you may take an automobile trip, touching points of greater distance—getting glances short and sweet. On these trips you will probably visit the following places in the city: The new state house; the Boston common, 48 acres of park in the heart of the city, with the public garden—flower garden, and place of statues 38 acres in close proximity; the old granary burying ground, resting place of many early celebrities, including Otis, Adams, parents of Franklin, etc., etc.; the old state house, occupied by the royal governors of Mass Colony; Faneuil hall, the "Cradle of Liberty"; scenes of the Boston Massacre and Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere house, old south church, attended by the royal governers, the Boston public library, Bunker Hill monument across the river in Charleston, Harvard College, the Washington elm still standing where Washington took command of the American army 1775 and the new grand opera house costing upward of $3,000,000 recently completed. By automobile or train you would make excursions to Mt. Auburn cemetery where so many poets and publicists lie buried—to Concord and Axington 20 miles to the north and to Plymouth Rock 40 miles to the northeast. Another time I can tell something in detail concerning some of these points of interest.

M. E. Announcements.

The Epworth League and preaching services were fairly well attended owing to the bad weather at the M. E. church, Spencerville. The Sunday School was well attended, come with us we will do thee good. Eighteen contestants of Spencer township met in the Grammer Room at Spencerville High School for the purpose of deciding on three representatives for the county contest at Auburn, Saturday, March 5th., P. M. There were six contestants from each of the following schools: No. 8, Coburntown, Spencerville Intermediate and Grammer rooms. The result, after two hours spelling, the following being chosen to represent Spencer township: The Misses Agnes Shull of No. 8 (age 14) Evangeline Fisher, of the Intermediate room of Spencerville (age 11) and Olive Beerbower, of the Grammer room (age 12) however, the contest was carried out to see who could "spell down" the result was Miss Olive Beerbower did the trick. As has been the experience in other late contests, the "easy words" seemed to be the stumbling-blocks such as 'hush' "both" "o'clock" "elbow" "twilight" "prepare" "dessert". The alternates are Ray Zimmerman, Grace Shaner and Fern Walker. Principle, Miss O'brien did the pronouncing act and all contestants evidenced that they had put forth an effort to win. Now it is up to the three contestants to show old DeKalb that Spencer township has the best spellers of all. We hope you win.

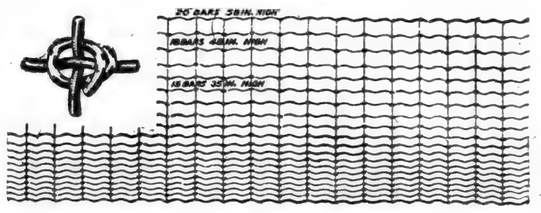
"The Michigan" Wire Fence.



Is made of a good quality of carbonized steel wire, having a tensile strength nearly double that of common annealed steel or soft wire. Years of experience in the manufacture of wire fencing have demonstrated that the best wire for fence purposes is one that is both hard and tough—hard without being brittle and tough without being soft. The wire of which "The Michigan" is made combines these qualities, having just enough points carbon to give it strength and elasticity, and yet tough enough to admit of splicing without drawing the temper. All wire is thoroughly galvanized and ample provision for contraction and expansion is made in the tension curves.

Note carefully the lock or tie which unites the lateral and upright wires. Observe that it is a simple, smooth and strong lock, having the legs well hooked over the line wire as well as locked over each other, thereby preventing a spreading of the legs when under pressure. This lock is not driven down on the line and stay wires; thus they are not injured at the point of intersection.

VISIONS FROM HEAVEN.

By Rev. A. L. Byron-Curtis.

Text.—"Whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."—Acts 26: 19.

"In all ages there have been three kinds of persons in respect to visions. Those who never see any; those who think they do, and those who really and truly do. St. Paul was one of those who really saw a vision. In his impassioned oration before King Agrippa we are given to understand that he positively saw a vision from heaven, and that the same changed the whole course of his life. In the middle of the day, while on a journey, he and his company were overcome by a supernatural event. They all fell to the ground. A positive order, a command, was given to St. Paul by the voice of God, to follow a positive and certain line of duty. He followed in. It the course of a few years his obedience to the command of that vision brought him into the presence of King Agrippa before whom he made the remarkable speech from which our text is taken. He recounted the events, and in the outburst of oratory in the presence of that heathen king, the meat and kernel of it all is contained in our text. "Whereupon, O King Agrippi, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." He was not a coward, he was not a moral or intellectual weakling. He just faced his duty as it was pointed out to him and was thus enabled, not to boast, but to point to it as a proof of his having had the vision.

I will not deny that common and obscure people may receive visions from heaven such as I have not, and may never see. But I want to tell you this, that all visions from heaven do not come out of the clouds, or from the ethereal space above us. No. Any call to duty, and bidding of you or me to do special work for God, or the church or for our fellow man is the voice of God, a vision from heaven, calling to us. The church calling us, through our pastors, by its holy seasons, by its principals. God calls us in the voice of opportunity, through the voice of opportunity at our elbow, through the voice of conscience, which is the voice of God.

Don't be waiting for a call from out of the clouds ere you wake up and go to work. That has happened to but a few persons in entire historf of time. The only reason St. Paul was called as he was, was because there was particular and divine work for him to do. There have been but few people called as he was, or for that matter with a supernatural vision as was he.

The only reason you haven't been called as was he, is because the opportunities for service and duty for you are plain and can be discerned by your natural eye, recognized by the force of your own inner conscience.

JESUS AND THE GRAFTERS.

By Rev. W. A. Bartlett.

On one occasion only did Jesus Christ resort to violence in His three years' ministry. It was when He came in from the hill country to Jerusalem and found the temple, the center of religion, surrounded by grafters. These men were making a fat living by the sale of sacrificial animals at extortionate prices and exchanging money for temple coin at rates that would satisfy the most thrifty tourist or steamship agencies of the present day. The Lord's indignation was so great that He personally tipped over the tables of the money changers and, making a whip of cords, drove these parasites from the courts. This splendid exhibition of authority on the part of a stranger, who made the horde of traffickers take to their heels, revealed not only the divine nature of the Master but shows that one man with right on his side may put to flight an army of dishonest creatures who subsist on their fellows.

Graft is as old as Egypt—old as the annals of man. It is more low and disgusting in these days because men sin against the greater light. In the wonderful Passion Play, as given at Oberammergau, Bavaria, the great mob which cries out "Crucify Him," while incited by the priests, is made up of these same traders, who never forgot that their unholy business was destroyed by One who said: "Take these things hence; make not my Father's house a house of merchandise." It was graft that crucified Jesus, hand in hand with a corrupt priesthood.

The church of to-day may not be under the accusation of graft. It is undoubtedly purer. But men ought to regard business and their dealings with society as sacred as any obligation. Nothing can be more depraved and reveal such a lost condition of soul as this attempt to live off of others, to deal dishonestly, to get money without earning it.

There are two ways to deal with it, and both are necessary. First, the whip of cords for those who are beyond redemption. They are to be driven forth with all the indignation of an aroused public conscience. Jesus did not wait for these temple grafters to reform. They were old in sin, so He drove them forth. Not one more moment would He permit them to pollute His Father's house.

The second way, is for the church, business, school, club and society in general to train in honesty. The spiritual authority is always the great authority, and it must be shown that honesty is right and that dishonesty is wrong. Methods of policy will fail. The most rigorous legal prosecutions will fall short. Every boy and girl in all the homes and churches and schools are to be trained to believe that it is a heinous offense in the sight of God and man to deviate from the straight and narrow way of true and upright living and fair and strictly honest dealing.

WOMEN'S DUTIES.

By Rev. William T. McElveen.

Text—"Your daughters shall be as cornerstones hewn after the similitude of a palace."—Psalm 144:12.

Men as yet do not know exactly what women are for; and what's more woman does not know as yet what she is for. One does not need any better proof of that than the wordy warfare which is continually being waged by women themselves on the subject of suffrage. Some of the women want it, and more of them don't. Some of them feel it is their right and their duty to help to govern the nation, and others of them maintain that they have more than their hands full in governing the home and the inmates thereof.

Woman has been put in the stall with the cattle; she has been exalted to a place by the right side of the gods. She has been called a nuisance and an angel. She has been said to be incapable of anything, and she has been termed "heaven's last and best gift." The boy of ten looks with contempt on his little sister, and declares with curled up lip "she is nothing but a girl"; the youth of twenty looks admiringly at some other fellow's sister, and fondly declares she is God's masterpiece. Socrates thanked God daily that he was not born a woman. Lowell sings that earth's noblest thing is a woman perfected Boucicault wishes that Adam had died with all his ribs in him, while Shakespeare had so much admiration for womanhood that he depicted only heroines—he tells us of no heroes.

King David, passing by his beautiful palace, and thinking of the young women of his realm, notices the beautiful polished marble cornerstones of his palace. And he thinks the young women of his realm should occupy the same place in the fabric of society that these beautiful carved cornerstones occupy in the palace. They should be both useful and ornamental. They should be fair to look upon, and add to the sweeter and more graceful qualities of life. They should do something toward making the earth a better and happier place to live in.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

COME THOU ALMIGHTY KING.

Anonymous.

[No one knows who wrote this popular church hymn. In the greater number of books it is credited to Charles Wesley That is because it first appeared in company with some of his hymns; but neither Wesley nor his contemporaries claimed it as his. There are some reasons for thinking that it was the work of the Rev. Martin Madan (1726-1790), an English Methodist clergyman well known both as a vivid orator and an enthusiastic musician. He practiced law for several years before being ordained. Later he was chaplain of the Lock Hospital. The hymn, with its tune, "Italian Hymn," has won for itself no uncertain place in the worship of American churches, although its use is by no means so general in other lands.]

Come, Thou Almighty King,
Help us Thy name to sing,
Help us to praise;
Father, all glorious,
O'er all victorious,
Come, and reign over us,
Ancient of Days!

Come, Thou Incarnate Word,
Gird on Thy mighty sword;
Our prayer attend;
Come, and Thy people bless;
And give Thy word success;
Spirit of Holiness
On us descend.

Come, Holy Comforter!
Thy sacred witness bear,
In this glad hour!
Thou, who almighty art,
Now rule in every heart,
And ne'er from us depart,
Spirit of Power!

To the Great One in Three,
The highest praises be,
Hence evermore!
His sovereign majesty
May we in glory see,
And to eternity
Love and adore.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't expect a man's wind in church to give a clew to his weight outside.

Don't fail to strive to get more in your work than you hope to get by it.

Don't overlook the fact that some big aspirations may be smaller than a little act.

Don't forget that the discovery of the things that really matter is happiness.

Don't overlook the fact that many present problems are past follies getting ripe.

Don't forget that if all our prayers were answered we would never learn to pray.

Don't try to carry a great burden unless you know how to set it down and forget it at times.

What, Already?

"What did papa say?"

"He said you were hardly old enough to think of marriage."

"Humph. He's forgotten that I'm going on six."

Very Small, Indeed.

"De Nerve has just been refused by that Boston girl."

"How do you know?"

"I just saw him."

"Saw him! You must have had a magnifying glass with you."

Penny Wise.

A (to B)—Got a penny?

B produces the coin.

A—Put it down here. And here is another (producing a second from his pocket). Now, I am going to ask you a very simple question, easy for any one to answer. If you answer it in the affirmative you take both coins. If you answer it in the negative I take both coins. But—have you seen the trick before?

B (unsuspiciously caught)—No.

A—Thanks. I take the pennies.—Illustrated Bits.

The Answer.

"Do you believe in destiny, or in effort?"

"Effort. I've been a successful man."—Cleveland Leader.

Lacking Proof.

"There is one curious thing I have often noticed about public men."

"What is that?"

"When a man is accused of wearing somebody's collar and declares he is his own master he seldom appears to be self-possessed."—Baltimore American.

Always Gorwing.

"Every time I meet that fellow he tells me a hard-luck tale."

"The same old story?"

"No; he runs it as a serial."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In the Cellar.

Moving Along.

"Is the world really progressing?"

"No doubt about it. Forty years ago men wore plug hats to play baseball in."—Washington Herald.

His Woe.

"You don't seem to be enjoying yourself so much to-day. Are you worried at the office?"

"No; it isn't that. Fact is, I've got a crease in my sock."—Bon Vivant.

Even In the Air.

First Bird—Here comes one of those aeroplanes.

Second Bird—Let's fly away. I can't bear the smell of the nasty gasoline they use.

Something Wrong.

"I can't understand it. They must be short of help at the gas office."

"What's the matter?"

"Our bill this month is 12 cents less than it was last month and so far they haven't sent up a man to test the meter."—Detroit Free Press.

His Wooing.

"I'll never marry a poor man."

"Marry me, then!"

"You are poor."

"I'll be the richest man in the world, when I have you."—Cleveland Leader.

Had to Keep On.

"I didn't know you intended to go around the world."

"I didn't when I started. But I went through Europe without tipping and was afraid to turn back."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Extravagance.

Husband—What! Three hundred and fifty dollars for that gown? My dear, how extravagant you are!

Wife—No more than you. Didn't you spend $75 for your last suit?—Life.

Won't Do.

"I'm going to write popular songs."

"You can't do it. You haven't the proper education."

"Why, man, I'm a college graduate, and I've made a specialty of poetical forms and English literature."

"Aha! That's just what I said."—Cleveland Leader.

Immune.

Farmer Grayneck—S'pose you are goin' to git the automobile fever, Enry, like everybody else?

Farmer Hornbeal—Nope! I've been vaccinated in the pocketbook, and it took.—Puck.

Skating Home.

"How do you like that?" he asked as he finished cutting his own name on the ice.

"Put 'Mrs.' in front of it and I'd like it very much."

PITY THE EXPATRIATE.

Eyed Askance in Country of His Adoption and Scorned at Home.

Patriotism is a feeling nature instilled into us for the support of the government and our personal inconvenience. We are born in one country with a temperament adapted to another, and we try to steal away from home much like a ball player meaning to leave base if he can run fast and far enough to take up his position with firmness on another spot. We do not want to be seen leaving, we are never quite comfortable away, and, sadly enough, we are aliens in the place we like enough to live in, while all the time we suspect we belong in the home town that irritates us to the verge of distraction, and, if we come back to die in it, and find ourselves regarded as outsiders and grudgingly directed to streets the names of which we have unaccountably forgotten.

It is perfectly possible for an Englishman to be born of American parents in Chicago. He leans from the moment of his birth toward England. He goes there as naturally as a homing pigeon, and when he finally settles down there for all time he is a sensitive, quivering soul, doomed to eternal hurt because of his position. Surely if any one ever earned England and made it his own such a man does, but it is granted him unwillingly, and he is constantly reminded that it is only a loan. He is eyed askance by both English and Americans and lives in a perpetual state of justifying himself, the New York Evening Sun says. He has given up so much that he deserves double comfort of his compensations. He has taken on as a life obligation the courteous restraint of a guest. He foregoes the right to row and roar over the shortcomings of his native land. He must always speak well of it, because he does not live there, and he must always be punctilious to a degree to his adopted country for the grave reason that he does live there. His situation has all the drawbacks of a cousin visiting because she cannot live at home. The goodness of her disposition has continually to be proved, the host's suspicion that her family may have something on their side continually to be faced.

It is a curious time when, as one grows up, one sees the inharmonious relation of oneself to one's native land. All sorts of feelings stir within one (this is pure supposition, which makes it stand a capital chance of being true) and after a time one is forced to admit that they are not American feelings. It is here that a knowledge of geography come in usefully. Looking well at your inner manners, you say, Are these Italian or perhaps Spanish? It takes a nice judicial talent, if one was born and reared in Salt Lake City, to know for a certainty that the decision is made and nine-tenths of you has been discovered to be foreign there is still one-tenth which is going to give you a vast amount of trouble which almost spoils your fun wherever you are. It is so intensely, belligerently American. The predicament is a serious one, but then in our conglomerate country it is such a coincidence if any of us do turn out all American. We ought to be humbly thankful and not probe too deeply.

Caruso and the Tax Collector.

I was dressing for "Pagliacci" when a man walked into my room, tapped me on the shoulder and said, "Give me £140." I looked at him and asked, "What for?" He replied, "Income tax." I was already late and said: "Come again. I have not got the money here." Whereupon, with the rapidity of a conjurer, he produced from his pocket a paper, apparently a warrant for my arrest. This seemed to me to be carrying the joke too far, and so I asked the manager to be kind enough to pay the man the money. He did so at once, and the good income tax collector replied, "And now may I have a seat to see the show?" And he got it. That's London.—Strand Magazine.

Watch Used as Compass.

Simple way to locate the points of the compass is contributed by a veteran westerner, who says: "In my vocations, exploring, prospecting, mining, soldiering, etc., in the west and southwest, I have found the knowledge of the simple method of using a watch as compass to determine directions convenient. Doubtless there are some who would be glad to know that to hold a watch representing the correct time with the dial up, by turning the watch pointing the hour hand direct to the sun, due south will be the point midway between the point of the hour hand and the figure 12 or noon mark on the watch dial."

Harvesting a Fortune.

Relatives sought to have declared insane the millionaire who planted Michigan barrens with thousands of apple-trees, but now the trees are harvesting a fortune and taking state fair prizes and the barrenness has been transferred to the relatives' codicil in the crasy man's will.

Not the Cook's.

Mistress (who has received a broad hint that an extra "evening hoff" will be welcomed)—Cook tells me, Mary, that you want to go out with a young man this evening. Is it urgent?

Mary—No, mum, it ain't. He's me own gent.—London Sketch.

As the bride and what she married leaves the church, trouble gets busy and follows them home.

Work of the Earthworm.

When we behold a wide, turf covered expanse we should remember that its smoothness, on which so much of its beauty depends, is mainly due to all the inequalities having been slowly leveled by worms. It is a marvelous reflection that the whole of the superficial mold over any such expanse has passed and will pass again every few years through the bodies of worms. The plow is one of the most ancient and most valuable of man's inventions, but long before he existed the land was, in fact, regularly plowed by earthworms. It may be doubted whether there are many other animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world as have these lowly organized creatures. Some other animals, however, still more lowly organized—namely, corals—have done far more conspicuous work in having constructed innumerable reefs and islands in the great oceans, but these are almost confined to the tropical zones.

Environment.

The person with the Van Dyke beard and the artistic temperament had died and gone to the abode of the blest.

"Well, what do you think of it?" they asked him.

"The scenery is not bad," he answered, "but the music is hopelessly crude and archaic."

SHE QUIT.

But It Was a Hard Pull.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did an Ohio woman. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not, and could not quit drinking it, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to be around, had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. For months I never went to bed expecting to get up in the morning. I felt as though I was liable to die at any time.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally one time it came over me and I asked myself what's the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions and I want to tell you, that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum which I now like better than the old coffee.

"One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework and have done a great deal besides."

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. FORD, 2207 W. Franklin St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

How Eskimos Measure Time.

Writing of the Eskimo methods of measuring time in a region of six months day or night, Harry Whitney in Outing says:

"The Eskimo divides his periods into 'sleeps,' but a sleep does not designate by any means the civilized measure of day and night. It is, in fact, a very uncertain term. Often we traveled from twenty to thirty hours without rest. Now there was no night, and I so far lost count of time that I was not at all certain of dates. Our single marches with the succeeding 'sleep' not infrequently covered a full forty-eight hours, or two ordinary days. The object of these extended marches was to take advantage of good weather and general conditions or because no safe or convenient camping place presented itself in the interim."

Unfortunate New Yorkers.

In New York we have become so hardened to eating the strange products of the cold storage vaults that the fresh foods of our childhood would probably seem unpalatable. To the diner accustomed to the pale, tasteless chicken of our hotels and restaurants, a real full-blooded broiler, slain within the current year, would taste "strong" and obnoxiously assertive. Similarly, a really fresh egg, neither iced nor partially hatched, might seem to our sophisticated palates to possess too many of the attributes of the ingenue.—New York Evening Sun.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Week in Congress

The Senators' session Wednesday was very brief, it having exhausted the uncontested bills on the calendar and being unable to proceed with other business on account of its rules. A number of local bills were passed by the House.

Mr. Davis of Arkansas engaged in an excited denunciation of John D. Rockefeller in the Senate Thursday, in connection with consideration of a bill granting right of way for an oil and gas line across his State. The bill was then passed, Mr. Davis casting the only vote in the negative. The Senate also passed the diplomatic and consular bill appropriating $4,000,000, and appointed a committee to investigate the cost of living. The Indian appropriation bill and measures of interest to the District of Columbia were under consideration in the House until adjournment was taken.

Mr. Newlands delivered a speech in the Senate Friday advocating a measure proposed by him to advance cooperation of the engineer corps of the army with other agencies devoted to the development of the resources of the country. The Senate adjourned until Monday. Discussion of the Indian appropriation bill and reference of many war claims to the court of claims occupied most of the time in the House. The House leaders, holding to their policy of expediting business by permitting no long speeches on appropriation measures, refused to concede extra time to members of the minority. The postoffice appropriation bill was reported late in the day.

The Senate was not in session Saturday. The Indian appropriation bill occupied the attention of the House during six hours. Most of the debate was upon an amendment for the abolition of Indian warehouses in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Omaha and San Francisco. The House adjourned until Monday without taking action on that question.

Bills providing for a commission to investigate the business methods of the government and for the issuance of $30,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness in the interest of irrigation projects were discussed by the Senate Monday, but neither measure was disposed of. Senator Aldrich estimated that the former measure would effect an annual saving of $100,000,000. The House bill to require railroad companies to supply handbrakes, step ladders, etc., was passed. The House took action assuring an appropriation of $125,000 for completing the work of the immigration commission. A large number of local bills were passed and further progress was made upon the Indian appropriation bill, which, upon adjournment, had been about half completed.

The Senate heard Washington's farewell address read Tuesday, passed a few bills of minor importance and adjourned. The House passed the Indian appropriation bill practically in the form recommended by the committee, carrying $8,250,000. The postoffice appropriation measure was then taken up and after being in session for five and one-half hours the House adjourned.

DOUBLING OUR IMPORTS.

This Is Our Remarkable Record in the Year Recently Closed.

Some remarkable features in foreign commerce of the United States last year are shown in the official government figures. The total imports during 1909 were valued at $1,475,600,000, compared with $1,116,400,000 in 1908. Manufacturers' materials formed actually more than one-half of the total imports and increased in value nearly 50 per cent when compared with 1908. Wool imports more than doubled in value, having been $55,500,000 in 1909, against $23,333,000 in 1908. Hides and skins nearly doubled in value, having been $104,000,000 in 1909, against $53,000,000 in 1908. India rubber imports also nearly doubled in value, having been $79,000,000 in 1909, against $45,000,000 in 1908. Raw silk increased from $64,000,000 in 1908 to $74,000,000 in 1909; lumber from $14,500,000 to $18,333,000; tin, from $24,000,000 to $27,500,000; copper in pigs and bars, from $23,000,000 to $30,500,000, and cotton, from $13,500,000 to $15,000,000.

CURRENT NEWS NOTES.

How to Keep Baby's Skin Clear.

Few parents realize how many estimable lives have been embittered and social and business success prevented by serious skin affections which so often result from the neglect of minor eruptions in infancy and childhood. With but a little care and the use of the proper emollients, baby's skin and hair may be preserved, purified and beautified, minor eruptions prevented from becoming chronic and torturing, disfiguring rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings dispelled.

To this end, nothing is so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as the constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted, when necessary, by Cuticura Ointment. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, for their free 32-page Cuticura Book, telling all about the care and treatment of the skin.

Not Literary.

"The late Frederick Burton was the world's foremost authority on the American Indian," said a Yale ethnologist. "Burton was almost alone in his field. There are, you know, so few students of Indian lore.

"He said to me once, with a vexed laugh, that he found it quite as impossible to discuss the Indian with people as a Boston critic found it to discuss poetry with the girl he took down to dinner.

"The girl was very pretty. Leaning her dimpled elbows on the table, she said to the critic:

"'And what is your lecture to be about professor?'

"'I shall lecture on Keats,' he replied.

"'Oh, professor,' she gushed, 'what are keats?'"—Washington Star.

An Appeal to Sympathy.

Advertising is nowadays almost a fine art. Clever advertisements attract customers in two ways—first, because they effectually call attention to the goods, and, second, because of their cleverness pure and simple. Such a one is the following, quoted from M. A. P., which adorned a boot shop in the Rue d'Amsterdam, in Paris:

Liquidation.

With tears in my eyes, I am obliged to clear the whole of my stock of boots. To get rid of it all in a week I offer it to you at a loss of 50 per cent.

My husband seeing fit to abandon me with five children.

Why

Can't I go on without my husband? Because my husband alone was able to obtain job lines from the big provincial and foreign bootmakers.

Prudent ladies will profit by these extraordinary low prices, which will enable me to clear out my stock and search for my husband throughout Europe. Madame Marie-Louise X.

WESTERN CANADA

Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, says:

"The stream of emigrants from the United States to Canada will continue."

Senator Dolliver recently paid a visit to Western Canada, and says: "There is a land hunger in the hearts of English-speaking people; this will account for the removal of so many Iowa farmers to Canada. Our people are pleased with its Government and the excellent administration of law, and they are coming to you in tens of thousands, and they are still coming."

Iowa contributed largely to the 70,000 American farmers who made Canada their home during 1909. Field crop returns alone during year added to the wealth of the country upwards of

Nervous Prostration

"I suffered so with Nervous Prostration that I thought there was no use trying to get well. A friend recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and although skeptical at first, I soon found myself recovering, and am to-day well."

MRS. D. I. JONES,
5800 Broadway, Cleveland, O.

Much sickness is of nervous origin. It's the nerves that make the heart force the blood through the veins, the lungs take in oxygen, the stomach digest food, the liver secrete bile and the kidneys filter the blood. If any of these organs are weak, it is the fault of the nerves through which they get their strength. Dr. Miles' Nervine is a specific for the nerves. It soothes the irritation and assists in the generation of nerve force. Therefore you can hardly miss it if you take Dr. Miles' Nervine when sick. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Prohibition Convention

The prohibitionists of DeKalb county will be the first to place a ticket in the field for the approaching election, and have named Friday, March 4th as the day upon which they will meet to nominate men for the various county officers. The convention will be held in the Baptist church, in Auburn, and will be an all day session, commencing at 10 o'clock. During the morning session the candidate will be nominated, and adjournment taken. At 2 o'clock p. m. the Hon. Eugene Chafin, who headed the prohibition ticket in the race for president in 1908, will deliver an address. Mr. Chafin will deliver the second address at 7:30 p. m., also, and a large crowd is expected to be present on both occasions to hear this noted man speak. A feature of the convention will be the presence of the Hoosier quartette, who will sing several selections during the afternoon and evening. George Quince is chairman of the county organization, and E. M Bishop is secretary and treasurer. The prohibition party has gained much strength since the last campaign, and look upon their prospects of victory this year as being very promising.

The Culture Club was very pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Harriett Johnson last Wednesday evening. The house was beautifully decorated in the national colors, in honor of George Washington. The lesson, "The Age of Bismark," was ably conducted by Mrs. Buchanan and proved very instructive. One pleasing feature of the evening was the cherry contest, prepared by the president, Mrs. Bowman. Refreshments were served by the hostess, the favors being cherries.

The Ladies New Suits.

As EASTER time approaches the spring selling season opens especially in the Ready-to-Wear section. Our preparation this year has been on an unusually large scale to meet the wants of this growing department of this store. Herewith we illustrate only one of the many styles of suits shown here this spring. Jackets are all to be somewhat shorter than last year and there is a variety of skirt styles that will be pleasing to every lady.

Seperate Jackets, Seperate Skirts, Military Capes.

These lines comprise the latest models of the Tailors art, and you are especially invited to supply your needs here from these lines. Scarcity of dressmakers need not worry you when you can get your garments ready-made and made right too, and a fit guaranteed and taking all things into consideration, at a less price than you can have them made. Come here and let's talk it over and give us an opportunity to show you the advantages to be had in our Ready-to-wear. department.

Medics Meet.

March 4.—The DeKalb County Medical association held a meeting at Butler, Thursday afternoon at which subjects vital to the interests of the professeon were discussed. Dr. Broughton, of Waterloo, read a paper on "Headaches from the Standpoint of a Practitioner," and Dr. Stewart, of Auburn, read a paper on "Headaches from the Standpoint of a Specialist." An interesting discussion, indulged in by all present, followed and the meeting was one of great benefit. Before adjournment the association passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the members of the DeKalb County Medical society report all cases of interest to the general public to the press of the county in their respective towns, providing that the names of all physicians reporting cases be with-held from publication."

Mortgage Exemptions.

Inasmuch as the law providing for mortgage exemptions is of interest to a large majority of the people the substance of it is given. Read it carefully. If you can be benefitted by it act accordingly.

Any person being the owner of real estate liable for taxation within the state of Indiana, and being indebted in any sum, secured by mortgage upon real estate, may have the amount of such mortgage indebtedness, not exceeding $700, existing and unpaid upon the 1st day of March of any year, deducted from the assessed valuation of mortgaged premises for that year, and the amount of such valuations remaining after such deductions shall have been made shall form the basis for assessment and taxation for said real estate for said year; provided, that no deduction shall be allowed greater than one-half of such assessed value of said real estate.

Any person desiring to avail himself or herself of the provision of this act shall, between the 1st day of March and 1st day of May of each year, file with the auditor of the county wherein such real estate is situated a sworn statement of the amount of such mortgage indebtedness existing and unpaid on the 1st day of March of each year, showing the mortgage indebtedness on said 1st day of March. Said affidavit must be sworn to by the person securing the deduction personally. A husband cannot make an affidavit for his wife, nor can she for him.

Under no circumstances can one person legally secure more than $700 deduction. If a husband and wife own real estate together as tenants by entireties they must join in the affidavit and are entitled jointly to not more than $700 deduction. That is, each cannot secure the benefit of $700. But if the husband and wife own real estate separately they are each entitled to the deduction provided for in the law, as are all other taxpayers owning real estate in their own names.

Make a trip to St. Joe some day if this strikes you and have the matter attended to. S S. Widney has the authority to administer the oath.

Culture Club

Purple and gold, the chosen colors of the St. Joe Culture Club, made the residence of Mrs. Edward Leighty, on Washington St., a charming place last Wednesday evening. The occasion being a party given by this literary organization, which is one of the foremost of this city. A committee headed by the hostess was responsible for the affair, which proved to be one of the most enjoyable evenings ever spent in our little town, whose ladies have gained much fame for the charm manner in which they entertain.

When the ladies began to arrive at 7:30 they were welcomed by a reception committee and conducted to the parlors on the second floor where greetings and pleasant social intercourse were before entering the assembly rooms below.

The program of the evening was a musical and literary feast, after which we were engaged in contests and games which called forth the best skill and ingenuity of the ladies as well as causing much merriment and laughter. After the prizes were awarded to the successful ones and the clock was striking the tenth hour, the dining room doors were quietly thrown open and we were invited to enter. This room was certainly a marvel of beauty, a long table extended the full length of the room and fairly glittered with crystal and china and was laid with twenty-four covers. At each cover was a white and gold place card tied with a tiny knot of purple tulle. Forming the center was a large purple and gold vase filled with pink carnations and delicate sprays and plumiess ferns, suspended over this was a large floral umbrella of exquisite design and all around the room was a beautiful display of club colors. An elegant menu was served in a charming manner by the hostess and sauce of good cheer and congenial companionship made the banquet a feast fit for the gods. The meeting was certainly enjoyed by all from the first greeting until the last au revoir was said. The many friends of the Culture Club will be pleased to hear the ladies are contemplating holding several meetings of this character each year, planned especially so their husbands and friends can enjoy the delights of club life.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Oil King to Give Away Wealth.

Steps have been taken to incorporate the Rockefeller foundation in the District of Columbia. The bill for this purpose was introduced by Senator Gallinger and was referred to the committee on judiciary. The purpose of the foundation is to provide for a general organization to conduct philanthropic work along all lines. It is understood the foundation will be endowed largely by John D. Rockefeller and that he takes this means to dispose of a large part of his wealth. The Rockefeller foundation, according to the bill, is organized to promote the well being and advance the civilization of the people of the United States and its possessions in foreign lands, and for the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge; for the prevention and relief of suffering and promotion of any and all of the elements of human knowledge. It was stated by Senator Gallinger that Mr. Rockefeller already had given away $52,000,000 and that he was seeking a method of disposing of his fortune that would benefit mankind. The foundation is organized on lines similar to the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching. As in the case of the latter intsitution the Rockefeller institution will be authorized to dispense gifts other than those obtained by the original endowments which has not been fixed.

New Murat Theatre Opens.

The Murat Theatre, contained in what is said to be the most elaborate Mystic Shrine temple in the United States, was opened at Indianapolis, Ind., under the management of the Shubert Theatrical Producing Company. The temple, completed, will cost $250,000, but only the theatre has been finished. James T. Powers and his company, in the musical comedy, "Havana," gave the first performance in the theatre. Only the members of the Mystic Shrine were admitted, but the subsequent performances will be public. The theatre is decorated with mural pictures representing camel caravans passing through a desert and approaching an oasis, and with other allegorical paintings symbolic of the significance of the Mystic Shrine.

Woman Robbed of Her Jewels.

Jewels valued at $15,000 were stolen from the home of Mrs. Rebekah Hornsby, in a fashionable portion of Washington, D. C. The robbery, executed when the house was full of servants, has mystified the police. Mrs. Hornsby went to the theater, leaving her jewelry hidden in a mahogany shoe polishing box about three feet high. When she returned the box was gone and her bed room window was open. The detectives noticed a window open in a vacant house next door and decided to look in. They found the broken box. Later they learned that some men had obtained the key to the empty house the day before on pretense of protecting it. The jewels were diamonds and pearls.

Terre Haute Boys Build Aeroplane.

The Johnson brothers, Louis, Julius and Harry, of Terre Haute, Ind., have contracted with the committee having in charge the arrangements for the Indiana State Grand Army encampment to make daily flights in an airship of their own invention. Private try-outs of their machine have been made and it is claimed its ability is assured. Built somewhat on the order of the Wright machine, it has a 50-horse power engine weighing altogether one hundred and sixty pounds. It is capable of carying three persons towards the clouds. The first public flight is scheduled to be from the fair grounds on May 25.

Two Dead as Result of Wreck.

Two trainmen were killed and two fatally hurt when passenger train No. 3 on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern railway ran into the rear of a freight train at Flora, Ill. All the trainmen killed and injured were of the crew of the passenger train which was drawn by two locomotives. Both engines were overturned when they struck the caboose of the freight train, which was entering a siding to get out of the way of the passenger train. None of the passengers was hurt.

Many Injured in Collision.

Forty-two passengers were injured, many seriously, in a wreck on the Midland Terminal railroad, near Green Mountain Falls, Colo. Passenger train No. 8 ran into an open switch and collided with a switch engine. All the injured will recover, it is believed.

Head of School at Evansville Resigns.

Frank W. C. Cooley, for nine years superintendent of the public schools of Evansville, Ind., has resigned.

HUNDREDS LOSE LIVES IN IDAHO AVALANCHE

Burke and Mace Are Overwhelmed by Huge Masses That Slide Down Mountain.

FAMILIES TRAPPED IN SLEEP

Snowslides That Destroy Property and People Started by Chinook Winds and Warm Rains.

Sixty lives have been lost, it is feared, in two great snowslides which brought dismay to the mining towns of the rich Coeur d'Alene district in Northern Idaho. At 10:35 o'clock the other night a snowslide swept down the mountain, striking the little town of Mace and burying twenty-five houses and their sleeping occupants in a mass of snow and ice at the bottom of the canyon. At 5:30 a. m. the next day, another slide rushed down on the town of Burke, crushing a score of houses under thousands of tons of earth and snow. There is fear that the number of dead at Burke may be even larger than that at Mace. Because of the larger population of Burke, about 900, the houses were closer together.

Mothers hauled their children to the side hills; brothers dragged little sisters to places of safety, and when the slide struck many of the homes were deserted by fear-stricken women and children, while the bread providers were rescuing injured at the stricken sister town.

Old-timers in the Coeur d'Alene district had been sounding daily warnings to Mace, Burke and Black Bear that because of the record depth of the snow, slides were imminent. For sixteen winters these towns have escaped devastating slides and so strong had the confidence of the miner residents been that their homes and families were safe that no precautions had been taken.

The little mining town of Mace lies between precipitous mountain sides, a straggling line of cottages in the creek bottoms, bisected by the lines of the Northern Pacific and Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company. Its one industry is mining and its big mine is the Standard. With scarce a dividing line perceptible the towns of Black Bear, Gem, Mace and Burke form a long string of houses for six miles.

Mace is divided into two parts, known as Upper and Lower Mace, respectively. The catastrophe occurred in Lower Mace, where dwelt about 300 miners employed in the Standard mines. Most of these men were unmarried and lived in the Hotel Standard. Reports are that this hotel was in the path of the avalanche.

Though first reports of the disaster were that the town of Gem, Idaho, a mile above Mace on the same side of the canyon, had been overwhelmed, later news indicates that the town escaped. The slide was half a mile long and thirty feet deep.

Thirty-five Italians, sleeping in an outfit car on the Northern Pacific siding, who were swept away with their car in the bottom of the canyon, used the tools in their car to dig themselves out.

Chinook winds and warm rains started the Burke snowslide, which increased in velocity with every foot down the mountain until it gained such headway and force that only blinding mist and a roaring warned the score of families of miners of its approach. Surface trams were crushed and twisted and cabins were ground to atoms.

$200,000 BONDS ON $720 PLANT.

Illinoisan's Suit in Indiana Reveals Gas Company's Holdings.

The suit of D. E. Brooks, of Illinois, to prevent the disposal of land which he deeded in connection with the purchase of $75,000 of bonds issued by the Rushville Gas, Heat and Water Company, has developed some sensational facts in respect to that corporation. It has been found that the total holdings of the company are worth not to exceed $720, yet on the plant of this alleged value it issued $200,000 of bonds and sold $75,000 of the issue to Brooks, taking in exchange real estate in Chicago and some farm lands in Illinois. The corporation was formed with Owen L. Carr as president and Fred Carroll and John and Henry Walters as directors. Bonds were issued and a mortgage covering the $720 gas plant in favor of the Farmers' Bank of Rushville for $100,000 was made. The Farmers' Bank became merely the payer of the interest. Brooks bought $75,000 of these bonds on the supposition that the bank was the trustee. He now wants the court to prevent the sale of the property he traded.

ON ICE FLOES FOR HOURS.

Mother Saves Offspring and Herself After Accident in Miami River.

Huddled, drenched and shivering, on cakes of ice, Mrs. William Evans and her two little children floated for two hours in the Miami river near Springfield, O., the other night before they could be rescued. The woman attempted to ford the swollen river in a buggy. A cake of ice struck the horse, which reared and overturned the vehicle. Mrs. Evans, keeping herself afloat by holding to an ice cake, assisted her children aboard the ice and then mounted another herself. All were near collapse when rescued.

SPRING IS COMING.

URGES YOUNGER NAVY.

Taft Asks Congress to Permit Officers' Earlier Promotion.

The need of young blood in the commands of the navy was the keynote of a special message which President Taft the other day sent to Congress urging legislation for improving the personnel of the fighting force and for remedying what the President termed "an abnormal condition, the result of past legislation."

Under conditions now existing, the President declared, the promotion of officers of the lower grades is stagnated, to the great detriment of the service and the country, and because nearly every officer who retains his health is allowed to pass through the various grades and be retired as rear admiral the greater number of commanding officers have had inadequate experience.

Under the existing system officers now being trained in the command of battle ships and armored cruisers could not serve as flag officers on account of their short time on the active list after reaching that grade.

To remedy these conditions the President indorsed a bill which had been prepared by Secretary Meyer, which would promote officers to the grade of rear admiral at an average age of 54 to 55 years and to captain at the average age of 46 to 47. These changes, the President said, in his opinion would not provide men young enough for the best success in a fleet engagement, should war come; but he felt they were a decided improvement, and he intimated that at some other time it might be advisable to make even further reductions in the ages.

ASQUITH IS HELD IN COMMONS.

First Trial of Strength on Chamberlain's Fiscal Amendment.

The first trial of strength in the new English House of Commons occurred the other night at a crowded session when Austen Chamberlain's fiscal amendment was rejected by a vote of 285 to 254. Speeches were made by Mr. Balfour, leader of the opposition; Chancellor Lord George and others. The government may regard the majority of thirty-one as satisfactory, as there was no cross-voting and no evidence that the discontented groups intend to try to overthrow the ministry. All the nationalists, O'Brienites as well as Redmondites and three liberals abstained from voting. The laborites voted with the government.

BANKER IS SAVED FROM PRISON.

Minnesota Court Revokes Drew's Sentence and Orders New Trial.

The Minnesota Supreme Court set aside the conviction of A. E. Drew, former president of the failed Bank of Hamline. The conviction was secured on a charge of accepting deposits after the bank was insolvent. The court revokes the sentence of two years' imprisonment and orders a new trial because of error in the lower court. Drew has been out on bail. The bank, which failed Jan. 15, 1908, was a small State institution.

Hello! Hello! Mr. Bachelor.

Ninety-two per cent of the women telephone operators of the United States are unmarried, three per cent are widows, and five per cent are married. These are some of the interesting details brought out by special investigation made by the Bureau of Labor and sent to the Senate by Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

TRAMP SAVES CHILD'S LIFE.

Rancher Traces Man Who Pulled Girl from in Front of Train.

Frank Strome a few days ago was a tramp beating his way westward on a freight train with El Paso as his destination. To-day he owns a half interest in the Valvedere cattle range, said to be valued at nearly $1,000,000, with its 30,000 head of cattle and 100 square miles of land in Jeff Davis and Pecos counties in Texas. The range is owned by Samuel W. Jennings, reputed to be worth several millions. A few days ago the 7-year-old daughter of Jennings was crossing the railroad track. A train was bearing down on her and she seemed doomed, when Strome grabbed her and pulled her from the track. Strome went on his way, but persons who witnessed the rescue reported the matter, and three days ago he was located by Jennings and taken to the ranch. A day or two later a deed was filed transferring a half interest in the property to the girl's rescuer.

PERCY IS MISSISSIPPI SENATOR

Long Deadlock on Successor to Late U. S. Senator McLaurin Broken.

Le Roy Percy, of Greenville, one of the most brilliant lawyers in Mississippi, was elected United States Senator from the State of Mississippi to fill out the unexpired term of A. J. McLaurin, who died Dec. 23.

The election was on the 58th ballot by the legislative caucus and after a deadlock that had continued since Jan. 4 with one or two ballots nearly every day. When the result of the ballot was announced there was a scene of wildest confusion. The vote was: Percy, 87; Vardaman, 82.

FROM FOREIGN LANDS

The German emperor and ministry of war have decided to introduce the aeroplane in some form into the regular army equipment, with the intention of attaching a flying corps to every regiment.

Theodore Roosevelt, with his son and other members of his African expedition arrived at Gondokoro, Soudan, at the head of the Nile, all reported well and enthusiastic over their experiences in the jungle. A native band escorted the party into the town with bugles and drums, headed by the tribal chief. The party next day proceeded down the Nile to Khartoum.

At Des Moines, Iowa, the court room at the police station was recently turned into a church, and a service was conducted by the Rev. J. Cafee, an evangelist, who took the judge's usual place and preached a sermon to the entire night shift of the Des Moines police force. One convert was made, John Bergquist, a policeman, asking to be received into the church.

Serious affrays between the police and thousands of Socialists occurred in Berlin and other cities of Germany when the Socialists held meetings and marched in the streets to protest against the proposed franchise bill of the government. The police used their sabers in dispersing the marchers, who in some places made a show of resistance by throwing stones and other missiles. Many were wounded on both sides before the police, with the aid of soldiery, were able to repress the demonstrations.

21 PACKERS ARE INDICTED.

Six Leading Companies Also in Net of Grand Jury.

Twenty-one officials of the so-called meat trust and six of the leading packing companies of the country were indicted by the Hudson County grand jury in Jersey City. The indictments are the outcome of the exhaustive investigation which the grand jury has conducted for the last month into an alleged conspiracy to maintain the prices of food at an exorbitant figure. The men indicted are the leaders in the business coterie that controls the country's output of meat. Some of them are many times millionaires and men whose names are known throughout the world. For the most part they are residents of Chicago, the center of the meat packing industry of the United States. The indicted men are:

J. Ogden Armour	F. A. Fowler
J. Watson Armour	Charles H. Swift
Arthur Meeker	L. H. Heyman
Edward Morris	J. E. Bathgate, Jr
Louis F. Swift	Geo. J. Edwards
Edward F. Swift	F. B. Cooper
Edward Tilden	D. E. Hartwell
L. A. Carton	Ira N. Morris
Thomas Wilson	H. B. Darlington
Thos. J. Connors	L. C. Patterson
	A. A. Fuller

The companies indicted are:

National Packing Company	Hammond Packing Company
Armour & Co.	G. H. Hammond Company
Swift & Co.
Morris & Co.

The indictments charge the packers with "willfully, unlawfully and feloniously devising, contriving and intending for their own excessive, immoral and unlawful profit and gain, to injure, defraud, prejudice, damage and oppress the public and people of said city and said county of Hudson." Evidences of conspiracy are mentioned in the indictment to the effect that the defendants agreed upon their unjust and extortionate prices and purposely restricted the supply so that only a limited amount could reach the establishments in Jersey City. There were witnesses before the inquisitors, it was learned, who testified that there was a systematic method by means of which each company was to send east only a limited number of cars.

HOGS REACH THE HIGH RECORD.

Hogs reached the high record of $10 per 100 pounds the other day in the Chicago market, while $10.05 was paid in Indianapolis and $9.85 in St. Louis. The price equals the mark set in 1870 and only the war price of $13.25 paid in 1865 remains to be broken.

The winter packing season, which closed the other day, is expected to show a shortage of 2,700,000 hogs compared with the corresponding four months a year ago. When hogs reached $8 in the Chicago stockyards it was expected a big rush would follow, but it failed to materialize. The same held good when the price advanced to $9, and the trade is anxiously awaiting to see the effect on the country of $10 hogs.

Gas Fires Save Freezing Herds.

Many herds of cattle in the Osage country of Oklahoma were saved from freezing in the recent blizzard by their owners tapping natural gas pipe lines and igniting the escaping gas.

Death Sentence for Killing Family.

Antonio Mangano, who killed his wife and three children in Cleveland Dec. 4, was sentenced to be electrocuted July 15.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Chicago trade says:

"Some irregularity in operations is due to the holiday this week, severe storms in the west and hindrances to transportation, but there is sustained activity among the heavy producers and easier monetary conditions are reflected by increasing bank deposits and a lower record of trading defaults, the latter indicating an improved position of credits over recent reports.

"Prospects of better weather bring relief after the long winter to various interests and new demands in manufacturing and distribution become more varied, although the developments include none of striking importance as to contracts for future execution.

"Price tendencies for factory supplies to some extent are seen to be easier, and this encourages more attention to plans for construction and railroad needs. There is, however, some conservatism where large financial commitments are involved and a more pronounced disposition to economize costs of production. Outputs of factories in the Chicago district steadily rise and this causes notable forwarding and an ample movement of raw and finished products.

"Bank clearings, $255,381,166, are 9.5 per cent over those of the corresponding week in 1909 and compare with $259,168,343 in 1908.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number 21, as against 19 last week, 24 in 1909 and 25 in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 4, as against 5 last week, 6 in 1909 and 14 in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade reports are rather more irregular. Stormy, cold weather over wide areas of country apparently has retarded the expansion of the spring jobbing trade, but nevertheless the distribution has kept up well, in advance of last year in fact, and distinct gains in the volume of house trade are reported at many points. Retail trade has been restricted and this in turn operates against re-order trade in spring goods with jobbers. Industries continue active, but there is rather more evidence of friction in some lines, particularly in railroad labor.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with Feb. 24 were 254, as against 269 last week, 244 in the corresponding week of 1909, 311 in 1908, 194 in 1907 and 180 in 1906.—Bradstreet's.

An Admonition from Japan.

"You shouldn't call us Japs in your newspapers," said a Japanese journalist. "We don't think it's polite. You wouldn't want us to call you Yanks in our papers, would you? A western Congressman said to me the other day: 'What nese are you—Japanese or Chinese?' I'd have liked to jiu-jitsu him, but I only smiled and retorted: 'What key are you—monkey or Yankee?'"

Rosin Rots Things.

Rosin is good for fiddle bows, but when it is put in a soap to give it weight and holds to together it gets into the clothes and rots them. It holds the dirt there, too. Get a good, clean, pure soap—get Easy Task soap. It's made of cocoanut oil, borax, naphtha and clean tallow, and it takes the boiling and the rubbing and the all-day labor out of washday. And it doesn't make the hands red and sore and ugly. A cake costs only five cents; there's no economy in using the old-fashioned kinds.

Self-Made Martyrs.

"What's a martyr, father?" asked the only scion of the Morse household, aged 8. Mr. Morse answered him with deliberation.

"There aren't many nowadays, sonny," he said, "excepting self-made ones."

"What are they?" persisted Ned.

"I couldn't name all the varieties to you," said Mr. Morse, "but to give a general instance, Ned, they are the people who wear heavy hats because they are the fashion, and then suffer from headaches."

"And the people that go without overcoats, Ned, because it is considered the thing to do, and then have stiff backs," said Mrs. Morse, sweetly.

"And those that accept office as treasurer of a society for the honor of it, when it takes them an hour to add seventeen and forty-three," said Mr. Morse.

The boy looked puzzled, and he was not enlightened when his mother said:

"And those who are growing a little deaf, like me, Ned. I don't always catch even what your father says."

Then the heads of the Morse household broke into one of those laughs which Ned could never understand, and which came without apparent cause.

A GOOD CHANGE

A Change of Food Works Wonders.

The wrong food and drink causes a lot of trouble in this world. To change the food is the first duty of every person that is ill, particularly from stomach and nervous troubles. As an illustration: A lady in Mo. has, with her husband, been brought around to health again by leaving off coffee and some articles of food that did not agree with them. They began using Postum and Grape-Nuts food. She says:

"For a number of years I suffered with stomach and bowel trouble which kept getting worse until I was very ill most of the time. About four years ago I left off coffee and began taking Postum. My stomach and bowels improved right along, but I was so reduced in flesh and so nervous that the least thing would overcome me.

"Then I changed my food and began using Grape-Nuts in addition to Postum. I lived on these two principally for about four months. Day by day I gained in flesh and strength until now the nervous trouble has entirely disappeared and I feel that I owe my life and health to Postum and Grape-Nuts.

"Husband is 73 years old and he was troubled, for a long time, with occasional cramps, and slept badly. Finally, I prevailed upon him to leave off coffee and take Postum. He had stood out for a long time, but after he tried Postum for a few days he found that he could sleep and that his cramps disappeared. He was satisfied and has never gone back to coffee.

"I have a brother in California who has been using Postum for several years; his whole family use it also because they have had such good results from it."

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

There was silence for a little space following the colonel's denunciation of me, and then my Lord broke it to say: "I may not be so credulous as you think, Colonel. Rebel spy or true-blue loyalist, he is safe enough for the present. In the meantime in this matter of reaching Ferguson we may make good use of him. He has come straight from Major Ferguson, as I say; and, loyalist or rebel, he can find his way back to Gilbert Town."

"But you'll never be trusting him with despatches!" said Lord Rawdon.

"There is no need to trust him. He can be given the despatches with some hint of their purport, and of how much the king's cause will profit by their safe delivery. If he be loyal and true, the despatches will go safe enough. If, on the other hand, he be a rebel and a spy, he will doubtless tamper with them; but in that case he will none the less ride straight enough to Major Ferguson's headquarters in the West. An hour after he sets out we shall send a mounted detail after him with an Indian tracker to nose out his trail. The lieutenant in command will carry duplicate despatches. At the worst, Ireton will guide these followers to Ferguson's rendezvous; and, so far as we know, he is the only man who knows exactly where to find the major."

I had heard enough. Under cover of the chorus of bravos raised by Lord Cornwallis' explication of his plot within a plot, I lifted the trap-door and made my exit as noiselessly as I had come.

As you would guess, my instructions conformed exactly to the plan outlined by Lord Cornwallis in the council. I was entrusted with a sealed packet for delivery to Major Ferguson, and, for safety's sake, as my Lord explained, I was given the meat of the message to deliver verbally should the need arise. Ferguson was to be ordered to come in instantly by forced marches, if necessary, and he was on no account to risk a battle with the over-mountain men.

CHAPTER XIII.

Skipping lightly over the happenings of the two days following my departure from Charlotte on the king's errand, I may say that after passing the British outposts at the crossing of the Catawba, I met neither friend nor foe. I knew no more than a blind man the route I should take; knew no more of the whereabouts of Gilbert Town and Major Ferguson's rendezvous than that both were some eighty miles to the westward.

I was constrained to gallop on without pause; and throughout a comfortless afternoon and the scarce less miserable day which followed, there were no incidents to break the dull monotony of the blind race save these two; that once the clouds lifted enough to give me a glimpse of my pursuers in a far reach to the eastward; and once again I had a sight of an awkward horseman in the road before me.

'Twas close on eventide of the second day, and I had been since morning dubiously lost in the somber trackless forest, when an elfish cry rose, as it would seem, from beneath the very hoofs of my horse.

"God save the king!"

The bay shied suddenly, standing with nostrils a-quiver; and I had to look closely to make out the little brown dot of humanity clad in russet homespun crouching in the path, its childish eyes wide with fear.

I threw a stiff leg over the cantle and swung down to go on one knee to my stout challenger. I can never make you understand, my dears, how the sight of this helpless waif appearing thus unaccountably in the heart of the great forest mellowed and softened me. 'Twas a little maid, not above 3 or 4 years old.

"What know you of the king, little one?" I asked.

"Gran'dad told me," she lipsed. "If I was to see a soldier-man, I must say, quick, 'God save the king,' or 'haps he'd eat me. Is—is you hungry, Mister Soldier-man?"

"Truly I am that, little sweetheart; but I don't eat little maids."

She gave me a long scrutiny out of the innocent eyes and then put up two little brown hands to be taken. "I tired," she said; and my sore heart went warm within me when I took her in my arms and cuddled her. After a long-drawn sigh of contentment, she said: "My name Polly; what's yours?"

"You may call me Jack, if you please—Captain Jack, if that comes the easier. And now will you let me take you to your gran'dad?"

"Tell me quickly which way to go, Polly," I said; for besides being, as I would fear, far out of the way to Gilbert Town, the last hilltop to the rear had given be another sight of my shadowing pursuers riding hard as if they meant to overtake me.

"That way," she said, pointing short to the right; and I wheeled the horse into a blind path that wound in and out among the trees for a long half mile, to end at a little clearing on the banks of a small stream.

In the midst of the clearing was a rude log cabin; and in the open doorway stood a man bent and aged, a patriarchal figure with white hair falling to his shoulders and a snowy beard such as Aaron might have worn. At sight of me the old watcher disappeared within the house, but a moment later he was out again, fingering the lock of an ancient Queen's-arm. I drew rein quickly, and the little maid sat up and saw the musket.

"Don't shoot, gran'dad!" she cried. "He's Cappy Jack, and he doesn't eat folkses."

At this the old man came to meet us, though still with the clumsy musket held at the ready.

"These be parlous times, sir," he said. "You have made friends with my little maid, and I owe you somewhat for bringing her safe home."

"Nay," said I; "the debt is mine, inasmuch as I have the little one for my friend. 'Tis long since I have held a trusting child in my arms, I do assure you, sir."

He bowed as grandly as any courtier. "I hope her trust is not misplaced, sir; though for the matter of that, we have little enough how to take or leave."

"You have given it all to the king?" said I, feeling my way as I had need to.

"The king has taken all, sir, as you see," this with a wave of the hand to point me to the forlorn homestead. "There is naught left me save this poor hut and my little maid."

"Taken,' you say? Then you are not of the king's side?"

He came a step nearer and faced me boldly. "Listen, sir: two of my sons were left on the bloody field of Camden, and the butcher Banastre Tarleton slew the other two at Fishing Creek. A month since a band of roving savages, armed with King George's muskets, mind you, sir, came down upon us at Northby, and this little maid's mother—"

He stopped and choked; and the child looked up into my face with her blue eyes full of nameless terror. "Oh, I want my mammy!" she said. "Won't you find her for me, Cappy Jack?"

I slipped from the saddle, still clasping the little one tightly in my arms.

"Enough, sir," I said, when I could trust myself to speak. "This same King George's minions have made me a homeless outcast, too. I live but to give some counter stroke, if I may."

"Ha!" said the old man, starting back; "then you are for our side? But your uniform——"

"Is that of an Austrian officer, my good sir, which I should right gladly exchange for the buff and blue, but that I can serve the cause better in this."

He took the child from me and bade me welcome to his cabin and all it held. But I was not minded to make him a sharer in my private peril.

"No," said I. "Tell me how I may find Gilbert Town and Major Ferguson's rendezvous, and I will ride whilst I can see the way."

He looked at me narrowly. "Ferguson left Gilbert Town some days since. If 'tis the place you seek, you are gone far our of your way; if 'tis the man——"

"'Tis the man," I cut in hastily.

"If you be of our side, as you say, he will hang you out of hand."

"So I can make my errand good, I care little how soon he hangs me."

"And what may your errand be? Mayhap I can help you."

"It is to bring him to a stand till the mountain men can overtake him."

The old man trembled with excitement like a boy going into his first battle.

"Ah, if you could—if you could!" he cried. "But 'tis too late, now. Listen: his present camp is but three miles to the westward on Buffalo Creek. I was there no longer than the Wednesday; I—I made my submission to him—so that I might mayhap learn of his plans. He told me all; how that now he was safe; that the mountaineers were gone off from the fording of the Broad on a false scent; that Tarleton with four hundred of the legion would soon be marching to his relief. I stole away when I could, and that night took horse and rode twenty miles to Tom Sumter's camp at Flint Hill—all to little purpose, I fear. Poor Tom is still desperately sick of his Fishing Creek wounds, and Colonel Lacey was the only officer fit to go after Shelby and the mountain men to set them straight. I should have gone myself, but—"

"Stay, my good friend," said I; "you go too fast for me. If Ferguson is still out of communication with the main at Charlotte, we may halt him yet. Have you ever an inkhorn and a quill in your cabin? I am the bearer of a letted from Lord Cornwallis to this same Major Ferguson."

"You?—a bearer of Lord Cornwallis' despatches?" The old man put a blade's length between us and held the little one aloft as if he feared I might do her a mischief. I laughed and bade him be comforted.

"'Tis a long story, and I may not take the time to tell it now. But a word will suffice. Like yourself, I made my submission—and for the same purpose. My Lord accepted it and made me his despatch-bearer because he thought I knew the way to Ferguson when no one else knew it. But enough of this; time presses. Let me have ink and the quill."

The old man led the way into the cabin and put his writing tools at my disposal. Left to myself, I should have broken the seal of the packet; but my wise old ally, cool and collected now, showed me how to split the paper beneath the wax. Opened and spread before us on the rude slab table, the letter proved to be the briefest of military commands; a peremptory order to Ferguson to rejoin the main body at once, proceeding by forced marches if needful, and on no account to risk engagement with the over-mountain men.

How to change such an order to reverse it in effect, I knew no more than a yokel; but here again my ancient ally showed himself a man of parts. Dressing the pen to make it the fellow of that used by my Lord Cornwallis, he scanned the handwriting of the letter closely, made a few practice pothooks to get the imitative hang of it, and wrote this postcriptum at the bottom of the sheet.

"Since writing the foregoing I have your courier and his despatches. Lieutenant Colonel Tarleton, with four hundred of his legion, will take the road for you to-night. If battle is forced upon you, make a stand and hold the enemy in check till reinforcements come. Cornwallis."

The old man sanded the wet penstrokes and bade me say if it would serve. 'Twas a beautiful forgery. My Lord's crabbed handwriting was copied to a nicety, and of the two signatures I doubt if the earl himself could have told which was his own.

"Capital!" said I. "Now, if the lightning would but strike these pursuers of mine, we should have the Scotsman at bay in a hand's turn."

"How?" said the patriarch; "are you followed?"

I told him I was; told him of my Lord's plot within a plot—that three light-horse riders, one of them a lieutenant bearing duplicate despatches, had been hard upon my heels all the way from Charlotte. At this the old warhorse—I learned afterward that he had fought through the French and Indian war—wagged his heard and his eye flashed.

"We must stop them," he said. "Three of them, do you say?"

"Three white men and an Indian trailer."

"Ha! If it were not for the little maid. * * * Let me think."

He fell to pacing up and down before the fire on the hearth, and I took the small one on my knee to let her chatter to me. 'Twas five full minutes before my ancient gave me the worth of his cogitations, but when he did speak it was much to the purpose.

"These marplot rear-guards of yours will spoil it all if they come to Ferguson's camp either before or after you. Do they know the major's present whereabouts?"

"No more than I did an hour ago. As I take it, they are depending on me to show them the way."

"Well, then; dead men tell no tales."

"No," said I, firmly. "These followers of mine must be stopped, as you say, else there is no need of my going on. But there must be no butcher's work."

A true patriot should hold himself ready to give his own life or take another's."

"Truly; and I am most willing on both heads. But we have had enough and more than enough of midnight massacre."

Where this argument would have led us in the end, I know not, since we were both waxing warm upon it. But in the midst the little maid came running from the open door, her blue eyes wide in childish terror.

"Injun man!" was all she could say; but that was enough. At a bound I reached the door. An Indian was at my horse's head, loosing the halter, as I thought. Before he could twist to face me the point of the Ferara was at his back.

Luckily, he had the wit not to move. "No kill Uncanoola," he muttered, this without the stirring of a muscle. Then, as if he were talking to the horse: "White squaw, she send 'um word; say 'good-by.'"

My point dropped as if another blade had parried the thrust.

"Mistress Margery, you mean? Do you come from her?"

"She send 'um word; say 'good-by,'" he repeated.

"What else did she say?" I demanded.

"No say anyt'ing else: say 'good-by.'" He turned upon me at that and I saw why he had kept his face averted. He had on the war paint of a Cherokee chief.

(To be continued.)

A Skillful Aviator.

"Are you interested in these aviators?"

"Intensely. I watched one this morning who was an adept. He rose, dipped, circled, turned corners and alighted without trouble and without a mishap."

"Well, well! He must have been a bird!"

"He was; of the sparrow variety."—Washington Herald.

Sure Enough.

She—I see the woman's nine-hour law has been signed by Gov. Hadley of Missouri. It limits the employment of women and girls in factories, restaurants and such places to nine hours a day.

He—Well, what are you going to do about that statement that woman's work is never done?—Exchange.

Indolence.

"Higgins is the laziest man I know of."

"Why doesn't he make some New Year resolutions?"

"He does, annually. But in order to save trouble he merely takes his original set and puts ditto marks under them."

Controversy.

"I suppose the polar controversy is about over."

"Yes," answered Mr. Crosslots, "and the quarrel over the north pole wasn't as big and bitter as the controversy out home about whose business it is to shovel the snow off the walk."—Washington Star.

SLIDE SWEEPS TRAINS OVER EDGE OF CANYON

Twenty-three Dead, Twenty-five Missing, Under Avalanche in State of Washington.

FALL 200 FEET INTO A GULCH

Coaches in Twisted Debris at Mountain's Base—Transcontinental Lines Suffer.

Conditions almost unprecedented in that section have virtually cut off the entire northwest, and have tied up traffic on half a dozen transcontinental railroads. Thaws in the mountains have caused avalanches and snow slides that have swept away mountain towns and sections of railroad tracks from Nevada to British Columbia. Floods also have caused widespread damage.

In the Cascade mountains in Washington two Great Northern trains were buried by an avalanche. Twenty bodies were recovered and scores are injured or missing. The exact number of deaths caused by avalanches in the Rockies, in Idaho, and in western Montana probably will not be known until the summer sun melts the great masses of snow and ice in the canon into which several mining towns were swept.

Further details of the disaster in which an avalanche swept two Great Northern passenger trains and a part of the town of Wellington, Wash., down the mountainside at the west portal of the Cascade tunnel shows it to be more serious than first reported. Twenty-three lives are known to have been lost when the mass of snow, stones and uprooted trees hurled the cars containing seventy sleeping persons over the narrow ledge to the bottom of the canyon 200 feet below, and twenty-five more were reported missing. Besides these a score were injured.

The avalanche rolled down the mountain at 4:30 a. m. The two trains, three locomotives, four powerful electric motors, the depot and water tank were swept off the ledge and deposited in a twisted mass of wreckage at the foot of the mountain. The noise from the snowslide, which was a mile long, could be heard throughout the valley. The wrecked trains lie piled on top of each other 200 feet below the siding on which they stood when the avalanche swept over them. The cars were crushed into kindling wood and no one in the train escaped injury. The slide filled the shelf on which the tracks at Wellington are laid and rolled over the edge into the valley.

Messages telling of the disaster were sent to Everett and a relief train, bearing physicians, nurses and workers, was made up and dispatched. Owing to previous slides which blocked the road and swept away parts of the track, the rescue train could get no further than Scenic, whence the rescuers had to make their way on foot over the snow.

Four transcontinental lines into Washington and Oregon are blockaded. Only one railroad is operating into Salt Lake City. West of Utah the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific lines have been cut by swollen mountain streams.

In Ohio river floods have made 2,000 homeless.

EIGHTY IN PERIL ON FLYER.

Twentieth Century Limited, Bound to Chicago, Derailed.

For a reason not let determined, the west-bound Twentieth Century limited on the Lake Shore Railroad was derailed at Olmsted Falls, 20 miles west of Cleveland, the other day. The train was running at a speed of sixty miles an hour. Two or three passengers whose names have not yet been learned were only slightly injured. The train was running as a double-header and had a straight track. All the seven cars were derailed, but were not thrown more than a few inches from the tracks. Neither locomotive was derailed. Five hundred or 600 feet of track was torn up. There were probably eighty passengers aboard the train, which was due in Chicago at 9:30 a. m. A second train was made up at Cleveland and sent to the scene of the wreck. The passengers were taken aboard this train and sent to their destination.

TOWNS IN OHIO INUNDATED.

Thousands in Distress, Traffic Impeded, Business Demoralized.

Fully a thousand people homeless, other thousands living on the second floors of their homes, traffic impeded and business demoralized in many places, is the situation in Ohio as the result of the floods. A bridge was washed away at Defiance. Mechanicsburg is still under water. Boats only can be used in the greater part of Warren, where the Mahoning is on a rampage. Water is creeping upon the business section of Napoleon, and the Cuyahoga River has inundated Clinton and Warwick. Rain is still falling in the southern part of the State, which will add to the flood in the Ohio River valley. At Zanesville several hundred families have been driven from their homes and the suffering is acute. At Fremont great danger still lurks above the gorged Sandusky River.

INDIANA JEKYLL AND HYDE.

Man Said to Have Been Gambler and Social Favorite.

Stephen Austin, confessed highwayman, held by the police of Pittsburg, is Stephen Austin Gillette, recently of Terre Haute. By pictures of the young man received from Pittsburg he was identified. In one section of Terre Haute Gillette moved in good society. In another he worked in a coal mine and was said to be a gambler. His Jekyll and Hyde existence he was able to conceal from most of his best friends until his identity became known the other day. In connection with his career it has become known that his recent life has been influenced by disappointment in love. The change came when he returned to Terre Haute some time ago and learned that the woman he loved no longer loved him. Away from his miner associates Gillette was a frequent attendant at the Young Men's Christian Association, and he mingled with men of Christian character, and frequently sang in church choirs.

BOY OF 9 IS 'COFFEE DRUNKARD.'

Mother, Who Gives Him Beverage, Blames "Old Nick" for Faults.

A 9-year-old "coffee drunkard" has been discovered in one of the Indianapolis public schools, and attaches of the board of health and the state board have joined hands in a fight to redeem the victim. Considerable success has been met thus far, according to Dr. J. H. Hurty, secretary of the state board, who is giving the case close personal attention. According to notes made on the case the boy was allowed by his mother to drink from eight to ten cups of strong, clear coffee every day for months. A physician found the boy on the verge of insanity. An examination of his home conditions was made and it was found he was a confined coffee drunkard. The mother, to whom the physician appealed, said: "You needn't tell me it is the coffee—it's the Old Nick in him. I've been drinking coffee for thirty years and it never hurt me."

YOUTHS HELD AS BURGLARS.

Three Indiana Boys Betrayed by a Companion.

Three young men, all members of good families, are under arrest in Greenfield charged with burglary. They are James Vanderry, aged 21; Daniel Williams, aged 19, and Cordia Martin, aged 20. A fourth person, who says he was invited to join them, told of their work. The three young men were taken before Mayor Myers, but each refused to talk other than to declare his innocence. The young man who informed the police says that the three men told him they committed the burglary of the Lee C. Thayer store, cracked the safe at the interurban station, robbed the National Adjustable Chair Company in this city, committed recent burglaries at Knightstown, and had planned to force the safe of the Cumberland Bank at Cumberland.

CONVICTED AS A GRAFTER.

Sunday School Superintendent at Winamac Found Guilty.

Clinton L. Bader, head of the Winamac Bridge Company, was convicted of a charge of presenting false claims to Jasper County for the erection of a bridge. Bader was a former state representative from White and Pulaski Counties. He is the superintendent of the Winamac Presbyterian Sunday school, and character witnesses gave him the very highest indorsement. While the argument for a new trial is pending Bader will remain in jail, the court not having admitted him to bail. The conviction means imprisonment of from two to fourteen years and a fine of $1,000.

ELOPES; FATHER IN THREAT

Would Arrest Groom for False Oath As to Bride's Age.

Fort Wayne society was thunderstruck the other day to learn that Miss Clara Bash, daughter of Charles S. Bash, had eloped with Arthur Schreck. The bride is only 17 and popular in the best circles, while the groom is a clerk for a paper house in one of her father's buildings. Mr. Bash threatens to prosecute Schreck, who, is it is said, made a false affidavit as to the girl's age.

ALL OVER THE STATE.

Frank L. Gass, who, until January 1, was city judge of Muncie, fell while at the top of a stairway in an uptown business block, and was seriously injured.

Griffin Carmichael, the one-year-old son of Otto Carmichael, commissioner of Brown County, is dead from burns received when a skillet of boiling water was accidentally overturned on him.

Workmen found a human skull and French dagger buried in the basement of the Louisville and Nashville Railway city ticket office building in Evansville. There were three holes in the top of the skull.

Frank Barman, a wealthy farmer living near Cedar Lake, committed suicide by hanging himself to a tree. Some time ago Barman's brother, Peter, a farmer, also hung himself to a tree and it is thought the fact preyed on the elder brother's mind.

Coming of Spring Suggests Planting.

Farmers Urged to Prepare for Big Exhibit at Free Fall Fair. Fifth Big Success Sure. If Farmers Will do Their Part in Bringing in Products.

The success of the Fifth Fall Exhibit of DeKalb county products is again assured if the farmers of the county will, with the coming of spring lay their plans to make an exhibit, and it possible capture some of the handsome premiums to be distributed this year.

The preliminary arrangements for holding another fair are well under way and the business men and manufacturers of Auburn will offer premiums this year that anyone would be proud to carry home. It remains for the farmers to raise the products and compete for the prizes and the success of the Fifth Fall Fair will not only make you feel glad that you are a resident of DeKalb county, but will establish a new mark in the enormity and magnitude of what the soil of old DeKalb under the tillage of proper husbandmen can produce.

Negotiations are under way to secure an expert from the Purdue Agricultural Experiment station to act as judge of corn and all other cereals. He will be a man who is thoroughly familiar with the business and when the red tag is attached there can be no doubt as to it finding place on the best bushel raised in DeKalb county.

Parties desiring a copy of the premium list are requested to send their name and address to J. C. Lochner, secretary, Auburn, and a copy will be mailed them as soon as it is printed. The dates of the fair this year are Oct. 5, 6 and 7.

WOVEN WIRE FENCE.

There is so many makes of fence on the market, some good, some very poor. I have handled a number of different makes and am convinced that the AMERICAN FENCE is the best value for the money of any fence on the market. The strength of fence depends on the weight of the wire in the fence. Now compare the weight of a ROD of AMERICAN FENCE with the weight of a rod of any other fence then compare the price. Do not take the dealers word as to how much it weighs but put it on the scales and weigh it. I can sell you,

American Fence at Less Than 3 cents per pound

Can you buy any other fence so cheap?

I have eight different styles on hand now. The American Steel and Wire Company make nearly all the wire that is woven in the different makes of fence and it is folly for an agent of any other make of fence to claim a superior quality of wire or of galvanizing. Every manufacturer of fence has an idea as to what temper the wire should be for a fence and orders his wire tempered accordingly, in other words he experimenting at the Farmers expense. The American Steel and Wire Company have passed the experimental stage and are producing a composition of Steel for Fence that is perfectly adapted for it. Every farmer that has had any experience with wire knows that wire exposed to the weather becomes hard and brittle, this feature has been largely eliminated in the special wire used in AMERICAN FENCE. While the wire is stiff and springy it is flexible enough to be easily spliced and will remain so. We will explain other good features if you will call and see us.

We are headquarters for all kinds of roofing, galvanized shingles, any kind of iron roofing, tin repair work. All kinds of Hardware, Lime, Cement, Paint, Oils and Varnishes. Quality right. Prices Right.

Don't wait till the last minute to polish up that rusty old plow, or to get new bolts, or to grind the mowing machine knives. Preparatory licks in time blaze the way to final success. Delay is a dragging anchor.

It is easy to break a good hammer handle in drawing a long nail. After starting the nail out an inch or so, just place a bit of wood under the head of the hammer, raising it up say an inch, and you can pull your nail easily.

Dear brother, when your wife asks you for a little spending money, don't draw a wry face as though she had trod upon your corn. Just shell out with a smile, remembering all the while that the half of what you have is hers by right.

Most folks throw away their felt boots when holes come in the feet. Just cut the feet off and draw the legs on above your shoes when you have a cold job to do. Those boots have not outlived their usefulness when the feet give way. Try it and see.

How natural it is when one man makes a pretty good thing of any one crop, for everybody to rush in and try to do just as he has done! The best way, though, is to take it steady. If you do venture into a strange crop, do it conservatively. The middle course is always best in all such things.

Are you frequently hoarse? Do you have that annoying tickling in your throat? Does your cough annoy you at night, and do you raise mucus in the morning? Do you want relief? If so, take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and you will be pleased. Sold by H. L. Dunkle, St. Joe; W. L. Wernert, Spencerville.

The farmer should hustle around in early spring, order new tools and fix up old ones. In many localities the blacksmith is over burdened to repairing farming tools just at the time when the tools are needed for spring work. Not having implements ready for work at the first opportunity means a loss of several days in getting in a crop. Let us be on hand with the season. If we have been hibernating during the winter like the frog, we had better wake up and stir around some now.

They work wonders for weak, run-down men and women, restoring strength, vigor and health that's a daily joy. Try them. Only 50c Satisfaction is positively guaranteed by H. L. Dunkle.

In these days of scarcity of help on the farm the value of the telephone is becoming more thoroughly appreciated. It does its work with lightning rapidity and saves hours, and even days, in times when it is most valuable. It carries messages to the town, the neighbor, and brings the doctor, help and aid at all hours of the day or night. It never gets drunk, seldom goes on a strike and generally speaking is the most reliable help on the farm.

A Letter.

Long Beach, Cal., 2-4,—'10.

Editor of St. Joe News.

Dear Sir:-

I left Fort Wayne, Nov. 9, for California and arrived in Long Beach, Nov. 15. I immediately looked up Mr. George Paff, a friend of mine, who with his family is residing in Long Beach and engaged rooms with him.

Nothing of special interest happened for the next few days. I spent my time on the pier, often watching the fishing boats come in, loaded with different kinds of fish. After seeing a large number of the fishing boats arrive, I decided to take a fishing trip which I did the eleventh of January. There were thirteen other tourists in the party, and we ran out about eleven miles before stopping. The water here was 800 feet deep, but fishing was poor, so we went two miles farther out. The water here was about 1300 feet deep and fishing better. Small fish were used for bait, and the first fish caught were sharks, one being a six foot man eating shark. About eight sharks were caught; the other fish caught were barrienda, albicore, rock cod and other species too numerous to mention. The rock cod live at great depth below the surface of the water, and when caught their eyes burst out because of the lessened pressure. The day was spent on the water, and on the return trip a school of porpoise was encountered. The porpoise is a sea animal, sometimes called the "sea hog" and weighs from 500 to 1200 pounds.

The following Monday, I went over to Redlands, passing through Riverside, San Bernardino, Highland, Colton, Arrowhead, Hot Springs, Oak Glen, Beaumont and Banning upon arrival. I visited my cousin, Mr. Osbun. I took in all the different sights at Redlands, such as: Sunset drive, a beautiful drive along the foot hills, and overlooking the San Bernardino valley, Yucaipe valley, Live Oak and San Timateo canyons; Smiley Heights a beautiful drive overlooking acres of orange groves, giving a fine view of Redlands. The Redlands orange crop is about 5000 car loads per season, or nearly 2,000,000 boxes, enough to give every person in the United States four oranges. The original navel orange tree, from which have been derived the millions of trees now in California, is still standing near Redlands.

When I returned to Long Beach, the 11th., of January, I went up to the Aviation meet where I saw the French aviator, Paulhan, make a record for height in a Farman bi-plane. On the 18th., I saw Paulhan make a long flight of forty-five miles and back.

On the 25th., I went over to Portuguese Bend a quaint resort on the coast, northwest of San Pedro. It is an old whaling station, and the kettle which was used for boiling out the whale oil is still to be seen. A retired sailor, who maintains a restaurant here, served an excellent fish dinner. The sailor, called Portugnese Charlie, and a comrade, are the only inhabitants of the resort. The time was spent in searching for abilone shells among the rocks on the shore, and climbing the surrounding hills. On the return trip a huge whale was seen.

Four days later, Rev. Shrock, his wife and I went to the Cataline Islands, thirty miles southwest of here. The main attraction here is the submarine gardens. Altho the day was very foggy, it cleared away long enough at noon for us to get a good view of the garden, for they can be seen much better when the sun is shining. They are viewed thru glass set in the bottom of the boats, and they were as fine scenery as I have ever seen. The gardens look very much like a nicely arranged garden, with walks, trees, vines, sea moss and other vegetation, at a depth of one hundred feet. Fish of different colors were seen darting here and there thru the branches.

Eight torpedo boat destroyers have been seen in the harbor at different times. They came into San Pedro harbor San Diego, yesterday evening.

I think I have told you all of interest that has happened up to the present time, so will close for this time.

Yours Truly,
Ezra H. Horn.

20 Years With Heart Trouble

"Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has cured me of heart disease of over 20 years' standing. I was so bad that I could not do my work, and could scarcely draw a full breath without fainting or smothering. The doctor told me he could do no more for me; then I commenced taking the Heart Remedy. I shall never forget that night. I slept better than I had before in months. I kept right on getting better, until I was perfectly well."

MRS. LAURA RUSSELL,
Logan, Iowa.

When the heart action is weak, it fails to pump the blood through the lungs with sufficient rapidity. Then the lungs do not absorb the proper amount of oxygen, although they may be taking in a normal amount of air. The result is shortness of breath, smothering spells, difficult breathing, oppressed feeling in chest. Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy strengthens the heart nerves and muscles, and in this way increases the circulation.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

AT THE BEAUTIFUL GATE.

By Rev. C. A. S. Dwight, Ph. D.

"And a certain man * * * whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask an alms of them that entered into the temple."—Acts 3: 2.

The lame man of old was laid daily at the gate of the Temple which is called "Beautiful." The gate so described was probably the gate on the east which led from "the court of the women" to the inner court. While the other gates were overlaid with gold and silver this portal, according to Josephus, was made "of Corinthian bronze, and much surpassed in worth those enriched with silver and gold." The lame man was perhaps one of the most unfortunate individuals in Jerusalem, having no means of earning a livelihood, being quite friendless and certainly forlorn—yet he was well placed.

The situation at the door of the Temple was both pathetic and promising. He could not walk in, but his thoughts could enter; he might not join in the praises of the worshiping hosts within, but he could catch something of the enthusiasm which brightened their faces as they came out. While he was outside the circle of inner, intimate communion he was yet in the line of blessing and could make daily proof of the fact that it was better to be a lame door-keeper in the house of God than to dwell luxuriously in the court of a riotous Herod.

It is impossible to tell how pure were the motives of the lame man in habitually frequenting the doorstep of the Lord's house. He was certainly after money—but if all who are after money in some shape were excluded from the sanctuary congregations today would be much thinner than in many communities they are. To a degree the lame man needed coin, and to a certain extent every man needs it, but if his thoughts and desires had been wholly centered upon money it is not likely that Peter and John would ever have been attracted to him, or been empowered by the Lord to work in his case a miraculous cure. Let us suppose that the lame man had some sincere interest in the Temple itself as well as in the tolls which he collected from the charitable, and that, while not indifferent to the silver and the gold, he cared most of all for the spiritual message which such men as Peter and John had to give.

It was a fine thing then that the lame man got as far as the Beautiful Gate. Rich or poor, men alike need in their lives the beautifying touch, and hard prosaic lives need it most of all. Even if the lame man could not enter the Temple recesses he could look up and admire the architectural beauty about him, and the gleam of that Corinthian bronze brought a touch of brightness into his life. The geranium plant in the window of the city tenement, the tree struggling for stunted growth in a city street, all these are glimpses and gladdenings of the aesthetic sense—the sense for color, for proportion, for harmony, which, often degraded to a godless "art," are yet susceptible of serving, when purified and idealized, the highest aims of the moral nature. The lame man was deformed in himself, but he was transformed by his daily look into the face of the Beautiful above him.

All men, however, athletic or vigorous or full of pride, are at some point weak—are somewhere in their being lame and impotent and in need of alms, or of a spiritual uplift far better than alms. There are beautiful Gates unto which we all alike need to come. God has made, not one nor two nor six, is in the Temple of old, but many such portals, in different parts of the pilgrim country of mortal sojourn and broad areas of higher experience.

There is first the Beautiful Gate of Faith. If the lame man had not in some degree had faith he would not have received from the miracle-working apostles what was better than alms—new health and strength—and what was better than physical health and quickening—the recreating of his spiritual manhood, the renovation of his moral nature. Without faith it is impossible to please God, or to get anything worth while done. He who would be successful in this life must be much at the Gate of Faith.

There is secondly the Gate of Prayer. Prayer is faith's voice. Faith finds its expression through prayer. The prayerless man is always essentially a weak and resourceless man. The lame man was weak, but he knew how to use his voice in prayer, and so he did not remain weak.

There is the Beautiful Gate of Love. The lame man appealed to the love that was in Peter and John, and did not fail to receive a response. Love is the very atmosphere of that land of delight into which the Gate Beautiful opens. When love dominates and permeates a human life heaven itself at once begins to be realized on earth. There is always in love an inherent beauty, an indescribable charm, and just because it is so the devil tries hard to disseminate the spirit of hate, which tends to pull down and destroy all Gates Beautiful everywhere.

There is the Beautiful Gate of Hope. The soul that is full of faith, prayer and love is consequently and naturally hopeful. Hope paints life in roseate hues, and while it may be unfounded in many cases, is after all, when properly based and directed, one of life's chiefest architectural forces. The Christian man is by that very term and definition a man of hope. The Beautiful Gate of Hope is where he loves oft to be, and which (to change the figure) ever enlarges and becomes the more radiant, as he gazes upon it, until finally it seems fairly merged in the vast expanse of the City Celestial.

Be sure to be often at the Beautiful Gate—not that which long ago fell into ruin at Jerusalem—but that which, even for the lowliest and lamest, offers its invitation of spiritual blessing, and promises a hope and healing both heavenly and forever.

CULTIVATING HEAVENLY POWER.

By Rev. Joseph H. Bradley.

Now we are in training for work in the eternal world. God has purpose in entrusting us with heavenly powers, and the godly must be completely "furnished unto every good work." Such work must surely be an exhilaration, and every opportunity to do be an inspiration, and with immortal powers unflagging. Jesus has gone to prepare a place for us, and we are now preparing for our respective places at the right and left hand of God in honor and power, or in some inferior class, according as our several abilities shall be.

This work will be such as will glorify God in the exercise of His grace, filling us with wisdom and might, and love and joy, that He may carry blessings to others. Truly, such as we who have known God in the redemption of our souls, through Jesus Christ, are above all other creatures, for by this redemption we are differentiated from all others, and so qualified in fullest measure for such work; and being thus qualified we shall not rest in sloth and idleness throughout eternity.

We may be certain that if we have not gained the faculty, and love to work for others here and now, we shall be the same hereafter. If we fail to find work to do here, we would fail there. It is inconceivable that there should be drones in heaven, where the Father works, and Jesus works, and the Holy Spirit works. There is sweet rest in heaven from every fear and torment, with tireless desire and use of every occasion to do the will of God, our Father, having the mind of Christ in us.

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

"STAR OF THE EAST."

By Bishop Reginald Heber.

[Even a brief anthology of English hymns would of necessity contain several written by the talented and devoted Bishop of Calcutta. In his brief but intense ministry of nineteen years he accomplished much good, both in England, the country village where he was first rector, and afterwards in London, and also in India. This hymn was written while he was rector at Hodney, about 1811. While it is intended for the first week of the new year, to celebrate the coming of the Magi to the infant Savior, it is used and greatly enjoyed by congregations everywhere at all seasons.]

Brightest and best of the sons of the morning!
Dawn on our darkness and lend us thine aid;
Star of the east, the horizon adorning,
Guide where our infant Redeemer is laid.

Cold on his cradle the dewdrops are shining;
Low lies his head with the beasts of the stall;
Angels adore him, in slumber reclining,
Maker, and Monarch, and Savior of all!

Say shall we yield him, in costly devotion,
Odors of Edom and offerings divine?
Gems of the mountain and pearls of the ocean,
Myrrh from the forest or gold from the mine?

Vainly we offer each ample oblation,
Vainly with gold would his favors secure;
Richer by far is the heart's adoration;
Dearer to God are the prayers of the poor.

Brightest and best of the sons of the morning!
Dawn on our darkness and lend us thine aid;
Star of the east, the horizon adorning,
Guide where our infant Redeemer is laid.

SHEAR NONSENSE

Visitor—What have you in arctic literature? Librarian—Cook books and Pearyodicals.

Grigge—So Tom is married, eh? Briggs—Yes, for the present. He's married to an actress.—Boston Transcript.

"Did the—ah—prisonah offer any—ah—resistance?" "Only a shilling, your wushup, and I wouldn't take it."—M. A. P.

Salesman—Shirt, sir. Will you have a negligee or a stiff bosom? Customer—Negligee, I guess. The doctor said I must avoid starchy things.

George—Do you think that I'm good enough for you, darling? Darling—No, George; but you're too good for any other girl.—Illustrated Bits.

She—History repeats itself, you know. He—Not always. You never heard of a man eloping more than once, did you?—Yonkers Statesman.

"Have you broken yourself of the habit of sleeping in church?" "Yes—entirely." "Congratulations! How did you do it?" "Quit going to church."—Cleveland Leader.

"How much does it cost to get married?" asked the eager youth. "That depends entirely on how long you live," replied the sad-looking man.—Philadelphia Record.

"The railroads are discharging all men with gray hair." "Most of the married men will be safe." "How so?" "The majority of them are bald."—Houston Post.

"Am I really and truly your first and only love?" queried the dear girl. "No," answered the truthful drug clerk, "but you are something just as good."—Chicago Daily News.

"Why it is that novels are so much more popular with the women than with the men?" "In a novel the fellow invariably asks the girl to be his wife."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Club Waiter (fishing)—I dreamed last night, sir, that you gave me a five-dollar bill. Stingy Member—Indeed, James! That's a little high for a tip; but—er—you may keep it.—Boston Transcript.

"Talk about your realism, this show looks awful natural to me." "How now?" "Six months have elapsed since the play started and the housemaid hasn't done any housework yet."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Suburbs—It is simply great to wake up in the morning and hear the leaves whispering outside of your window. Cityman—It is all right to hear the leaves whisper, but I never could stand hearing the grass mown.

"Now, Willie," said the teacher, "if eggs were 60 cents a dozen and your mother had 20 cents, how many eggs would you have for breakfast?" "No eggs," answered Willie. "We'd have mush."—Washington (D. C.) Herald.

Tommy—What did you think of the play "Julius Caesar" last night? Billy Oh, it was a fake. "Why so?" "'Cause when they killed Julius Caesar and the curtain went down, he comes out and bows to the audience. He wasn't dead at all!"

"I must warn you, dearest," he said, "that after we are married, you will very likely find me inclined to be arbitrary and dictatorial in my manner." "No matter," she replied cheerfully. "I won't pay the slightest attention to what you say."

Mistress (hurrying frantically)—Mary, what time is it now? Maid—Half past two, mum. Mistress—Oh, I thought it was later—I still have twenty minutes to catch the steamer. Maid—Yes, mum. I knew ye'd be rushed, so I set the clock back thirty minutes to give ye more time.—Puck.

"You simply cannot trust anybody!" declares the lady. "My maid, whom I had the utmost confidence in, left me suddenly and took with her my beautiful pearl brooch." "That is too bad," sympathizes the friend. "Which one was it?" "That very pretty one I smuggled through last spring."—Life.

"Pshaw!" exclaimed Miss Yerner, impatiently, "I'm sure we will miss the opening number. We've waited a good many minutes for that mother of mine." "Hours, I should say," Mr. Sloman retorted rather crossly. "Ours? Oh, George!" she cried, and laid her blushing cheek upon his shirt front.—Catholic Standard.

"Little boy," asks the well-meaning reformer, "is that your mamma over yonder with the beautiful set of furs?" "Yes, sir," answers the bright lad. "Well, do you know what poor animal it is that had to suffer in order that your mamma might have the furs with which she adorns herself so proudly?" "Yes, sir—my papa."

"Please help a blind man," said a fellow with green goggles. "I always help the blind," said one of two young men, and he stopped and took out a five-dollar bill; "can you get a quarter out of this?" "I guess so," said the blind man, counting out four dollars and seventy-five cents. "Well, John," said the benevolent young man's companion, as they walked on, "you're a bigger fool than I took you to be." "Am I?" said John. "Yes, you are; that fellow's no more blind than I am. How could he tell that was a five-dollar bill?" "Blamed if I know," said John, innocently; "but he must be mighty near-sighted not to see that it was a counterfeit."—Chicago News.

WESTERN CANADA

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Powers

"The greatest need of this country [United States] in another generation or two will be the providing of homes for its people and producing sufficient for them. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are gone. Canada is to be the great wheat country."

This great railroad magnate is taking advantage of the situation by extensive railway building to the wheat fields of Western Canada.

Upwards of 125 Million Bushels of Wheat

were harvested in 1909. Average of the three provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be upwards of 33 bushels per acre.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre), are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured; mixed farming a success. Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong. Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 31 stamps.

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was troubled with falling and inflammation, and the doctors said I could not get well unless I had an operation. I knew I could not stand the strain of one, so I wrote to you sometime ago about my health and you told me what to do. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I am to-day a well woman."—Mrs. WILLIAM AHRENS, 988 W. 21st St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

JOHN I. BROWN & SON, Boston, Mass.

The Week in Congress

The Senate heard Washington's farewell address read Tuesday, passed a few bills of minor importance and adjourned. The House passed the Indian appropriation bill practically in the form recommended by the committee, carrying $8,250,000. The postoffice appropriation measure was then taken up and after being in session for five and one-half hours the House adjourned.

The Senate heard an extended argument Wednesday by Senator Brown in favor of an income tax. Senator Beveridge explained the nature of bills he had introduced in the present Congress relating to the Alaskan coal deposits, and predicted that these deposits would, in time, be needed by the entire country. He estimated the total coal tonnage of Alaska at 15,000,000,000 tons. The Sherley bill for a uniform bankruptcy law was passed by the House.

The Senate Thursday agreed to vote the next Thursday on the postal savings bank bill. Senator Bailey spoke in opposition to that measure, pronouncing it unconstitutional. In dramatic style and with flowery eloquence Senator Gordon of Mississippi delivered his farewell address to the Senate. Consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill, carrying $239,000,000, was begun in the House, thus giving to many members opportunities to make political speeches. Representative Gardner of Massachusetts addressed the House on the subject of high prices of the necessaries of life, contending that the tariff was not an important factor in determining such price. He exhibited charts to show that price movements were worldwide. The House held a night session, during which there was general debate on the postoffice bill.

In the Senate Friday Senator Owen spoke in favor of postal savings banks and incidentally in defense of the Oklahoma savings bank law. The Senate practically cleared all bills from its calendar. The bill for the payment of $287,000 on account of claims of letter carriers because of extra service was among those passed. Adjournment was taken until Monday. Political speeches delivered in time allotted for debate on the postoffice bill characterized the proceedings of the House. Representative Claude Kitchin of North Carolina created amusement by arraigning the "near insurgents" for what he termed their hypocrisy in opposing Speaker Cannon merely to please their constituents and obtain a re-election without any expectation or desire of displacing the speaker. A number of speeches were made in support of a policy for a rapid extension of the free delivery service and upon other phases of the postoffice bill.

The Senate was not in session Saturday. Eulogies upon the life and character of General Lew Wallace in connection with the acceptance by Congress of a statue of General Wallace presented by the State of Indiana and a debate upon the postoffice appropriation bill consumed the time of the House.

At a two hours' session Monday the Senate passed the Aldrich bill providing for a commission of Senators, Representatives and civil appointees to be selected by the President to supervise the business methods of the executive departments of the government, by which it is hoped to save $100,000,000 a year. The postoffice appropriation bill was under consideration in the House during the entire session, which lasted over six hours.

Peary Gives $10,000.

At a meeting of the Civic Forum of New York, called as a "national testimonial" to Commander Peary, for his great work in finding the North Pole, Gov. Hughes, who presided, presented Peary with a check for $10,000 as a contribution from the people of New York State. In accepting the gift, Peary treated his audience to a rare sensation by the following words: "This check which you have presented to me as a testimonial of appreciation, I will, with your permission and that of the Civic Forum, contribute to a fund to equip an American South Polar expedition to compete with our British cousins in the race for the second great prize, and I wish it to be taken as a joint contribution from the citizens of New York." The house was caught off its feet by the suddenness of the announcement and, after it had cheered itself tired, a line began to form in the aisles and several hundreds passed up and shook the explorer's hand.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

A girl believed to have been Miss Beatrice Snyder, of Buffalo, committed suicide by going over Niagara Falls.

George Andrews, a wealthy fruit merchant of Cambridge, Ohio, has received a letter signed "Black Hand," demanding $500 on pain of death.

Another tong plot, according to the New York police, is responsible for the murder of Sam Wah, a Chinese laundryman, who died in the Harlem hospital.

Dr. H. B. Stanley, formerly coroner of Chatham County, Georgia, has been fined $1,000 at Savannah, with the alternative of imprisonment, for violating the State anti-cocaine selling law.

Simeon W. Stevens, appointed postmaster at Gardner, Mass., by President Franklin Pierce in 1854, and who had received successive appointments since then, is dead. He was 91 years old.

TACK THIS UP

Prescription that Breaks Up the Worst Cold in a Day.

Every winter this prescription is published here and thousands have been benefited by it. "Get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. Take a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle well each time." But be sure to get only the genuine Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top case. Any druggist has it on hand or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Many other pine extracts are impure and cause nausea.

In Agony with Eczema.

"No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with itching and bleeding eczema, until I was cured by the Cuticura Remedies, and I am so grateful I want the world to know, for what helped me will help others. My body and face were covered with sores. One day it would seem to be better, and then break out again with the most terrible pain and itching. I have been sick several times, but never in my life did I experience such awful suffering as with this eczema. I had made up my mind that death was near at hand, and I longed for that time when I would be at rest. I had tried many different doctors and medicines without success, and my mother brought me the Cuticura Remedies, insisting that I try them. I began to feel better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap, and one application of Cuticura Ointment.

"I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and have taken four bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and consider myself well. This was nine years ago and I have had no return of the trouble since. Any person having any doubt about this wonderful cure by the Cuticura Remedies can write to my address. Mrs. Altie Etson, 93 Inn Road, Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 16, 1909."

Its Strong Point.

"How can I tell," asked the customer, "whether I am getting tender meat or not?"

"There's only one sure way, ma'am," said the butcher, "an' that's by eatin' of it."

"But I have to buy it before I can do that."

"Yes'm; that's the beauty of the prescription."

We Will Pay You $500 in Gold To Name Our New Corn

Shakespeare says there is nothing in a name, but John A. Salzer says A GOOD NAME IS WORTH A FORTUNE. He backs up his statement by offering you $500.00 in gold to name his wonderful, long-kerneled corn, pictured in life size at the left on this page.

A prominent Agricultural Expert, on seeing this new corn, exclaimed:

"Salzer, you have startled the Agricultural World in discovering this most remarkable breed of corn!"

Indeed, it is the most remarkable corn ever seen by mortal eye.

But not a bushel of it is for sale. For there is not one-tenth enough in existence to fill the tremendous orders that will pour in when this new corn goes on the market.

Next year we may have enough to sell. Right now the best anybody can do is to obtain a sample package—enough to grow ½ bushel of seed for 1911. You are mighty welcome to a sample. Please send 8c in stamps to pay mailing charges.

* * * * *

The thing that puzzles us is, WHAT ARE WE GOING TO NAME OUR NAMELESS CORN?

Mr. Salzer will not be content with anything but a slashing, smashing good name. So he offers $500 in gold to the seed-buyer who hits upon the most suitable name.

We want you, reader, to help us out. Name this corn, won't you? It does not cost a penny to use the corn-naming coupon below. Fill it out, send it to-night and be a candidate for the $500 cash prize.

THE JUDGES

We are fortunate in securing three of the most capable and prominent men in Wisconsin to sit as Judges in our big corn-naming contest. They are Prof. R. A. Moore, Wisconsin State Agricultural College; Hon. J. J. Esch, Congressman from Wisconsin; Hon. Robt. Calvert, U. S. Customs, La Crosse. These eminent men will weigh carefully the name you suggest, and, if it is most suitable, you will get the $500 prize. No matter who you are or where you live, you will be given a fair, square opportunity to land the money.

Fill out the free corn-naming coupon with pencil or pen as you please, but be sure to give your complete home address.

Salzer's Catalogue

It's the most original seed book published, and is gladly mailed to intending purchasers free; or remit 10c and get lots of remarkable farm seed samples, including Billion $ Grass, Alfalfa, Speltz, etc., worth a little farm to get a start with, or send 15c and we add a package of Nameless Corn.

BILLION $ GRASS

Positively the greatest grass of the century. Sown when the ground is thoroughly warm, it will produce from two to four crops of hay the first season, yielding all the way from 10 to 15 tons per acre. It is prodigiously prolific.

It requires 20 lbs. seed per acre.

Price: Salzer's Superior, 20 lbs., $1.75; 50 lbs. $3.00; 100 lbs., $5.50.

Salzer's 20th Century, 20 lbs., $2.25; 50 lbs. $5.00; 100 lbs., $8.50.

We commend our 20th Century strain as the purest, we believe, on earth.

ALFALFA

Pronounced Absolutely Pure, No Weeds.

Largest growers of Clover, Timothy and Grasses, Oats, Barley and Potatoes in America.

EX-GOV. HOARD, OF WISCONSIN, from 30 acres sown to Salzer's 20th Century Alfalfa, harvested within 24 weeks after seeding $2500 worth of magnificent hay, or at the rate of $83.33 per acre.

Salzer's Alfalfa Clover will produce a crop on any farm in America where timothy will grow. It is famed for its stubborn hardiness and prodigal vigor.

Price, 20th Century (Pure Seed)—sow 20 lbs. per A.—20 lbs., $4.90; 100 lbs., $22.00.

POTATOES

100,000 Bus. Pedigree Seed Potatoes.

Largest Growers Seed Potatoes in America, yielding from 150 to 600 bushels per acre for each and every acre you plant. Price range from $2.00 to $4.00 per Barrel.

No other Seed House has kept in such close touch with State Agricultural Colleges as the John A. Salzer Seed Co. This great Seed House specializes in the pedigreed varieties of seed that are brought forth by State Colleges of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas and all other Agricultural Colleges in the Middle West.

THE WELD THAT HELD

You don't want merely a "strong fence". You want the strongest fence made. You want the most durable fence—because that means long use, perfect service, real economy. Also, you want the fence that looks well, that fits your needs as perfectly as though made to your order.

This fence is made of our own special steel, galvanized by our own latest improved process, which insures the longest-lived fence on the market.

PITTSBURGH PERFECT WELDED FENCE

One Solid Piece of Steel Throughout.

No clamps, ties, twists, or wraps. Wires electrically welded at every contact point—the weld is even stronger than the wire. This welding adds strength and reduces cost. The only welded fence made. Made in 73 different styles for every fence purpose. Pig tight, bull strong. You simply can't afford to miss seeing the Pittsburgh Perfect Fence.

NEWS SUPPLEMENT
March 10, 1910.

At about 2:45 Sunday morning word was telegraphed to Garrett, that an engine had gone over the embankment at the Concord pump house. It seems as though the train was about to pull out of the east end switch of the south siding and as a new breakman was sent to open the switch, he accidentally threw the wrong one and run the train in on the pump house spur, a track about 100 feet long. When they reached the end the engineer, Warren McClure, stated that he thought he was on a low joint and upon looking out he saw what was before them. He immediately told the fireman to jump, he too gave a leap out of the south window of the cab and ran down the bank the monster engine following. It was for sometime before Mr. McClure put in his appearance, as he found himself in the reservoir amid the ice, water and mud, and when he was found he hardly knew his name. He escaped with slight injuries. The firem n fell in the track on his head and shoulders but was not injuried. It might be said that the blame will fall on the breakman but it should not as he did what he thought to be right. We were told that it was his first trip after making his trial trip satisfactory. The tender landed down the bank within four feet of the pump house and the tree standing near was badly splintered up. The Garrett wrecker was called and the tender was hoisted up. The engine was a 2500 and the Garrett wrecker was unable to put her on the track and by 10:30 the Chicago Junction crew arrived and with assistance of a number of sections the debris was cleaned up at about 3:15 Sunday night. All day, Sunday, the entire gang worked hard and people from miles away came to see the wreck. After all it was a lucky wreck, no lives being lost. Had the ground been frozen hard the engine would have made several turns down the bank and no doubt Mr. McClure would have been buried beneath the wreckage.

Hi Dunkle.

Twenty-five dollars in gold and the distinguished honor of being the best speller in the DeKalb county schools were what Mary Rioenhour of District No. 5, Wilmington township, carried home with her Saturday evening from the county spelling contest that ended a little before five o'clock after wrestling with catchy, yet familiar, words, also the more difficult ones and less familiar ones. This prize in gold comes from Chas. Eckhart who last fall said he would give that sum to the winner in such a contest as was pulled off. He turned the matter over to County Superintendent H. E. Coe who arranged the details and also a second prize of ten dollars and a third of five dollars, in gold and a fourth, a beautiful bouquet of flowers, the gift of Ten Eyck & Son, the florists.

This arrangement was a special inducement and a greater incentive than if there had been but the one prize. Jay Shellhouse, District No. 4, Richland, captured second honors, Hugh Carper, District No. 1, Jackson, third, and Emerson C. Walker, District No. 1, Grant, fourth. Mrs. Dr. Lida Leasure pronounced the words and showed a peculiar adaptability for her work. She rose to the emergency admirably and remained in full command of the situation. She was assisted by Supt. Coe and three judges F. M Merica of Garrett, J. J. Eakright of Butler and R. L. Bailey of Altona. The girl who won first prize was a deserving girl and after knowing that she had actually won the prize she was nearly overcome. Chas. Krise is her teacher.

Breaking the Record.

Spurred on by my splendid record for 1909-the distinction of having sold more hats than ever before, I am determined to make, during 1910, an even greater increase. I never was in a better position to do this. I have hats from the east, west, north and south, where they were equipped with every modern device, where the most exacting standards of inspection and efficiency are maintained.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY MAR 18-19

Think of all the most charming hats you ever saw and still you will fall short of anything so exquisit as those to be seen here and don't think because only the really fashionable are included, that prices must necessarily be high. Those of our customers who seek pretty but inexpensive head-wear will find just as much to interest them as women who desire costly millinery.

The meeting of the L. L. C. which was held at the home of Mrs. C. A. Patterson last Wednesday evening, was of unusual interest, this being the time when the hostess gave the report of her trip, From St. Joe to Seattle. Her discriptions were so vivid that the ladies almost thought themselves being carried along in an observation car with the party, veiwing the beautiful mountain scenery, and again the green valleys, together with many other things of interest to be seen in the far west. She used a map showing the route taken, also showing many beautiful views of places visited. Mrs. D. J. Baker also gave a history of St. Joe from the time the B. & O. railroad was built up to the present time. The balance of the program was of a musical nature. "Importance of Music in the Home Life," was given by Mrs. Belle Barney. "The Great Masters of Modern Opera," Miss Ethel Berry. Four hand selection Mrs. Tustison and Grace Sechler. Musical game, Miss Lela Shilling. Responses at roll call, Musicians. One new member was added to the club making twenty-one active members and eight honary members.

Owen W. Rummell of Boston Writes.

Editor of ST. JOE NEWS

Dear Sir:

Your letter of appreciation of my recent contribution to THE NEWS came duly to hand. I will be pleased to write further and more definitely this time of Boston and vicinity. The only difficulty is to know where to begin. However the first Sunday I was here last October, I went to Cambridge with a friend to hear the famous Alexander McKenzie preach, and so got a glimpse of Harvard University Campus and buildings and of the Washington Elm so I will say something of these. The different departments of Harvard are scattered and some of them are housed in elegant modern buildings. This is true especially of the Medical School, which has its home in a group of five fine marble structures in Boston. The buildings one sees on getting off the street car at Harvard Square Cambridge are less modern but very picturesque in appearance. The Campus proper is surrounded by an iron fence. Just off Harvard Square is the Washington Elm, which is surrounded by an iron fence and bears upon it a tablet stating that "Under this tree Washington first took command of the American Army." The tree is large and is still vigorous and well preserved.

Returning to Boston we will go down to Atlantic Avenue where the fishing smacks unload--(one brought in 40,000 lbs., of fish from a trip in the early winter)—and find the site of the Boston Tea Party. The shore line has now been pushed back by filling in until the water is a couple hundred feet from where the ships rode at anchor on that fateful day. But on a building marking the point, we discover the following inscription cast in steel in this form:

Here formerly stood
GRIFFINS' WHARF
At which lay moored on Dec., 16, 1773 three Brittish ships with cargoes of tea. To defeat King George's trivial but tyrannical tax of three cents a pound, about ninety citizens of Boston partly disguised as Indians, boarded the ships threw the cargoes, three hundred fifty-two chests in all into the sea and made the world ring with the patriotic exploits of the BOSTON TEA PARTY.

"No ne'er was mingled such a draught
In palace, hall or arbor,
As freemen braved, and tyrants quaffed
That night in Boston Harbor."

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Big Automobile Consolidation.

A consolidation of certain large automobile interests having a capitalization of several hundred million dollars is believed to be under way. J. P. Morgan & Co., who recently purchased the E. M. F. Company, of Detroit, Mich., will, it is said, finance the combination. The names of some of the manufacturers of motor cars are being mentioned in connection with the proposed consolidation. The following statement has been issued: Pursuant to arrangement with stockholders of the Studebaker Brothers' Manufacturing Company, J. P. Morgan & Co., have purchased substantially all of the stock of the Everitt-Metzger-Flanders Company, of Detroit, not already held by stockholders of the Studebaker Brothers' Manufacturing Company. In connection with the purchase a contract has been entered into with Walter E. Flanders to continue as president and general manager of the company for a period of three years. As a part of the transaction the litigation pending at Detroit is terminated." Members of the Morgan firm decline to give any additional particulars regarding the purchase.

Girl Plays with Match.

Luella Hampton, aged 3 years, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Hampton, was burned to death at her home in Frankfort, Ind. The mother had gone to the home of a neighbor, leaving the girl and a 5-year-old brother alone. The girl obtained a match and in striking it set her clothing on fire. Her body was burned almost to a crisp and she was dead when neighbors reached the place. The alarm was given by the boy.

Long Hatpins Declared Nuisance.

Woman's long hatpins were declared to be a "public nuisance" and an anti-hatpin ordinance was ordered drawn by the judiciary committee of the City Council at Chicago, Ill. The action followed a week's crusade against the hatpin which culminated in a public hearing. The ordinance will stipulate that hatpins worn in public places "shall not extend more than one-half of an inch beyond the crown of the hat."

Negro Preacher Killed.

"Parson Wallace," a negro preacher, was mortally wounded in a duel with a policeman in Greenwood, Miss., who was trying to collect a debt from the colored man. The policeman was slightly wounded. Threats of a lynching were made by a crowd which gathered in front of the negro's cabin but the crowd on learning that the negro was fatally hurt dispersed and Wallace died soon afterward.

Leaves Wealth to Lodge.

The will of A. W. Shirey, a prominent merchant at Minturn, Ark., who was recently assassinated, has been opened. A fortune estimated at about $200,000 was left entirely to the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows to establish a sanitarium at Hot Springs, Ark. Shirey was shot through the window of his store by unknown parties.

Son Sees Father End Life.

Despondent from his ill health Cliff Wright, of Terre Haute, Ind., committed suicide in sight of his 4-year-old son by cutting his throat with a razor. In order to make sure his effort Wright stood in front of a mirror when he drew the blade across his throat. He was 34 years old and leaves a mother, widow and two children.

Body Turns Into Stone.

After being bedfast for twenty-four years on account of an injury and which was held responsible for a peculiar disease in which for nearly a quarter of a century his flesh had been slowly ossifying, John Commer died at South Bend, Ind. He was 86 years old and had been a resident of that city for fifty years.

Girl Killed when Auto Skidded.

An automobile in which six young men and women were riding near Chamberlain, ten miles from Baton Rouge, La., skidded across the road and overturned, instantly killing Miss Sue Devall.

Senator Daniel Ill.

United States Senator John W. Daniel, of Virginia, was stricken with paralysis at Daytona, Fla. He is at a hospital and his physicians say he will recover. He is improving.

GENERAL STRIKE TIES UP ALL PHILADELPHIA

General Walkout in Sympathy with Street Car Men Takes Effect at Midnight.

MILITIA IS HELD IN READINESS

Labor Leaders Assert 100,000 Union Workers Will Obey Order—Impartial Estimate 40,000.

A general strike of the unions in sympathy with the striking street car men went into effect in Philadelphia at midnight the other night. Simultaneously it became known, despite the denial of Gen. Clay, head of the police force, that every national guard regiment in the State of Pennsylvania has received orders to be ready to entrain for Philadelphia at an hour's notice.

The labor leaders are shouting exultantly that 100,000 men have lined up with the striking motormen and conductors. The police canvassers make the figure less than 21,000. An impartial estimate is 40,000, a little more or a little less.

While the labor leaders are receiving moral support from their fellow workmen in all parts of the country, many associations of employers have sent letters and telegrams to the officials of the Rapid Transit Company and the city officials commending the stand taken and urging them to remain firm in their determination not to submit to the strikers' demand for union recognition. The struggle of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company against the car men's union has broadened into a fight between employers who insist on their right to run open shops and labor unionism. From now on the issue is the life or death of labor unionism in Philadelphia.

All policemen, firemen and specials who have been on duty since the strike began received orders to remain at their posts. The emergency automobiles in the city hall courtyard were increased in number and measures taken to send a force of men to any section of the city at a moment's notice. Many of these machines are driven by their owners, wealthy men, who have volunteerd for police duty and have been sworn in.

The outlook is ominous, even to the most chereful observers. So much bitterness has developed in the last few days that the people of Philadelphia are preparing for any kind of trouble.

DUST EXPLOSION KILLS.

Two Dead, 28 Hurt in American Maize Company's Roby Mills.

An explosion of dry starch powder in the plant of the American Maize Products Company at Roby, Ind., early on a recent evening probably killed two men, injured twenty-eight others, two probably fatally, wrecked a three-story building and broke windows in South Chicago and in Hammond, Ind., three and five miles away. Fire followed the explosion, but companies from South Chicago and Hammond confined the flames to the wrecked building.

Thirteen of the twenty-eight ben injured are in the South Chicago Hospital. Ten were taken to their homes. Seven men are missing. Five of these have been seen since the explosion, but later disappeared, and the bodies of two, the names not ascertainable, are believed to lie under the debris of the building.

The explosion occurred a few minutes before 6 o'clock, just before the night shift at the factory arrived, in the dry starchhouse of the sugar refining plant. Thirty men work there. The force of the explosion hurled most of the men clear of the building, but a number were rescued from under pieces of wreckage. Flames shot high in the air and bricks and timbers were thrown for rods.

Calls for assistance in fighting the flames that threatened the entire plant were sent to South Chicago and Hammond, and two fire companies from each place responded. The fire was not extinguished until late in the night. The damage is estimated at $50,000.

GENEROUS JOHN D.

Oil Magnate Said to Be Planning to Give Away Money.

John D. Rockefeller has asked the aid of Congress in disposing of a large part of his wealth for the benefit of mankind. The first step was the introduction of a bill to incorporate the Rockefeller Foundation in the District of Columbia. The bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator Jacob H. Gallinger, of New Hampshire. It was referred to the committee on judiciary. The scope of the foundation is broad, although its purposes were embraced in a short section of the bill introduced. This section reads: "That the object of the said corporation shall be to promote the well being and to advance the civilization of the peoples of the United States and its territories and possessions and of foreign lands in the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge, in the prevention and relief of suffering, and in the promotion of any and all of the elements of human progress." Mr. Rockefeller is silent for the present as to the purposes of the incorporation.

PRICES UP IN ALL COUNTRIES.

Statistics Show Advance in Meat Figures Throughout World.

The advance in the price of meats in the United States in recent years seems to correspond, in a measure at least, with conditions which have caused increases in meat prices throughout the world, not only in those countries which do not produce much meat, but also in Argentina, Australia, New Zealand, Canada and other countries which produce a surplus for export. The government has gathered some interesting statistics upon the subject. It is found that the advance in the price of fresh meats is less than in salted and preserved meats, and in nearly all cases the advance has been less in beef than in pork or mutton.

In Australia beef preserved by cold process advanced in export price from $5.23 per 100 pounds in 1899 to $5.40 in 1908, mutton and lamb from $3.82 per 100 pounds in 1899 to $6.47 in 1908. From Canada the value of fresh beef exports advanced from an annual average of 6.1 cents per pound in 1898 to 8.2 cents in 1909, that of mutton from 6.1 to 11.2 cents; pork from 3.3 to 9 cents and butter from 18.1 cents to 24 cents.

All the European cities show, wherever statistics are available, higher wholesale prices in the local markets. In Moscow, Russia, beef of the first quality has advanced in price per pound from 8.6 cents in 1903 to 12 cents in 1908. Berlin shows an advance in beef from 13.2 in 1896 to 16.5 cents in 1908, pork from 12.9 to 16.3 cents.

SAVES THREE; LOSES OWN LIFE.

Crowd Watches Pittsburg Man Slowly Die of Electrocution.

Before the eyes of several hundred horror-stricken promenaders who were enjoying the sunshine in the pretty little Pittsburg suburb of Fair Oaks, Charles Rommel was electrocuted while attempting to save two of his young daughters and a young playmate from meeting the same fate. Rommel had just started from his home when, crossing the street, an electric light wire dropped and the children became entangled in its meshes. He succeeded in extricating them, but in throwing one end of the broken wire, which was dead, he inadvertently came in contact with the other end. This completed a circuit, and the sparks darted from the man's face and body by the thousand. It was fully half an hour before the deadly current was turned off, and in the meantime the horrified crowd stood helpless, watching Rommel die.

LIVE-STOCK RECEIPTS FALL OFF.

Government Figures Show Drop from Previous Years in January.

Internal-commerce movements in January, according to statistics of the department of commerce and labor, showed heavy movements of coal and coke in the east, increased grain receipts at the interior markets and light movements of live stock in the middle west and of cotton in the south.

At seven primary interior markets live stock receipts during the month aggregated 3,084,892 head, compared with 3,706,892 and 4,529,338 head in January of 1909 and 1908. Receipts of hogs were 31 per cent below those of January, 1909, and 48 per cent below the January, 1908, total, all the cities sharing in the decline.

Shipments of packing house products from Chicago aggregated 167,330,123 pounds, compared with 189,854,534 and 212,396,423 pounds during January of 1909 and 1908.

FIVE DEAD IN RACE RIOT.

Negro Slayers of Deputy Sheriffs Lynched by Florida Mob.

With three negroes dead as the result of a race riot in the neighborhood of Palmetto, Fla. the wrath of the residents in that section seems to be assuaged. The sum total of deaths is three negroes and two white men, with one white man in the emergency hospital in Tampa with a bullet hole through his head. The last of the three negroes implicated in the murder of two deputy sheriffs and the fatal wounding of the third was lynched by a posse at dusk in the palmettos on the banks of the Manatee River. He had fallen asleep, and when he awoke he was gazing into the barrels of a dozen rifles and shotguns. Even then he showed resistance and reached for his rifle. In a second he was riddled with bullets.

KILLS 92 RAILROADERS.

Avalanche on Canadian Pacific Road Buries Scores of Workers.

Ninety-two Canadian Pacific train men, track men and laborers were buried by an avalanche in Rogers Pass on the summit of the Selkirk range of the Rocky Mountains. All probably are dead. Only five bodies have been recovered. They are those of Roadmaster Frazer, Fireman Griffith, Conductor Buckley, Engineer Phillips and a Japanese. Work of recovering the dead and opening the track was greatly impeded by a blizzard raging in the pass. There was another big slide of snow and rock a mile east of the spot where the men were overwhelmed. It destroyed a portion of a snow shed and buried the track for 400 yards to a depth of sixty feet. There were no victims in the last avalanche.

Woodsman Eaten by Wolves.

James Smith, a woodsman, was eaten by wolves in the forest near Ally, Mo., after fighting a desperate battle for his life. The wolves attacked him while he was alone, awaiting the return of a brother. When the latter returned he found his brother's bones in the center of a circle of five dead wolves, while an empty repeating rifle showed that he had been overpowered before he could reload the weapon.

Hundreds See Acrobat Fall.

Fifteen hundred persons were horror stricken at a Cincinnati theater the other afternoon when a performer named Augusta Fassio, while perched on her brother's head eighteen feet above the stage, lost her balance and fell to the floor, breaking her neck. She has little chance of recovery. The man was on tables piled twelve feet above the stage.

MOB RULES DALLAS, TEXAS.

Takes Aged Colored Man from Court and Put Him to Death.

Snatched from before the bar of justice, where his trial on the charge of criminally assaulting a 2-year-old white child was about to begin, Allen Brooks, an aged negro, was lynched in Dallas, Texas, by a mob of 5,000 men.

Brooks was seized in the courtroom by fifteen leaders of the avenging mob and was tossed through a window to the main body, which waited like a pack of ravening wolves for their prey, in the street below. His broken body was dragged through the streets and he was hanged to the Elks' arch, high above the heads of the avenging citizens. The mob was led by an old negro. With it all hardly a loud word was spoken, not a shot was fired, and above the dull murmurings of the mob could be heard the aged negro's piercing shrieks for mercy.

After Brooks was hanged Dallas for nearly three hours was in the hands of the mob. The jail was stormed and death was threatened to three other negroes, held on charges of murder. They had been spirited away, however, and after searching for them in vain the mob dispersed.

The crime for which Brooks paid the penalty was one of the most brutal in the history of Dallas. His victim is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Buven.

KANSAS TO OPPOSE HANGING.

State Officials Will Ask Taft to Commute O'Niel's Sentence.

Governor Stubbs and Kansas State officers will appeal to President Taft to commute to life imprisonment the death sentence which was imposed by a jury in the federal court two months ago on Charles O'Neil, an army officer. Kansas has not had a hanging since it became a State. Two years ago capital punishment was wiped from the statutes. None of the Governors of Kansas ever ordered prisoners hanged who were sent up for murder. They were permitted to serve life sentences. When the verdict of guilty was rendered in the federal court Judge John C. Pollock ordered that O'Neil be confined in the Leavenworth County jail until March 29, when he should be executed. United States Marshal Mackay is preparing for the execution.

MORE LANDS FOR FARMERS.

Irrigated Tracts in South Dakota Are Opened for Entry.

The Secretary of the Interior has announced the completion of the second unit of the Belle Fourche, S. D., irrigation project, embracing 10,000 acres, divided into forty and eighty acre farms. These farms now are available for entry. No lottery system is to be employed, settlers being required, after making choice of a farm, to file their entries in the local land-office, with a cash payment of $3.40 per acre. The entire cost of water right for a forty-acre farm is $1,200, payable in ten annual installments.

Dr. Raymond B. Fitzrandolph, director of the State laboratory of hygiene, made a chemical analysis of the biscuits recently left on the doorstep of Rev. A. J. Vogelin of Irvington, N. J., and found that each biscuit contained sufficient arsenic to cause the death of four persons.

$500,000 Fire Alarms Boston.

The heart of the wool district of Boston was seriously threatened by a spectacular fire that called out nearly the entire city department on five alarms and destroyed the seven-story New England building at 200 Summer street, opposite the South station. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"The advent of seasonable weather adds a cheering tone to business. Trading defaults have fallen in both number and liabilities to the smallest since April, 1907. March settlements are seen to be remarkably heavy and the volume of solvent payments through the banks establishes a new high record. Financial conditions become decidedly favorable and ample accumulation of funds offers encouragement to more extended enterprise in commerce and investment.

"Railroad operations rapidly return to the normal, while the returns indicate increasing movements of finished and raw products, general merchandise, grain and plantation needs.

"Outputs of the leading industries continue rising, and the approach of spring work involves wider use of miscellaneous materials and machinery and hands. Permits during February for new business structures and additions were seventy in number and $2,964,600 in value, and compare with forty-seven in number and $958,500 in value in 1909.

"Dealings in the principal wholesale and retail branches of general merchandise make a favorable comparison with this time last year.

"Bank clearings, $336,010,197, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1909 by 7.8 per cent, and compare with $264,397,914 in 1908. Failures reported in the Chicago district number twelve, as against twenty-one last week, twenty-seven in 1909 and forty in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number three, as against four last week, ten in 1909 and thirteen in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade is still irregular, and spring trade is rather backward in developing at many points. Weather conditions, flooded streams and bad country roads are variously assigned as reasons for the hesitation shown in various lines, but back of all these there is an undeniable feeling of conservatism, bred of the uncertainty regarding the reception to be given higher-priced products by the ultimate consumer. Re-order trade in spring goods by jobbers is not especially large, and business at first hands is held back, pending clearer views of price matters and crop prospects. Collections are widely quoted as slow.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with March 3 were 184, against 254 last week, 219 in the like week of 1909, 287 in 1908, 172 in 1907 and 177 in 1906.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 22, which compares with 28 last week and 33 in the same week in 1909.—Bradstreet's.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Thieves looted Charles E. Clegg's smokehouse at Henryville and relieved him of about 600 pounds of meat. Bloodhounds tracked the thieves to Yankeetown, where they lost trail.

Seymour Swain, aged 40, a farmer living near Burney, was probably fatally injured last week. Swain was preparing to curry a horse when the animal kicked him in the face, breaking his nose, crushing his jaw and splitting his left eye open.

The largest catfish ever caught in the Wabash river at Montezuma was found in the ice recently by P. L. Reid while on a hunting trip. It weighed 125 pounds and measured eighteen inches across the body, 5½ feet long and fourteen incres across the head.

Perley Pearson, one of the largest land owners in the vicinity of Bloomingdale, has just celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary by sprinting a quarter of a mile in 2:19 flat. Mr. Pearson, who is unusually active for a man of his years, wore a pair of heavy rubbers when he made the run.

G. W. Durkiss, on Rural Route No. 2 east of Peru, owns a Duroc half Chester White sow that has farrowed twenty pigs. The same sow raised twenty-three pigs from the two preceding litters. At the present time there is a scarcity of hogs in Miami County and brood sows are selling at $45 to $70 each.

Reports from Borden, the center of the berry growing district, are that the early kinds of strawberries are considerably damaged by the exposure following the snow. Late varieties promise fairly well at present. Peach growers are inclined to take a gloomy view of the result of the bad weather of February.

John Schroeder, aged 56, chief electrician of the Fort Wayne fire department, was found dead seated in his chair at the desk in his office at fire department headquarters recently. He had just returned from breakfast when stricken. Schroeder was a veteran of the fire department, having served since 1875.

Harry Clark has been appointed claim agent for the Pennsylvania lines, with headquarters in Fort Wayne, succeeding H. T. Swegman, advanced to a similar position at Chicago a few days ago. Clark is captain of Battery B, Indiana National Guard, in that city and is well known in the younger military circles of the State.

The traditional lodge goat is no longer a myth with the Fort Wayne Lodge of Elks, which recently received a handsome specimen of the animal, mounted, as the gift of the social session committee. The presentation address was delivered by Harry F. Hilgemann. In the annual election of officers by the Lodge, Frank E. Bougher, after an interim of one year, was again elected Exalted Ruler.

S. F. Johnson, Panhandle trainmaster at Logansport, has announced that he will need sixty extra brakemen and firemen just as soon as spring opens. The new men will be needed on the construction trains used in double-tracking. The great increase in freight business also requires many extra men. Promotions from firemen to engineers and from brakeman to conductors are made almost daily.

The first well in what is thought to be a big oil district has been put to a depth of four hundred feet at Loogootee, eighteen miles east of Washington. At that depth a flow of oil was struck and the casing filled up sixty feet. Several barrels of oil were pumped out. It tests high in quality. The well is on the farm of John Larkin, merchant, who owns a thousand acres east of Loogootee adjacent to the land on which the well is being drilled.

A proposed railroad running southwest from Terre Haute is the Illinois Oil and Coal Belt, and it is eventually to have its southern terminus at Cairo, Ill. At present the promoters will be content to connect up the Crawford County oil field with Terre Haute. At a meeting of stockholders at Flora, Ill., General J. R. Campbell, of McLeansboro, Ill., was elected president and Joseph W. Crowley, formerly Congressman, of Robinson, vice president. It is a traction line, and the statement is made that construction will begin June 1.

While Harry Watts, the 10-year-old son of George Watts, of Knightstown, was playing with children of his age he was accidentally struck in the eye with the point of an umbrella rib. The sight of the eye was temporarily destroyed, but the lad now sees. Instead of one object, however, everything appears double to him. It is hoped that nature may soon correct the trouble. A short time ago Wallace Hackleman, a farmer living near Knightstown, had a similar derangement of the eye as the result of being kicked by a horse and his vision is still doubled.

The first croak of the spring frog has been heard at Oakland City. The robins, wrens and red birds have made their appearance in numbers.

James M. Cockrum, whose appointment as postmaster at Oakland City was confirmed recently, will take his office within a few days. He was at the time of his appointment engaged in farming, but was formerly marshal of that city. George M. Burbank served three terms and has made a satisfactory record.

Charles Huck, owner of a large goldfish farm at Waldron, was killed by lightning during a thunderstorm recently.

Edna, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Griffith, of Richmond, is dead as the result of burns received from her clothing catching fire.

Thomas Cottrell, one of the members of the old guard of the democracy died at his home on East Ohio street, Indianapolis, after a month's illness.

Mrs. Daniel Harvey, wife of the chief of the Newcastle fire department, took an overdose of medicine for neuralgia in her chest and died two hours later, despite efforts of physicians to save her life.

Joseph Karl Rudolf Egger, formerly assistant professor of German at Butler College, Indianapolis, has been adjudged insane. Nervous collapse, resulting from overwork, was given as the cause of his derangement.

The 4-year-old daughter of Louis Trapp, of Evansville, was struck by an automobile driven by Carl Laval and hurled fifty feet into the air and over a fence upon a lawn. While the little one was badly injured, it is believed she will recover.

James E. Jean, a Worthington contractor, went hunting on White river and it is believed he has been drowned. His submerged boat was found in some willows, his coat being found entangled in the branches. He was formerly city marshal of Worthington.

Bert Swan, who is giving a diving act at an Evansville theater this week, tried to swim the Ohio river there, which is over two miles wide, on a wager. When he got about one-third of the way across he was seized with cramps and would have drowned had not a boat which trailed him picked him up.

Residents of Elkhart own $35,000 worth of property at Klinger Lake, Mich., and a proposed Michigan law requiring non-residents to pay $3 a year for fishing privileges meets opposition in Elkhart. The Michigan Governor has been bombarded with telegrams from Elkhart and other northern Indiana points and a meeting of Elkhartans has been called to take definite action.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Fred L. Meyer, a farmer living near Monroe County, who is alleged to have purposely destroyed 130 rods of wire fence that separated his land form that of his neighbor, George McGiffen. The property line, recently surveyed on order of the court, was the subject of dispute and ill feeling, it is said, caused Meyer to destroy the fence.

If present plans mature, according to the announcement just made, Crawfordsville will have another interurban line. It will be a trunk line from Hammond. It is understood that the company pushing the project has headquarters in Chicago, and that Eugene Purtelle, of the firm of Eugene Purtelle & Co., brokers, is the president. The chief engineer of the company was in Crawfordsville recently looking over the local field.

In the many newspaper feature stories about old people in Terre Haute the oldest of all has been overlooked for a decade until last week, when she died at 101. When the certificate of death was sent in for Mrs. Bridget Conroy, born February 15, 1809, at County Carroll, Ireland, the health office people thought a mistake had been made and they investigated the matter. The decedent leaves one son, James Conroy, of Terre Haute.

Clerk Joyce, of Vigo County, has made a report hich shows that 257 divorce decrees were granted in the two Terre Haute courts in 1909, and of these sixty-eight were to wives on the ground of cruelty; twenty-six to husbands on the same ground. But the forty-seven wives who had abandoned husbands was four more than husbands from whom wives were granted decrees on the same ground. Eighty-nine foreigners filed their first papers to become citizens. Seventy-three persons were adjudged insane and 969 marriage licenses were issued. There were 217 criminal and 1,778 civil cases in the courts.

Carl, the 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Edwards, south of Connersville, lost his left hand because he did not know that dynamite caps were loaded. He took two caps from a box, which, together with several pounds of stick dynamite, were in an outhouse, and carried them into the sitting room where his mother and grandmother were sitting. Unobserved by them he picked the explosive compound out of one cap with a pin and was starting to do the same with the second when it exploded. His left hand was blown into fragments and a small piece of the brass shell struck the abdomen, making a serious wound.

The new city directory of Evansville just published shows Evansville has a population of 85,320, an increase of more than 5,000 in a year.

Mrs. George Williams, five miles south of Logansport, has a brood of twelve chicks, and two more hens are sitting. Because of the severity of the weather, sitting hens are scarce, and Mrs. Williams, with her little brood of twelve fluffy ruffles and two sitting hens, is regarded as a wonder by local poultry raisers.

Burdens Lifted From Bad Backs

Weary is the back that bears the burden of kidney ills. There's no rest nor peace for the man or woman who has a bad back. The distress begins in early morning. You feel lame and not refreshed. It's hard to get out of bed. It hurts to stoop to tie your shoes. All day the ache keeps up. Any sudden movement sends a sharp twinge through the back. It is torture to stoop or straighten. At night the sufferer retires to toss and twist and groan. Backache is kidney ache—a throbbing, dull aching in the kidneys. To cure backache you must first cure the kidneys. Plasters or liniments won't do. You must get at the cause, inside.

Doan's Kidney Pills Cure Sick Kidneys

Six Months of Misery

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought About a Complete Restoration.

CHARLES EASTER, E. Locust St., Watseka, Ill., says: "In the summer of 1904 I was attacked by pains in the small of my back and as the time passed, the trouble increased until my whole right hip was affected. For six months I could not sit in a chair and I was unable to sleep nights. I lost forty pounds in weight and was so lame and sore that I could not raise my hands to my face. I was languid, had no energy and was bothered by a shortness of breath. During all that time I doctored and used a great amount of medicine but to no avail. Sometimes there was an almost complete retention of the kidney secretions and there was much sediment in them. My wife finally persuaded me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They gave me such prompt relief that I continued taking them and gradually my condition improved. The trouble with my kidneys was corrected and my aches and pains were removed. I am so grateful for this cure that I cheerfully recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other persons suffering from kidney complaint."

HOW TO TELL WHEN THE KIDNEYS ARE DISORDERED

Painful Symptoms—Backache, sideache, pains when stooping or lifting, sudden sharp twinges, rheumatic pains, neuralgia, painful, scanty or too frequent urination, dizzy spells, dropsy.

Urinary Symptoms — Discolored or cloudy urine. Urine that contains sediment. Urine that stains the linen. Painful passages. Blood or shreds in the urine. Let a bottleful of the morning urine stand for 24 hours. If it shows a cloudy or fleecy settling, or a layer of fine grains, like brick-dust, the kidneys are disordered.

Twice-Told Testimony

A Wonderful Cure Fully Verified By the Test of Time.

MRS. J. M. BARNHART, 952 N. Jackson St., Frankfort, Ind., says: "Several years ago I was running into Bright's disease. My body bloated a great deal and I had such terrible pains in the small of my back that I could scarcely stand. I rested poorly and the kidney secretions contained a sediment, also being distressing in passage. I tried various preparations but steadily grew worse and when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a supply. The contents of the first box did me so much good that I continued taking the remedy until I was cured. I gave a public statement on July 19, 1906, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and now I can add that I have had no need of a kidney remedy in over a year."

Cupid Gets the Teachers.

In an effort to ascertain why so many of Seattle's 783 school teachers are resigning weekly the fact was developed that Cupid has claimed 181 from the number since September 1. The School Board is gloomy over the outlook and the public is clamoring for men teachers, because if they should get married during the school year they would remain at their posts. The women teachers marry and do not.

Cats as Human Food.

The Brussels correspondent of the New York Herald (Paris edition) notes that in Brussels cat is considered a delicious food in some classes. Workmen in breweries fatten cats and turn them into a stew.

Edward Topsel, who wrote learnedly about the cat—his "History of Four-footed Beasts," was published in 1607—was of the opinion that the flesh of cats can seldom be free from poison, "by reason of their daily food, eating rats and mice, wrens and other birds which feed on poison, and above all the brain of a cat is most poisonous, for it being above measure dry, stoppeth the animal spirits, that they cannot pass into the ventricle, by reason whereof memory faileth, and the infected person falleth into a Phrensie." But Topsel was prejudiced against the cat. The people of Savu, who lived the natural life when Capt. Cook visited them, preferred cats to sheep and goats. In Germany many a cat has been sold for hare, and jugged cat has been relished there by foreign sojourners. The handsome daughter of a landlady far up in the Canton Vaud told us as a matter of course that when the snow was deep and communication was cut off, they all ate cats.

How To Make Good Coffee.

First, last and all the time, have a clean coffee pot. Don't wash it with common yellow laundry soap or powder because that makes it smell bad and gives the coffee a sickening taste. Easy Task soap sterilizes coffee pots and all cooking utensils, making them clean, sweet and wholesomely healthy. That's the beauty about Easy Task soap—it is just as good for cooking vessels as for cloth or painted work or glassware or china. Not an expensive soap—five cents a cake.

FOR BETTER FARMERS.

Columbia University Adds Course in Agricultural Science.

Columbia University has added agriculture to its curriculum. This action is responsive to the wave of interest in farming that sweeps the country and to the perceptible demand for practical education which will fit people to return to the land where they may escape the oppressive cost of living that has become keenly felt in all the cities.

Within a radius of 150 miles of New York City are thousands of acres, the faculty learns, that are not contributing to the city as they should do. Delaware County milk, Orange County butter, Ulster County berries, Dutchess County apples and eggs and Long Island vegetables, together with the produce of other large sections in Connecticut and New Jersey could be increased manifold in quantity and with vast improvement in quality. Restoration of such land would lessen cost to consumers and yield good profit to producers.

The university promoters think that in this nearby territory there is opportunity rarely presented for practical training in farm work. With the development of rapid transportation facilities, with good roads and the auto truck, the choicest products of the farm may be delivered to city consumers promptly and in good condition.

It would be useless, according to this view, to encourage young men to go back to the land to practice methods which devastated the soil and impoverished those who once owned it. They must have the best equipment and scientific knowledge along with efficient training for the work.

While the lectures now arranged will deal with the scientific aspects of farming, they will be divested as much as possible of technicalities. Instruction will be simple in its character, and it will be addressed not only to those who are directly engaged in farming, but as well to all who may be interested in the agricultural conditions and problems of the country.

A Substitute for Meat.

The thrifty housewife will find in porridge an excellent substitute for meat. A cup of wheat kernels should be soaked in hot water for 12 hours, then passed through a meat chopper or grinder and boiled slowly for an hour or more. Then serve with sugar and cream or a fruit preserve. It is more nourishing than meat. A cupful of wheat grains will make a hearty meal for three persons and as the cost of a quart of wheat is only two cents this amount will feed a family of seven or eight for breakfast.

Why Take Alcohol?

Are you thin, pale, easily tired, lack your usual vigor and strength? Then your digestion must be poor, your blood thin, your nerves weak. You need a tonic and alterative. You need Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. We believe your doctor would endorse these statements, or we would not make them. Ask him and find out. Follow his advice. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The endorsement of your doctor will certainly greatly increase your confidence in Ayer's Pills as a family laxative. Liver pills. All vegetable. Ask your doctor about them.

NO SOAP.

By W. H. McIntosh, Auburn, Ind.

You can never know the value of soap unless you for some reason fail to get a supply. Then you will find out, as was on one occasion, my experience. We had crossed the Yadkin at Sneedsboro, North Carolina, and our route lay through pitch pine forests that supply much of the turpentine and rosin of commerce.

The scored trunks of the trees were filled with hardened exuded pitch which was ignited in pure mischief by thoughtless soldiers and the woods were constantly filled by immense clouds of black smoke.

This diluted lamp-black persistently deepened upon exposed hands and faces until we were a sight to be seen and sure-enough colored troops. Requisitions for soap became general and insistent from every company and every squad, but not one bar could be had. The wagons had been loaded with food and ammunition but the essential item of soap had been omitted or forgotten and water alone had no affinity for lamp black.

In vain was every effort to remove the tenacious black soot which condensed upon and darkened the features. Vigorous rubbing and energetic drying with extemporized towels were futile, and in despair, we could only endure and bide our time.

To this smoke infliction, however, there was one common consolation that rank gave no exemption no color line and each had the same swarthy hue as his comrade.

Personally sensitive to this disagreeable darkening of features, I requested permission of our captain to leave the ranks in search of soap at some farm house by the way. He regarded me attentatively for a moment and then laughing replied:- "McIntosh, you do need soap, strike out and get some for the rest of us too". Shortly after this, a house came into view some distance forward on a raise of ground and a little back from the road and quitting my file. I hastened to achieve my purpose and be ready to fall in when the company came up.

Others broke from the ranks and headed for the same goal but with a different object. They were after something to eat and first arrivals had the best chance of success.

I reached the dwelling and without ceremony, entered and found myself in the presence of the family which consisted of a man, beyond middle age, and above the ordinary in appearance, a woman yet comely despite her years, and two grown, good-looking girls. All were seated at one side of the single room upon common wood-bottomed chairs and silently regarding the looting of their flour chest, the ransacking of furniture in search of plunder and a general pillage, with apathetic unconcern. None of those men paid any attention to the family and it was obvious that robbery would cease only when there was nothing left in the house to tempt their cupidity.

There was nothing to distinguish me from them and no reason to suppose I had any other reason than they for my presence yet as I stood for the moment undecided, looking toward the man, he directed me by a glance to a vacant chair which I took and then addressing the woman I said:- I have called to see if you could sell me some soap as you can see how much I need it and this necessity is the sole cause of my presence."

The situation was embarrassing but suddenly and pleasantly relieved when the girls who had been observing me closely looked quickly at each other and then at me and broke out in a merry hearty laugh.

The soldiers were surprised and one who had been busily scooping flour with his tin cup from the chest into his haversack, joined in the hilarity at my expense.

I must have been well blackened by the greasy smoke to receive such an impromptu ration and the fun was all on their side yet perhaps it was well for me that I could not see myself just then "as others see us."

There was compensation in the disappearance of constraint and intercourse was placed on a friendly footing, "I am sorry" said the woman and her voice had the tone of sincerity, "that we have no soap for we would have been pleased to accommodate you" and so I learned that my quest in this quarter had proved a failure. As the regiment was still some distance back, I was satisfied to prolong my stay, enjoy a rest and engage the man in conversation. It was in variance with reason that these people should so cheerfully accept their misfortune and show nothing of animosity but much of friendship despite the lawless looting still proceeding in their presence. Down upon the road through the open door was seen the blue clad steadily marching. The man had been observing them obliv tous of all else and thoughtful, and now he turned to me and said: "I foresaw much of what has come to pass and it had to be. We have always been for the Union but any disclosure of loyal sentiment would have imperiled life and confiscated property.

During this war, thousands of men have been conscripted from North Carolina, who, loved the old flag against which they have battled bravely. Many have fallen for a cause to whose support they were forced to despotic authority and frenzid excitement."

He stopped to regard the pillagers, who had made thorough work and a scene of disorder and then continued: "I do not complain of there marauders, your army is living on the country through which it is passing, as a war measure. The less it is delayed, the better for us all and we are not discouraged. Slavery is dead and the Confederacy is doomed. I believe better days are coming."

To these expressions I gave unqualified assent and rising silently extended my hand which he grasped cordially. With farewell to the family, I withdrew inspirited for, although I had failed in quest of soap, I had found what was infinitely more valuable—loyal sentiment in a North Carolina home in the face of spoliation at the hands of ruthless Union soldiers.

Saved a Soldier's Life.

Facing death from shot and shel in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Stone, of Kemp, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cold" he writes, "that developed a cough, that stuck to me in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." For Coughs, Colds, LaGrippe, Asthma, Hemorrhage, Hoarseness, Croup, Whooping Cough and lung trouble, it's supreme. 50c. $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by H. L. Dunkle

WOVEN WIRE FENCE.

There is so many makes of fence on the market, some good, some very poor. I have handled a number of different makes and am convinced that the AMERICAN FENCE is the best value for the mopey of any fence on the market. The strength of fence depends on the weight of the wire in the fence. Now compare the weight of a ROD of AMERICAN FENCE with the weight of a rod of any other fence then compare the price. Do not take the dealers word as to how much it weighs but put it on the scales and weigh it. I can sell you

Can you buy any other fence so cheap?

I have eight different styles on hand now. The American Steel and Wire Company make nearly all the wire that is woven in the different makes of fence and it is folly for an agent of any other make of fence to claim a superior quality of wire or of galvanizing. Every manufacturer of fence has an idea as to what temper the wire should be for a fence and orders his wire tempered accordingly, in other words he experimenting at the Farmers expense. The American Steel and Wire Company have passed the experimental stage and are producing a composition of Steel for Fence that is perfectly adapted for it. Every farmer that has had any experience with wire knows that wire exposed to the weather becomes hard and brittle, this feature has been largely eliminated in the special wire used in AMERICAN FENCE. While the wire is stiff and springy it is flexible enough to be easily spliced and will remain so. We will explain other good features if you will call and see us.

SUNSHINE NOT GOOD FOR ALL.

Blonde Races Fail to Thrive in Climate Like American Northwest.

Charles E. Woodruff, of Manila, P. I., discusses in the Medical Record the physical degeneration what is found to occur in north European races when they settle in the dry, bright atmosphere of the American northwest. Although the first generation does well, the second one is feeble, easily attacked by tuberculosis and other chronic diseases and the families die out in a few generations. The brunette races do well in bright sunshine, because they are accustomed to it, while the blondes are made nervous by it. But it is the northern blonde races that give us the strong brains that we need to perpetuate our nation, and these do not come from the brunette races of the south. It is important for us to preserve these blonde types, and to that end it is necessary that physicians should advise them to keep from the influences that injure them. The best Aryan blood is being wasted from our nation at present. Scandinavian colonization is impossible in the tropics. The average brain weight and intelligence increase as we go north in Europe, and this brain weight does count. We should favor the emigration of these northern races and preserve them as far as possible. Western and southern Alaska furnish a climate that is congenial to them. As a health resort for neurasthenics it is also of value, the cool, damp air being helpful and quieting to the nervous system.

CHANGE THE VIBRATION.

It Makes for Health.

A man tried leaving off meat, potatoes, coffee, and etc., and adopted a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts with cream, some crisp toast and a cup of Postum.

His health began to improve at once for the reason that a meat eater will reach a place once in a while where his system seems to become clogged and the machinery doesn't work smoothly.

A change of this kind puts aside food of low nutritive value and takes up food and drink of the highest value, already partly digested and capable of being quickly changed into good, rich blood and strong tissue.

A most valuable feature of Grape-Nuts is the natural phosphate of potash grown in the grains from which it is made. This is the element which transforms albumen in the body into the soft gray substance which fills brain and nerve centres.

A few days' use of Grape-Nuts will give one a degree of nervous strength well worth the trial.

CHAPTER XIII.—(Continued.)

I saw his drift, and though I knew his courage well, the boldness of the thing staggered me. He, too, had penetrated to the inner lines of the British camp at Charlotte; and when they had sought an Indian tracker to lift my trail, 'twas he who had volunteered. But now my spirits rose. With this unexpected ally we might hope to deal forcefully and yet fairly with my rear-guard.

"Where are your masters now?" I asked.

"Catawba chief has no master," he said, proudly. "Redcoat pale-faces yonder," pointing back the way I had come. "Make fire, boil tea, sing song, heap smoke pipe."

"We must take them," said I.

He nodded. "Kill 'up all; take scalp. Wah!"

The bloodthirstiness of my two allies was appalling. But I undertook to cool the Indian's ardor, explaining that the redcoat soldiers were the Long-knife's brothers, in a way, not to be slain save in honorable battle. I am not sure whether I earned the Catawba's contempt, or his pity for my weakness; but since he was loyal to the son of his old benefactor first, and a savage afterward, he yielded the point.

Lacking the Catawba to guide us, I doubt if either the old man or I could have found my rear-guard's bivouac near the trail I had left. But Uncaloola led us straight through the pitchy darkness; and when we were come upon the three soldiers we found them all asleep around the handful of campfire. The Catawba had armed himself with a stout warclub, and before I was free to stop him he had knocked two of the three sleepers senseless. As for the officer, I had flung myself upon him in the rush and I presently had the better of him.

"Enough, man! 'tis as good as a feast!" he cried, when I had him fast pinioned; and thereupon I let him have breath and freedom to sit up. In the act he had his first good sight of me, as I had mine of him. 'Twas Tybee and no other.

"You're a cool hand, Captain Ireton!" he said. "Whatever you were in that coil at Appleby, you've led the spy's long suit this time. And I'm not sure whether I like you any the worse for it, if so be you must be a rebel." And with that, he gave me the sealed packet and asked what I would do with him.

His query set me thinking. As for the two stunned troopers, I meant to turn them over to the old man for safe keeping; but I was loath to make it harder than need be for this good-natured youngster. So I put him upon his honor.

"Do you know what this packet contains?" I asked.

He laughed. "My lord did not honor me with his confidence. I was to follow you into Major Ferguson's camp, deliver the despatches, and vanish."

"Good; then you need tell no lies. When the Indian has fetched my horse, I shall ride to Ferguson's camp, and you may ride with me. I shall ask no more than this; that you do not fight again till you are exchanged; and that you will not tell Major Ferguson whose prisoner you are. Do you accept the terms?"

"I'd be a fool not to. But what's in the wind, Captain? Surely you can tell me, now that I am safely out of the running."

"You will know in a day or two; and in the meantime ignorance is your best safety. You can tell Major Ferguson that you were waylaid on the road by a party of the enemy, and that you were paroled and fell in with me."

He looked a little rueful, as a good soldier would, but was disposed to make the best of a bad bargain.

"Here's my hand on it," he said; and a little later we had dragged the two troopers to the cabin, where the old man became surety for their safe keeping, and were feeling our way cautiously westward at the heels of the Cathawba who had taken his directions from our patriarch, and soon we could see the camp-fires of Ferguson's little army twinkling between the tree trunks.

Major Ferguson's tent was on a hillock some distance back from the stream, and thither we were conducted; we, I say, meaning Tybee and myself, for Uncaloola had disappeared like a whiff of smoke at our challenging on the sentry line.

Late as it was, the major was up and hard at work. His tent table, transformed for the time into a mechanic's work-bench, was littered with gun-barrels and tools and screws and odd-shaped pieces of mechanism—the disjointed parts of that breech-loading musket of which the ingenious Scotchman was the inventor. Being deep in the creative trance when we came upon him, the major gave us but an absent-minded greeting, listening with the outward ear only when Tybee reported his mission, and his capture and parole. I drew a sealed inclosure from my pocket and laid it on the work-bench table.

"I also have the honor to come from my Lord Cornwallis, bringing despatches"—so far I got in my cut-and-dried speech, and then my tongue clave to the roof of my mouth and I could no more finish the sentence than could a man suddenly nipped in a vise. Instead of the carefully doctored original, I had given the major the duplicate despatch taken from Tybee.

Ah, my dears, that was a moment for swift thought and still swifter action; and 'tis the Ireton genius to be slow and sure. In that clock-tick of benumbing despair when the success of the hazardous venture, and much more that I wist not of, hung suspended by a hair over the abyss of failure, I minded me of a boyish trick wherewith I used to fright the timid blacks in the old days at Appleby Hundred. So whilst the major was reaching for the packet—nay, when he had it in his hand—I started back with a warning cry, giving that imitation of the ominous skirlr-r of a rattlesnake which had more than once got me a cuffing from my father.

In any crisis less tremendous I should have roared a-laughing to see the doughty major and my good friend the lieutenant vie with each other in their skippings to escape the unseen enemy. But it was no laughing moment for me. At a flash my sword was out and I was hacking hither and yon at the imaginary foe. In the hurby-burly I contrived to sprawl all across the work-bench table, and the packet which would have killed my plot—and, belike, the plotter as well—was secured and quickly juggled into hiding.

"See now what you've done; you've spilt my breech-charger all about the place!" rasped the major, when all was over. And then: "Who are ye, anyway; and what do ye want wi' me?"

I clicked my heels, saluted, and gave him the express from my Lord—the right one, this time. He clapped his leg joyfully, like the brave gentleman that he was, when he came to the postscriptum.

"Ye're a fine fellow, Captain; ye've brought me good news," he said; then he bade an aide call Captain de Peyster, his second in command, and in the same breath gave Tybee and me in charge to an ensign for our billeting for the night.

You will conceive that I was overjoyed at this seemingly safe and easy planting of the petard which was to blowp my Lord Cornwallis' plans into the air; and in anticipation I saw the tide-turning battle and heard the huzzas of the mountaineer victors. But 'tis a good old saw that cautions against hallooing before you are out of the wood. Captain de Peyster was come, and Tybee and I were taking our leave of the major, when there was a sudden commotion among the guards without, and a little man man in black, his wig awry and his clothing torn by the rough man-handling of the sentries, burst into the tent.

"Seize him! seize him! he is a rebel spy!" he shrieked, pointing at me.

As you would guess, all talked paused at this dramatic interruption, and all eyes were turned upon me.

"'Tis the little madman of Queensborough," I said, coolly, explaining to the bluff major. "His mania takes the form of a curious hatred for me, though I know not why. Two days since, he was put in arrest by my Lord's authority for threatening my life and that of his master's daughter. Now, it would seem, he has broken jail and followed me hither."

"A lunatic, eh? He looks it, every inch," said the major; and the blackguard lawyer, hearing my counter accusation, was doing his best to give it a savor of likelihood by fighting frantically with the two soldiers who had followed him into the tent.

"Out wi' him!" commanded the major. "We've no time to foolish away wi' a Bedlamite. Take him away and peg him out, and gi' him a dash o' water to cool his head."

Pengarvin fought like a fury, and his venomous rage defeated all his attempts to say calmly the words which might have got him a hearing. So he was haled away, struggling like a trapped wildcat; and when we were rid of him the major bade us good-night again.

Tybee held his peace like a good fellow till we had rolled us in our blankets before one of the camp-fires. But just as I was dropping asleep he broke out with, "I would you might tell me what piece of rebel villainy this is that I've been a-winking accomplice to."

I laughed. "'Tis a thing to make Major Ferguson rejoice, as you saw. And supely, it can be no great villainy to give a man what he's thirsting for. Bide your time, Lieutenant, and you shall see the outcome."

CHAPTER XIV.

The camp was astir early the next morning, and it soon became noised about that we were to fall back, but only so far as might be needful to find a strong position. From this is was evident that a battle was imminent, though as yet there were no signs of the approach of the patriots.

As you would suppose, my situation was now become most trying, and poor Tybee's was scarcely less so. Knowing my name and circumstance, and having, moreover, a high regard for my old field-marshal's genius, Major Ferguson was very willing to make use of my experience. These askings from one whom I knew for a brave and honorable gentleman let me fall between two stools. As a patriot spy, it was my duty [illegible] the major's confidence as a weapon against him. But as an officer and a gentleman I could by no means descend to such depths of perfidy.

In this dilemma I sought to steer a middle course, saying that I must beg exemption because my long hard ride had re-opened my old sword wound—as indeed it had. So the major generously let me be, thus heaping coals of fire upon my head; and I kept out of his way, consorting with Tybee, who, like myself, must be an onlooker in the coming fray.

As for the lieutenant, he was all agog to learn more than I dared to tell him, and it irked him most nettlesomely to have a fight in prospect in the while he was in honor bound not to take a hand. Time and again he begged me to release him from his parole; and when I would not, he was for fighting me a duel with his freedom for a stake.

"Consider of it, Captain Ireton," he pleaded. "Put yourself in my place. Here am I, in the camp of my friends, gagged and bound by my word to you whilst your plot, whatever it may be, works out. It would have been far more merciful had you run me through in our wrestling match last night!"

"Mayhap," said I, curtly. "'Twas but the choice between two evils. Nevertheless, in time to come I hope you may conclude that this is the lesser of the two."

The rain continued all that Friday night, and well on into the forenoon of the Saturday. During this interval we waited with scouts out for the upcoming of the mountain men. At noon Major Ferguson sent a final express to Lord Cornwallis, urging the hurrying on the reinforcements, not knowing that his former despatch had been intercepted, nor that Tarleton had not as yet started to the rescue. A little later the scouts began to come in one by one with news of the approaching riflemen.

There was but a small body of them, above a thousand men in all, so the spies said, and my heart misgave me. They were without cannon and they lacked bayonets; and moreover, when all was said, they were but militia, all untried save in border warfare with the Indians. Could they successfully assault the fortified camp whose defenders had fitted butcher-knives to the muzzles of their guns in lieu of bayonets? Nay, rather would they have the courage to try?

'Twas late in the afternoon before these questions were answered. The rain had ceased, and the chill October sunlight filtered aslant through the trees. At the last moment Major Ferguson sent Captain de Peyster to me with the request that I take command of the Tory force set apart to defend the wagon brigade—this if my weariness would permit. I went with the captain to make my excuses in person.

"Say no more, Captain," said this generous soldier, when I began some lame plea for further exemption; "I had forgot your sword-cut. Take shelter for yourself, and look on whilst we skin this riffraff alive."

(To be continued.)

THE HOUSEHOLD

Creamed Crab Meat.

Cut the crab meat into dice. To a pint of the meat allow two tablespoonfuls of butter. Melt this in the saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until smooth, then stir in a pint of milk, half cream, if you have it, season well with salt, paprika and pinch of nutmeg and stir to a smooth sauce. Now turn in the crab meat and a green pepper minced. Cook, stirring all the time, until very hot, then turn into a hot dish. Garnish with rings made of green peppers sliced crosswise.

White Cake Filling.

Heat two-thirds of a cupful of milk in a granite saucepan, add a piece of butter the size of an egg and two cupfuls of sugar. Stir constantly. Let the mixture come to a boil and add two squares of chocolate and a pinch of salt and cook until the mixture forms a soft ball, when tried in cold water. Remove from the stove, allow to cool for a few minutes, and add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Stir until it begins to thicken, then spread on the cake layers or loaf.

Salt Codfish, Boiled.

Soak over night before using; changing water at least once. Place it on the back of the stove, never allow it to boil—just simmer, until soft enough to pick apart very fine with a fork. For codfish cakes, have the potatoes nicely mashed, with milk and a little butter, proportion of one cupful of fish to three of potatoes, a little pepper, red or black. Dip in egg or not, as you prefer, before frying brown. To be made in cakes of a thickness to please.

Lamb Stew.

Take the neck or breast of lamb, parboil and cut in pieces, then put on in cold water, enough to cover it, adding a large onion, cut fine, a large slice of bacon cut fine, black and red pepper and salt. After cooking until all bones can be extracted, add canned tomatoes and corn and half a pound of butter. Before serving add stale bread crumbs. Serve in a tureen.

Ginger Drops.

One-half cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one cup molasses, one cup boiling water, with two teaspoons soda dissolved in it, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, ginger and cloves; two and one-half cups of flour, two eggs beaten well and added last thing. Don't add more flour because they may look thin. They are very dainty with but the amount mentioned. Bake in gem tins.

Orange Marmalade Icing.

One cup of granulated sugar, one-quarter cup orange marmalade. Moisten this with boiling water until it is a thin paste, cook until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Remove from fire and beat as you would fudge, until creamy. Spread on with warm knife.

Squash Fritters.

To two cups of mashed, dry winter squash add one cup of milk, two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoon of salt, a little pepper, and one heaping teaspoon of baking powder. Beat well, and drop by spoonfuls into hot butter or cooking oil, and fry.

Baked Codfish.

Soak fish a dozen hours, gently simmer until nearly done; remove bones and bruise fine; mixed mashed potatoes, two parts potato to one of fish. Place before fire or in oven until rich brown. Serve with egg sauce.

Creamed Pineapple.

Whip one-half pint of cream; drain one can of shredded pineapple and stir the pulp into the cream. Chill and serve in sherbet cups.

Hints for the Housewife.

Mix starch with soapy water and the linen will have a good gloss and be easy to iron.

Graham bread and brown bread are both excellent for sandwich purposes and raisin bread, "with lots of raisins in it," is a welcome change.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cupful of tepid water will remove all stains from nails and skin and loosen the cuticle better than a sharp instrument.

Round jelly cake pans make excellent pot covers by turning upside down and placing in center a small wooden knob, obtainable of any grocer. Two can be bought for 5 cents.

New linen for working upon should be rubbed over with a dry cake of soap. This will render the fabric soft, so that drawing threads of embroidery upon it will be much facilitated.

The objectionable sputtering and flying of the hot fat when eggs, hominy, apples and like things are dropped into it to fry may be prevented if a little flour is sifted into fat just before they are added.

For those who find maple sirup beyond their means try this: Five cups of light brown sugar, three to four cups of granulated sugar, and about one-quarter to one-half pound of maple sugar; add water and boil to consistency of sirup.

While it is advisable to pack a water bag flat, occasionally there is necessity for rolling it. If so, it is well to lay a piece of cloth or paper over the bag first, then there will be no possible danger of the sides of the bag sticking together.

For Pain in Chest

For sore throat, sharp pain in lungs, tightness across the chest, hoarseness or cough, lave the parts with Sloan's Liniment. You don't need to rub, just lay it on lightly. It penetrates instantly to the seat of the trouble, relieves congestion and stops the pain.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. A. W. Price, Fredonia, Kans., says: "We have used Sloan's Liniment for a year, and find it an excellent thing for sore throat, chest pains, colds, and hay fever attacks. A few drops taken on sugar stops coughing and sneezing instantly."

Sloan's Liniment

is easier to use than porous plasters, acts quicker and does not clog up the pores of the skin. It is an excellent antiseptic remedy for asthma, bronchitis, and all inflammatory diseases of the throat and chest; will break up the deadly membrane in an attack of croup, and will kill any kind of neuralgia or rheumatic pains.

All druggists keep Sloan's Liniment. Prices 25c., 50c., & $1.00.

Too Much for His Faith.

"The late Bishop Hare," said a Sioux Falls physician, "used, very reasonably, to impute skepticism to misunderstanding. He once told me about a Philadelphia business man of skeptical tendencies who said to him:

"'My dear Mr. Hare, I do not refuse to believe in the story of the ark. I can accept the ark's enormous size, its odd shape, and the vast number of animals it contained. But when I am asked, my dear doctor, to believe that the Children of Israel carried this unwieldy thing for 40 years in the wilderness—well, there, I'm bound to say, my faith breaks down.'"

The Week in Congress

The Senate Wednesday passed bills authorizing the issuance of $30,000,000 worth of certificates of indebtedness for the completion of irrigation projects already begun and providing for the purchase of $10,000,000 worth of real estate in Washington for the future uses of the government. Senators Heyburn, Bradley and Sutherland spoke on the postal savings bank bill, the two last named favoring the passage of that measure, while Senator Heyburn proposed a substitute for the pending bill. The House voted down a proposition to provide residences in foreign capitals for diplomatic officials. Various bills upon the calendar were considered.

The postal savings bank bill was under consideration in the Senate Thursday during the entire session. At 5:30 o'clock the Senate took a recess until 11:30 Friday, so as to continue the legislative day in accordance with the agreement to vote before adjournment. Consideration of the bill will be continued. Nearly the entire five hours during which the House was in session was occupied by consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill.

The entire session of the Senate Friday was devoted to a further consideration of the postal savings bank bill. Unable to reach a vote on that measure and in order to comply with a previous agreement to dispose of it before adjournment, the Senate at 5 o'clock took a recess until Saturday. The House had the postoffice appropriation bill before it nearly all day.

By a party vote, with the exception that Senator Chamberlain voted with the Republicans in favor of the measure, the Senate Saturday passed the administration postal savings bank bill. Amendments were adopted which provide that in time of war or other exigencies involving the credit of the nation, funds in the postal savings banks may be invested in government other than 2 per cent bonds, and also that depositors may withdraw their money from these banks upon demand. The Senate adjourned until Monday. The House devoted nearly the entire day in considering the postoffice appropriation bill. Slow progress was made upon the measure, many amendments being considered, although none involving any material change was adopted.

The agricultural appropriation bill was under discussion in the Senate during the entire session Monday, during which the forest service came in for some sharp criticism from Senator Heyburn. After passing a number of local bills the House devoted the remainder of the session to considering the postoffice appraipriation bill. Just before adjournment Representative Weeks of Massachusetts, in charge of the measure, announced that an amendment by Representative Finley of South Carolina, increasing the appropriation for rural delivery by an additional $500,000 for that purpose, would be accepted by the postoffice committee.

The Senate Tuesday disposed of the agricultural bill, with total appropriations of $13,500,000, and adjourned. The House passed the postoffice appropriation bill, aggregating $241,000,000, and took an adjournment.

He Knew.

Samuel Untermeyer was being congratulated at the Manhattan Club on his recent successful conduct of a murder case. The distinguished corporation lawyer modestly evaded all these compliments by the narration of a number of anecdotes of criminal law.

"One case, in my native Lynchburg," he said, "implicated a planter of sinister repute. The planter's chief witness was a servant named Calhoun White. The prosecution believed that Calhoun White knew much about his master's shady side. It also believed that Calhoun, in his misplaced affection, would lie in the planter's behalf. When on the stand Calhoun was ready for cross-examination, the prosecuting counsel said to him, sternly:

"Now, Calhoun, I want you to understand the importance of telling the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth in this case.

"'Yas, sah,' said Calhoun.

"You know what will happen, I suppose, if you don't tell the truth?"

"'Yas, sah,' said Calhoun, promptly. 'Our side'll win de case.'"

When the land officials threw open the doors of the Shrine auditorium at Los Angeles, Cal., they received a throng of more than 900 men and women eager to enter their names for the 173 forty-acre farms in the Yuma irrigation district.

WORTH KNOWING

Simple but Powerful Prescription for Rheumatism and Lame Backs.

This was previously published here and cured hundreds, "Get one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce Toris Compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. Take a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle each time." Good effects are felt the first day. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or will quickly get them from his wholesale house.

Another Joshua.

It is always a temptation to air one's special knowledge. A county judge down in a Southern State, who was proud of his familiarity with Scripture, was weak enough to yield occasionally to this temptation. The story of one such occasion is told in the National Magazine.

One day an old negro was brought in from the mountain district under suspicion of maintaining an illicit still. There was no real evidence against him.

"What's your name, prisoner?" asked the judge, as he peered at the shambling black man.

"Mah name's Joshua, jedge," was the reply.

"Joshua, eh?" said the judge, as he rubbed his hands. "Joshua, you say? Are you that same Joshua spoken of in Holy Writ—the Joshua who made the sun stand still?"

"No, jedge," was the hasty answer, "'twan't me. 'Ah'm de Joshua dat made de moon shine."

How a Doctor Cured Scalp Disease.

"When I was ten or twelve years old I had a scalp disease, something like scald head, though it wasn't that. I suffered for several months, and most of my hair came out. Finally they had a doctor to see me and he recommended the Cuticura Remedies. They cured me in a few weeks. I have used the Cuticura Remedies, also, for a breaking out on my hands and was benefited a great deal. I haven't had any more trouble with the scalp disease. Miss Jessie F. Buchanan, R. F. D. 3, Hamilton, Ga., Jan. 7, 1909."

A Pepper Duel.

A certain literary and diplomatic friend of ours once took part in a pepper duel at a foreign restaurant. He was provoked to the contention by the quantity of stimulating condiment that a stranger across the table indulged in. The stranger sprinkled an unconscionable quantity of red pepper upon his food and proceeded to devour it, to the wonder and admiration of onlookers. Thereupon, with studied nonchalance, the American swallowed an immense piece of chili pepper. Then the stranger added more red pepper, then the American another larger slice, covered with cayenne, and so on, till it seemed as if both would explode, while the other diners looked on aghast, the American finally winning out with a prodigious dose defying all emulation.—Century.

Do You Dread Mondays?

Most women do, when Monday means to them a hot, steaming, smelly house because it is washday. If they would use Easy Task laundry soap they would find that the clothing and linen were cleaner and sweeter when finished, and that the work is done in half the time, with no fretting and fussing and bad temper. Easy Task soap takes the dirt out and doesn't drive it in. It's a white, pure soap; not a dingy yellow soap that smells bad in the cake and worse in the tub.

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me.

Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 14 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others." — Mrs. S. J. Barber, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. George May, 86 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for a fibroid tumor. I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. E. F. Hayes, 1890 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to all suffering women." —Mrs. W. K. Housh, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Has Anybody Found Him?

"You wish to advertise for a lost dog, madam?"

"Yes, sir."

"What's the description?"

"Well, he's just an ordinary dog, you know, kind of brown color."

"That isn't definite enough."

"And his name is Prince."

"That won't help to find him."

"I should think it would. He's the only dog I know of with that name.'

"But, madam, hasn't he some distinguishing peculiarity or mark about him?"

Kept with Barnum's Circus.

P. T. Barnum, the famous circus man, once wrote: "I have had the Cuticura Remedies among the contents of my medicine chest with my shows for the last three seasons, and I can cheerfully certify that they were very effective in every case which called for their use."

Very Rude.

"Going to call on your new neighbors next door?"

"Not I. They insulted me the day they moved in."

"As to how?"

"Asked me to occupy a sofa on the sidewalk; said they feared I couldn't get a good view from behind the blinds."—Pittsburg Post.

Suppressions of History.

Amphion had just built the city of Thebes by the magical twanging of his harp.

"How do you expect to make posterity believe it?" asked the spectators.

"I leave all that," he said, "to the city archivist."

When it was too late he realized that he had made a fatal mistake by not having a phonograph and a motion picture machine on the ground.

Constipation causes and seriously aggravates many diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pellets. Tiny sugar-coated granules.

A Big Contract.

"You seem glad your wife has joined the Suffragette Club."

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "It's a relief to find Henrietta with a regular audience of her own. I've got a sore throat trying to furnish laughter and cheers every evening."—Washington Star.

The Prose Translation.

The difficulty of forcing the door of the understanding is amusingly illustrated in a story related by Mrs. Roger A. Pryor in her recent book, "My Day: Reminiscences of a Long Life." Mrs. Pryor's daughter, Mrs. Rice, once attempted to introduce William Cullen Bryant to a class of poor white boys she was teaching at a night-school in her home on a plantation in Virginia.

She had taught them to read and write, had given them some arithmetic and geography, even some Latin, and was then minded to awaken the esthetic instincts which she believed must exist in the poor fellows. She read the beautiful poem "To a Water-Fowl."

"Now, boys," she eagerly said, "tell me how you would feel if you had seen this?"

There was dead silence. Appealing to the most hopeful of her pupils, she received an enlightening response:

"I wouldn't think nuthin'."

"What would you say?" she persisted.

"Wal, I reckon I'd say, 'Thar goes a duck!'"

A good story bears repeating. Use Russ Bleaching Blue. Good grocers sell it. Refuse imitations.

Distinctly Bad Form.

"Bryonia," impetuously began the young man, "I have come to say something to you this evening, and I am going to say it! You shall not put me off any longer. It is no joke to trifle with the feelings of an earnest man who knows what he wants. Every time I try to be serious you change the subject. It isn't fair to me, Bryonia, and I am not going to stand it any more. You'll have to listen to me this time. I am determined——"

"Orlando," she interrupted, smothering a yawn, "you are doing too much thundering in your index."—Chicago Tribune.

Dust a Thousand Feet Thick.

China has its "bad lands," all dust and dreariness, and its irrigation wheels, and its "soul appalling" Gobi desert, along whose southern boundary lies the Great wall. In some of these regions the famous yellow dust of China lies to a depth of 1,000 feet, and when the wind blows the whole landscape is obscured. Yet it is upon this dust that the fertility of northern China depends. The Chinese call it "ginger powder."—Harper's.

WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute nor the unalcoholic medicine or known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

The six weeks of winter weather brought about by the groundhog seeing his shadow six weeks ago has ended. The groundhog is now expected to sally forth for the remainder of the season. The weather brought by the groundhog was, for about one-half of the six weeks, of a most decidedly wintry character. During the past week, however, the groundhog proved a poor prophet. The first real day of spring occurred on March 21, according to the almanac.

Prof. J. E. Sturgis sends us the Covina California Argus, of March 12, which speaks of him as follows:—"Mr. J. E. Sturgis, the special soloist, arrived Wednesday instead of last Friday, he having been detained by the washout on the Union Pacific line. Mr. Sturgis at once caught the large crowd with his marvelous voice and graceful manner. His concert work has fitted him for almost every style of music, and his violin, used at all times in the services, is an instrument of peculiar sweetness." Mr. Sturgis says that Covina is located among the orange groves and is third shipping-point in the state. Fruit goes to all parts of the globe from here. He further stated that an orange grove is worth from $1,500 to $3,000 per acre and they yield on an average of about $900 per year.

Wm. Curie, our hustling stock buyer shipped a mixed load of stock, Saturday, and among the bunch was a bull that he purchased in Jackson township and when he entered the Monday market at Pittsburg he brought the highest price of anything sold during the day, 7 cents per pound. Several of our stock men thought the bull would not reach the highest market but Mr. Curie just about knows when he buys anything. What is the matter with Indiana raising good stock. When you say the best on the market means something, as stock is coming in from all over to this market.

In another column of this issue will be found the political announcement of Miles Baxter for County Auditor. While the writer is not as well acquainted with the gentleman as some of the readers of THE NEWS, yet we feel as though we might say a good word for him. He is a man of about 46 years of age and was born and raised in DeKalb County and has always been of the democratic faith. He, at an early age enjoyed the farm privileges after which he became a school teacher. From 1901 to 1905 he acted in the capacity of trustee of Union township and of a later date he has been assisting some of the officers at the court house. He is now running an insurance, real estate, loan and abstracting office in Auburn. During the last four years he was serving as the Democratic County Chairman. Mr. Baxter has been before the people of the county for years and he is endeavoring to win in the coming election. Who will be the democratic nominee is to be settled at the primary in June.

THE NEWS is in receipt of a program of the dedication services of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Keokuk, Iowa, on Sunday, April 3, 1910, being sent by Rev. J. C. McCain. The new structure is a beautiful one and cost $23,000, of which $9,000 remains unpaid and will be raised on the day of dedication.

We understand that four young boys were expelled from school here, Monday, for a misdemeanor committed at the school house on Sunday. It seems as though during the past week that booze was flowing free in town and the young men had bottled up some of it and were having a time of their own, when suddenly the Professor appeared on the scene and on Monday immediate action was taken and as a result the boys are out of school. Perhaps the parents doubt the matter but it is nevertheless true and some further action will probably be taken soon.

Dutch Liner Gone to Sea Bottom.

A dispatch from Amsterdam says: The first traces of the Dutch liner Prince William II. since she was reported as missing, were picked up at sea near Belle Isle, off the coast of France, and leave no doubt regarding the fate of the vessel. A life buoy and a boat oar both bearing the ship's name were first found floating near Belle Ile. Subsequently a propeller blade and a name board, evidently belonging to the mail steamer, were washed ashore at a neighboring island. The Prince William II, of the Royal Dutch West Indian mail line, sailed from Amsterdam for West Indian ports and New York on Jan. 21, and several weeks ago was given up as lost. The crew and passengers numbered fifty-two.

Hatpin Tears His Eye.

Dr. James D. Hillis, city health officer of Lafayette, Ind., is confined to a hospital suffering from an injury that may cause him to lose the sight of one of his eyes as the result of coming in contact with a hatpin. Dr. Hillis visited a local vaudeville theater a few nights ago, and in the crowd as it was passing out of the playhouse he was shoved against a large hat worn by a woman in front of him. She turned quickly and the naked point of a long hatpin swung around and caught the physician squarely in the left eye, tearing the eyeball and causing him intense pain. The injury was dressed, and later he was removed to the hospital.

Bank Cracksmen are Progressive.

Professional cracksmen robbed the Van Buren Bank, owned by Howard Brothers, at Van Buren, Ind., and escaped with $1,500 in gold. Entrance to the building was gained through a rear window and by use of electric power obtained from wires strung to the door of the vault a drill was operated and a hole bored at the side of the time lock. A charge of nitroglycerine then forced the steel door of the strong box. The Van Buren postoffice has been robbed three times in as many years of large sums of money. There is no clew to the robbery.

Famous Danish Arctic Explorer Dead.

Commodore Hovgaard, the Danish Arctic explorer, died at Copenhagen, Denmark. Commodore Hovgaard figured prominently in the functions arranged in honor of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, upon the latter's recent visit to Copenhagen, and was one of the first to credit the claims of the American explorer. Following the rejection of Cook's claims by the University of Copenhagen, the Danish explorer declared that he could regard Cook thereafter only as an imposter.

Scalped by Cogwheels.

Edward McKenna, aged 25, a stranger, giving his home as Mansfield, Ohio, slipped by the watchman of the Vincennes Paper Milling Company's plant and in crawling under some of the machinery to a warm place where he hoped to take a nap, caught his hair in a cogwheel. The scalp was completely jerked off, and it is thought that McKenna will die from his injuries. The unfortunate man was taken to the Good Samaritan hospital, where he received surgical attention.

Man Monkey is No More.

Consul Junior, the so-called educated chimpanzee, who was dressed and taught to act like a man, died of bronchial pneumonia, after an illness of four days, at Dallas, Texas. Consul was valued at $50,000 and was insured with a London insurance company for that amount. During his illness physicians attended the monkey as they would have ministered to a human. The body will be embalmed and sent to Europe for burial.

Evansville Swells Its Population.

The City Council of Evansville, Ind., has annexed the town of Howell, the Southern Hospital for the Insane and the County Poor Asylum, taking an irregular strip three miles in width and embracing 13,000 population before the 1910 census is taken. The annexation was made to give Evansville a big addition in population.

COL. ROOSEVELT OUT OF AFRICAN JUNGLE

Press Correspondents Welcome the Ex-President Back to Civilization on the White Nile.

NOTHING TO SAY ON POLITICS

Colonel Is in Good Health and Spirits After Facing Perils in the Dark Continent.

After a year in the African wilds, Colonel Roosevelt and his party halted at Renk on the White Nile, Egyptian Soudan, and there on the threshold of civilization met a party of newspaper correspondents. The Roosevelt party were aboard the government steamer Dal, placed at their disposal by Sir Reginald Wingate, the British sirdar.

Colonel Roosevelt received the correspondents on board the Dal, which was tied to the right bank of the Nile. He is tanned brown as a cigar and is in excellent health. "I'm ready for anything," he said, with the old familiar smile. But he did not smile when he answered almost the first question the correspondent put: "I have nothing to say and shall have nothing to say on American or European politics, on any political question or any phase or incident connected with politics. I shall hold no interviews, and anything purporting to be in the nature of an interview can be accepted as false. This applies during my entire stay in Europe." The former President received an enormous number of letters at Renk.

Colonel Roosevelt expressed delight that his son, Theodore, Jr., is engaged to marry Miss Eleanor Alexander of New York. "She is the dearest girl!" he exclaimed, affectionately.

Colonel Roosevelt talked enthusiastically of his hunting adventures. He warmly praised the courtesy of British and other officials. The facilities they offered him largely enabled him to complete his collection. The talk aboard the Dal revealed that Colonel Roosevelt had several narrow escapes in the jungle. In the last an elephant which he had wounded charged him. He was trapped; there was no escape through the thic kjungle. The infuriated beast's trunk almost grazed him, when, at that close range, Colonel Roosevelt fired. Luckily he hit a vital spot; the elephant dropped in its tracks.

Kermit Roosevelt is in perfect health and condition. So are the others of the party—R. T. Cunninghame, the experienced African hunter, who prepared and conducted the expedition; A. J. Loring and Edmund Heller and Dr. Mearns.

The Dal towed a large barge laden with a thousand trophies of the plain and jungle. They constitute the largest collection of specimens ever taken out of Africa. The rare specimens include the first whole skin of the great eland, killed after great hardships; a white-eared kob, a Gray's waterbok, a shoebill stork, and a dik dik, an antelope about the size of a jack rabbit.

After leaving Egypt Mr. Roosevelt goes to Naples, then to Budapest and Paris. He will pass through Holland, the land of his ancestors, and arrive the first week of May in Christiania. The colonel then goes to Berlin and London. He will stay in England until early in June, when he sails for America, and expects to be in New York June 20.

Colonel Roosevelt and his son have killed about 500 specimens of big game. These include 17 lions, 11 elephants, 10 buffaloes, 10 black rhinoceroses, 9 white rhinoceroses, 9 hippopotami, 9 giraffes, 3 leopards, and almost innumerable deer of various sorts.

BALLINGER PUTS THEM BACK.

A large part of the lands withdrawn by former Secretary of the Interior Garfield along the Grand River, in Colorado and Utah, on the ground that they contained power possibilities, will be restored to entry by Secretary Ballinger, an examination having shown that only 12,392 acres are serviceable for that purpose.

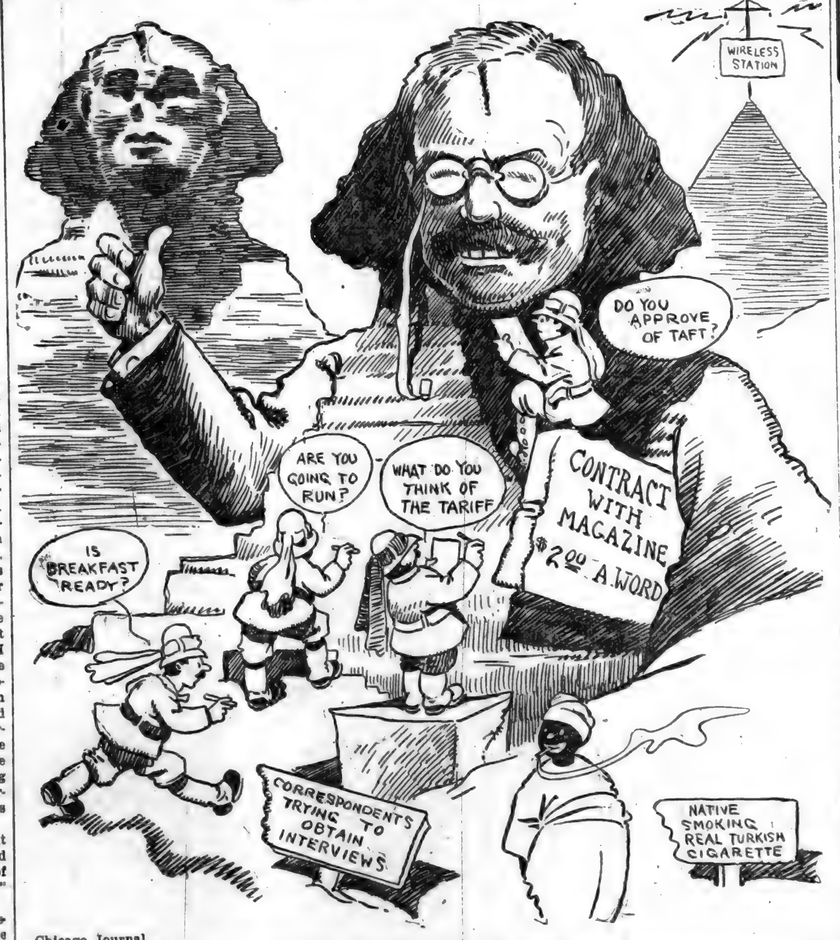
A House bill was passed by the Senate the other day authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw from all settlement for one year all lands which a State or a territory proposes to enter. The purpose is to give States and Territories the preference provided for in the Carey act and prevent speculators taking up the lands and compelling subsequent purchases.

DAM BREAK COSTS $500,000.

Many Believed Dead as Result of Flood in Colorado.

The south fill of the Jumbo dam of the Julesburg irrigation district reservoir, six miles west of Sedgwick, Colo., was washed out the other day, releasing many millions of cubic feet of water and causing damage estimated at from $350,000 to $500,000. A number of persons, including a party of hunters, are believed to have been drowned. On the Union Pacific Railroad five miles of track were washed out. Miles of telegraph and telephone poles were also washed out. Passenger train No. 15, for Denver, narrowly escaped disaster, but it was stopped after it dashed into three feet of water.

SPHINX ROOSEVELT—"ASK HIM."



—Chicago Journal.

ROOSEVELT IN KHARTOUM.

Meets Wife and Daughter and Is Given Possession of Palace.

Theodore Roosevelt has arrived in civilization. It was 5 o'clock Monday when he landed on the steps of the station at Khartoum, still attired in the khaki garb he had worn in the jungle. This was due to the non-arrival of his civilian clothes.

As is characteristic of all Rooseveltian events, his arrival at this point was on time and the details were picturesque. The elements gave up a four days' struggle for supremacy and became lamblike upon the actual approach of Colonel Roosevelt, while the ruffled Nile was as smooth as a mirror. Upon its bosom numerous native feluccas and British gunboats which had served through the Kitchener campaign were decorated with bunting and flags in honor of this American citizen, the brilliant white sands and cool green date palms fringing the shores, backed by stately buildings amidst luxurious gardens, forming a scenic setting of no mean worth.

Desirous of keeping his promise to finish his book, Colonel Roosevelt anchored in the Dal off Gordon's Tree, the favorite resting place of the martyred hero of Khartoum, six miles from that city. When the last sentence of the book had been penned he followed it by stenographic dictation, answering numerous letters. The Colonel found the greater part of his mail made up of absurd requests for trophies and other things impossible to do or answer.

At 3 p. m. the vessel leisurely steamed down the White Nile, passing Omdurmann, the historic scene of the Khalifa's downfall. With Egyptian, English and American flags flying at the confluence of the White and Blue Nile, Slatin Pasha and Wilson Bey, resplendent with gold decorations, welcomed the colonel.

At the palace a brave array of officers as a guard of honor flanked the passage from the landing place. After an informal presentation to the leading officials of Khartoum, Colonel Roosevelt went to the railroad station to meet Mrs. Roosevelt and his daughter, after which he returned to the palace, where he dined with the privacy of a simple citizen, enjoying the luxury of dress clothes for the first time in twelve months, the party's togs of civilization having arrived. The palace has practically been given up to the Roosevelts. It is a historic, yellow building, and is surmounted by an American flag for the first time in its history.

IN A NUTSHELL

One of the largest steers ever slaughtered in the West was killed at San Francisco. On the hoof the steer weighed 2,500 pounds and dressed 1,500 pounds net.

According to government reports the total value of the horses, mules, milch cows, cattle, sheep and swine in the United States was on Jan. 1, 1910, $5,138,486,000. This is an increase of $613,237,000 since Jan. 1, 1909.

Farmers near Marshall, Mo., complain that wolves have been very troublesome during the last winter. They killed twenty-eight pigs recently for one farmer and others have suffered losses of lambs, pigs and poultry.

PEOPLE DEMAND END OF STRIKE

Call for Arbitration of Philadelphia Street Car Walkout.

The demand by the people for arbitration of the differences between the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company and its 4,000 or more striking employes has become insistent.

In Philadelphia and outside of it the call for mediatory measures is voiced. Everywhere it is recognized that the failure to arrive at any arbitral agreement is the only thing that stands in the way of a speedy calling off of the general sympathetic strike in the city, which practically has paralyzed the city's industrial life and which the labor leaders made renewed threats to spread if the deadlock continued.

These threats, perhaps, were what most stood in the way of an amicable adjustment. The "vested interests," which are a decided factor in the situation, dislike and resent the hint of coercion.

At a representative meeting of business men the other afternoon the call for arbitration was the keynote. Local financial, commercial and official bodies, and the federal authorities, as well as the salutary influence of the National Civic Federation, were appealed to to step in and end the difficulty. Gov. Stuart at Harrisburg was petitioned by the labor men to take action, and the patriotic citizens of the city and State were invoked in resolutions, statements, and petitions to aid in putting a stop to conditions which Philadelphia daily finds growing more intolerable.

COAL STRIKE IS SEEN.

Walkout of Miners in Bituminous Field Declared Certainty.

A general strike of coal miners on April 1 throughout the bituminous fields is declared a certainty. More than 200,00 men in four states will be involved in the controversy and the struggle is expected to be more protracted than any mining dispute in recent years. Railroads are now taking practically all the output of the Illinois mines and storing it along their tracks in anticipation of the suspension. Manufacturing interests are offering increased prices for coal and many of them are under contracts with the railroads which they are required to fill.

The approximate number of men who will lay down their picks at the end of this month is as follows:

Illinois	75,000
Western Pennsylvania	65,000
Ohio	45,000
Indiana	20,000
Total	205,000

If the United Mine Workers of America adhere to the resolutions adopted in their annual convention that no district can sign an agreement or resume operations until every district is satisfied, the number of men will exceed the estimate given, as Central Pennsylvania, Iowa, Michigan and such districts in West Virginia as are organized will be included in the suspension.

Abandoned Bride Ends Life.

Deserted by her bridegroom of a week, whom she accused of eloping with her younger sister, Mrs. Frank Dague committed suicide at Addison, Ohio, by swallowing a quantity of paris green.

REFUSES REWARD TO PEARY.

House Subcommittee Says He Must Give More Proof.

By a practically unanimous vote the subcommittee of the House naval committee in Washington decided against bestowing any reward upon Robert E. Peary until he had furnished further proof that he discovered the north pole.

The only member of the committee who did not vote to defer action on the pending bill was Representative Englebright of California, who said he was convinced Mr. Peary had discovered the pole. Bates of Pennsylvania, heretofore considered a supporter of Peary, offered the resolution.

"I confess I am exceedingly skeptical about Mr. Peary's ever having discovered the pole," declared Representative Macon, "and I am going to protest against any honor being conferred upon him by Congress until he has established beyond a reasonable doubt that he did discover it." Macon expressed himself as being "indignant at the thought of being called upon as a representative of the American people to confer a high honor upon any one of its citizens in the dark." All legislation by Congress, he said, ought to be open and above board.

Macon said he wanted to direct attention to one "discrepancy in Mr. Peary's story." This was the speed the explorer declared he made from the time Capt. Bartlett left him until he reached the pole. Peary said that for five days he made 26.4 miles a day, but Macon said this appeared singular in view of the fact that the Peary party had made only 9.06 miles a day up to the time Bartlett left. "The astonishing part of Mr. Peary's statement," said Macon, "is the number of miles he traveled every day after Bartlett left him, and when no white man was with him as witness, his only companion being his negro valet and four Eskimos."

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

President Trewin, of the Iowa State board of education, is strongly opposed to modern intercollegiate athletics, and speaks emphatically against foot ball as it is played to-day.

It is the intention of the Iowa board of educational control to create a department of athletics for the university, so foot ball, track athletics, base ball and basket ball will be under the coaching of one head.

Dr. William Everett, clergyman, educator, lecturer and politician, recently died at his home in Quincy, Mass. As author and lecturer he was known on both sides of the Atlantic. He lectured at Oxford and Cambridge.

A fund of $50,000 for the use of the Augustana College and Theological Seminary at Rock Island, Ill., is to be raised by the Minnesota Conference of the Augustana Swedish Lutheran synod during the present year, to be put with a fund of $200,000 to be raised by the other seven conferences in the synod.

The State board of regents of Wisconsin received a report from the board of visitors which investigated the recent appearance of Emma Goldman and Parker H. Sercombe at the university, in which the visitors find that the university authorities were not responsible for the visits of these two speakers.

The Week in Congress

The Senate made the administration railroad bill the unfinished business of the Senate Wednesday and its consideration, until passed, cannot be interfered with except by appropriation bills. After the first reading had been concluded a number of bills were passed, including one to establish a court of patent appeals and one authorizing the construction of a $12,000,000 building in Washington for the use of the departments of State, Justice and Commerce and Labor. The House considered bills on its calendar, passing several measures of local importance. During the early portion of the session it sustained a point of order by which the bill for the construction of embassy buildings in foreign capitals will not be permitted again to come before the House during this session.

The Senate Thursday passed the Indian appropriation bill, carrying $10,000,000. The House passed the United States Military Academy bill, carrying $1,700,000, and began consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, which as reported by the committee appropriates $34,000,000.

The Senate was in session less than an hour on Friday and transacted no business of importance. A number of pension bills were passed by the House and consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was begun. After a five-hour session the house adjourned out of respect to the memory of the late Representative Perkins of New York.

Ceremonies attending the acceptance by Congress of the statue of John C. Calhoun was the chief business transacted in the Senate Saturday. The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was under consideration for several hours in the House and the Calhoun statue occupied some time.

The nationality and mother tongue of all persons enumerated for the next Congress was provided for in a bill passed by the Senate Monday. The provision for recording the race of persons enumerated was left out of the present law, but upon demand of a large number of citizens of foreign birth its reinstatement was decided upon. The Senate also passed a bill providing for an election by the people of Hawaii on the subject of prohibition for the islands. The consideration of local bills affecting the District of Columbia consumed the entire time of the House.

Senator Cummins took up the time of the session Tuesday with a speech on the pending bill to amend the interstate commerce law. In the course of his remarks Senator Cummins referred to a report that the President had stated that any Senator who did not support the measure would be put out of the Republican party organization. Mr. Cummins replied to this by saying he could not vote for the bill. The House passed the legislative, executive and judicial bill appropriating nearly $34,000,000.

Packers Fight Extradition.

As had been previously announced the grand jury of Hudson County, N. J., indicted the six principal meat-packing companies concerned in the beef trust, several of whom are multi-millionaires. Most of the accused men are residents of Chicago, and it very soon became apparent that they were disinclined to go into Jersey to face the charges of conspiracy contained in these indictments. They would fight extradition with all their wealth, if necessary. This is the first concerted effort in the East to fix responsibility for the prevailing high price of food. Under the New Jersey law, a conviction permits a maximum penalty of three years in prison or $1,000 fine or both. Prosecutor Garvan said he would force extradition in every case, sparing none, and would take speedy action. Should extradition fail, he will turn over his evidence to the federal authorities.

FROM FAR AND NEAR.

Orders for 10,100 steel cars of all classes, approximating in cost $12,000,000, have been placed at Pittsburg in the last few weeks.

Lancy Evans, expert rice statistician of the United States Department of Agriculture, suggests that rice farmers use low-grade rice to feed cattle.

J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., has let contracts for a country home on the north shore of Long Island, near Matinnecock point, N. Y., at a cost "exceeding $250,000."

Jacob Kohel, a farmer living near Dorchester, Neb., was shot and instantly killed by his son, John Kohel. The father, who had been drinking, was flourishing a shotgun.

Fire caused by crossed electric wires destroyed the storage battery department of the Westinghouse Machine Company's plant at East Pittsburg, Pa., causing a loss estimated at $75,000.

Plans for the merger of companies said to control about two-thirds of the lithograph business of the country, have been announced at Cincinnati, Ohio.

President Charles S. Barrett, of the National Farmers' Union, called a national convention of farmers to meet in St. Louis from May 3 to 7 to discuss legislation affecting farmers.

Philander C. Knox, Jr., who has been cut off by his father, Secretary of State Knox, because of his elopement and marriage, has gone to work in Providence, R. I., as an automobile agent.

CHAPTER XIV.—(Continued.)

I had scarce rejoined Tybee at the wagons when the long roll of the drums broke the silence of the hilltop, and a volley fire of musketry from the rock breastwork on the right told us the battle was on. Tybee gave me one last reproachful look and stood out to see what could be seen, and I stood with him.

"Your friends are running," he said, when there was no reply to the opening volley; and truly, I feared he was right. At the bottom of the slope, scattering groups of the riflemen could be seen hastening to right and left. But I would not admit the charge to Tybee.

"I think not," I objected, denying the apparent fact. "They have come too far and too fast to turn back now for a single overshot volley."

At the word the forest-covered steep at our end of the hill sprang alive with dun-clad figures darting upward from tree to tree. Volley after volley thundered down upon them as they climbed, but not once did the dodging charge up the slope pause or falter. Unlike all other irregulars I had ever seen, whose idea of a battle is to let off the piece and run, these mountain men held their fire like veterans, closing in upon the hilltop steadily and in a grim silence broken only by the shouting encouragements of the leaders—this until their circling line was completed.

Then suddenly from all sides of the beleaguered camp arose a yell to shake the stoutest courage, and with that the wood-covered slopes began to spit fire, not in volleys, but here and there in irregular snappings and cracklings as the sure-shot riflemen saw a mark to pull trigger on.

The effect of this fine-bead target practice—for it was naught else—was most terrific. All along the breastwork, front and rear, crouching men sprang up at the rifle cracklings to fling their arms all abroad and to fall writhing and wrestling in the death throe. At our end of the hill, where the rock barrier was thinnest, the slaughter was appalling; and above the din of the firearms we could hear the bellowed commands of the sturdy old Indian fighter, Benjamin Cleaveland, urging his men up to still closer quarters. "A little nearer, my brave boys; a little nearer and we have them! Press on up to the rocks. They'll be as good breastwork from our side as from theirs!"

You will read in the histories that the Tory helpers of Ferguson fought as men with halters round their necks; and so, indeed, a-many of them did. But though they were most pitiless enemies of ours, I bear them witness that they did fight well and bravely, and not as men who fight for fear's sake.

I saw the end was near when the major ordered the final charge, and Captain de Peyster formed his line and led it forward at a double-quick. The mountaineers held more than half the hilltop now, and this forlorn hope was to try to drive them down the farther slopes. On it went, and I could see the men pitch and tumble out of the line until at bayonet-reach of the riflemen there were less than a dozen afoot and fit to make the push.

De Peyster fought his way back to the wagons, gasping and bloody. Some of the Tories crowding around us raised a white flag. The major, sorely wounded now and all but disabled, rode rough-shod into the ruck of cowering militiamen to pull down the flag. Again the white token of surrender was raised, and again the major rode in to beat it down with his sword. At this Captain de Peyster put in his word.

"'Tis no use, Major; there is no more fight left in us! Five minutes more of this and we'll be shot down to a man!"

Before a hand could be lifted to stay him, Ferguson had wheeled his horse and was galloping straight for the patriot line at the farther extremity of the hilltop. A dozen bounds, it may be, the good charger carried him; then the storm of rifle-bullets beat him from the saddle. And so died one of the gallantest officers that ever did an unworthy king's work on the field of battle.

The dead buried and the wounded cared for in some rough and ready fashion, preparations were made in all haste for a speedy withdrawal from the neighborhood of the battle-field. Rumor had it that Tarleton with his invincible legion was within a few hours' march; and the mountain men, sodden weary with the toils of the flying advance and the had-fought conflict, were in no fettle to cope with a fresh foe.

As yet I had not made myself known to the patriot commanders, having my hands and heart full with the care of poor Tybee, who was grievously hurt, and being in a measure indifferent to what should befall me. But now as we were about to march I was dragged before the committee of colonels and put to the question.

"Your uniform is a strange one to us, sir," said Isaac Shelby, looking me up and down with that heavy-lidded right eye of his. "Explain your rank and standing, if you please."

I told my story simply, and, as I thought, effectively; and had only black looks for my pains.

"'Tis a strange tale, surely, sir—too strange to be believable," quoth Shelby. "You are a traitor, Captain Ireton—of the kind we need not cumber ourselves with on a march."

"Who says that word of me?" I demanded, caring not much for that to which his threat pointed, but something for my good name.

Shelby turned and beckoned to a man in the group behind him. "Stand out, John Whittlesey," he directed; and I found myself face to face with that rifleman of Colonel Davie's party who had been so fierce to hang me at the fording of the Catawba.

This man gave his testimony briefly, telling but the bare truth. A week earlier I had passed in Davie's camp for a true-blue patriot, this though I was wearing a ragged British uniform at the moment. As for the witness himself, he had misdoubted me all along, but the colonel had trusted me and had sent me on some secret mission, the inwardness of which he, John Whittlesey, had been unable to come at, though he confessed that he had tried to worm it out of me before parting company with me on the road to Charlotte. I looked from one to another of my judges.

"If this be all, gentlemen, the man does but confirm my story," I said.

"It is not all," said Shelby. "Mr. Pengarvin, stand forth."

There was another stir in the backgrounding group and the pettifogger edged his way into the circle, keeping well out of hand-reach of me. How he had made shift to escape from Ferguson's men, to change sides, and to turn up thus serenely in the ranks of the over-mountain men, I know not to this day, nor ever shall know.

"Tell these gentlemen what you have told me," said Shelby, briefly; and the factor, cool and collected now, rehearsed the undeniable facts: how in Charlotte I had figured as a member of Lord Cornwallis' military family; how I had carried my malignancy to the patriot cause to the length of throwing a stanch friend to the commonwealth, to wit, one Owen Pengarvin, into the common jail; how, as Lord Cornwallis' trusted aide-de-camp, I had been sent with an express to Major Ferguson. Also, he suggested that if I should be searched some proof of my duplicity might be found upon me.

At this William Campbell nodded to two of his Virginians, and I was searched forthwith, and that none too gently. In the breast pocket of my hussar jacket they found the duplicate despatch; the one I had taken from Tybee and which had so nearly proved my undoing in the interview with Major Ferguson. Isaac Shelby opened and read the accusing letter and passed it around among his colleagues.

"I shall not ask you why this was undelivered, sir," he said to me, sternly. "'Tis enough that it was found upon your person, and it sufficiently proves the truth of this gentleman's accusation. Have you aught further to say, Capatain Ireton?—aught that may excuse us for not leaving you behind us in a halter?"

Suddenly Richard Jennifer and Ephraim Yeates pushed their way through the ever-thickening ring of onlookers; the latter to range himself beside me with his brown-barreled rifle in the hollow of his arm, and my dear lad to fling himself upon me in a bear's hug of joyous recognition and greeting.

"Score one for me, Jack!" he cried. "We were fair at t'other end of the mountain." Then he whirled upon my judges. "What is this, gentlemen?—a court martial? Captain Ireton is my friend, and as true a patriot as ever drew breath. What is your charge?"

Colonel Sevier, in whose command Richard and the old borderer had fought in the hilltop battle, undertook to explain. I stood self-confessed as the bearer of despatches from Lord Cornwallis to Major Ferguson, he said, and I had claimed that the orders had been so altered as to delay the major's retreat and so to bring on the battle. But they had just found Lord Cornwallis' letter in my pocket, still sealed and undelivered. And the tenor of it was precisely opposite to that of an order calculated to delay the major's march, as Mr. Jennifer could see if he would read it.

While Sevier was talking, the old borderer was fumbling in the breast of his hunting-shirt, and now he produced a packet of papers tied about with red tape.

"'Pears to me like you Injun-killers from t'other side o' the mounting is in a mighty hot sweat to hang somebody," he said, as coolly as if he were addressing a mob of underlings. "Here's a mess o' billy-doos with Lord Cornwallis' name to 'em that I found amongst Major Ferguson's leavings. If you'll look 'em over, maybe you'll find out, immejitly if not sooner, that Cap'n John here is telling ye the plumb truth."

The papers were examined hastily, and presently John Sevier lighted upon the despatch I had carried and delivered. Thereat the colonels put their heads together; and then my case was re-opened, with Sevier as spokesman.

"We have a letter here which appears to be the original order to Ferguson, Captain Ireton. Can you repeat from memory the postscriptum which you say was added to it?"

I gave the gist of my old patriarch's addendum as well as I could; and thereupon suspicion fled away and my late judges would vie with one another in hearty frontier hand-grasps and apologies, whilst the throng that ringed us in forgot caution and weariness and gave me a cheer to wake the echoes. 'Twas while this burst of gratulation was abuzz that Ephraim Yeates raised a cry of his own.

"Stop that there black-legged imp o' the law!" he shouted, pushing his way out of the circle. "He's the one that ought to hang!"

There was a rush for the wagon barricade, a clatter of horse-hoofs on the hillside below, and Yeates' rifle went to his face. But the bullet flew wide, and the black-garbed figure clinging to the horse's mane was soon out of sight among the trees.

"Es I allow, ye'd better look out for that yaller-skinned little varmint, Cap'n John," quoth the old man. "He's rank pizen, he is, and ye'll have to break his neck sooner 'r later."

Now that I was fully exonerated I was free to go and come as I chose; nay, more, I was urged to cast in my lot with the over-mountain partisans. As to this, I took counsel with Richard Jennifer whilst the colonels were setting their commands in order for the march and loading the prisoners with the captured guns and ammunition.

"What is to the fore, Dick?" I asked; "more fighting?"

The lad shook his head. "Never another blow, I fear, Jack. These fellows crossed the mountain to whip Ferguson. Having done it they will go home."

"'Tis nigh on to a crime," said I. "This victory, smartly followed up, might well be the turning of the tide for us."

But the lad would not admit the qualifying condition. "'Twill be no less as it is," he declared. "Mark you, Jack; 'twill put new life into the cause and nerve every man of ours afresh. And as for the redcoats, if my Lord Cornwallis gets the news of it in a lump, as he should, Gates will have plenty of time to set himself in motion, slow as he is."

"What are your plans, Richard?"

"I have none worth the name."

"Then you are not committed to Colonel Sevier for a term of service?"

"No; nor to Cleaveland, nor McDowell, nor any. We heard there was to be fighting hereaway—Ephraim Yeates and I—and we came as volunteers."

"Good! then I have a thought which may stand for what it is worth. To make the most of this victory over Major Ferguson, Gates should be apprised at once and by a sure tongue; and his Lordship should have the news quickly, too, and in a lump, as you say. Let us take horse and ride post, we two; you to Gates at Hillsborough, and I to Charlotte."

"I had thought of my part of that," he said in a muse. "But you can't well go back to Cornwallis now, Jack; 'tis playing with death. There will be other news-carriers—there are sure to be; and a single breath to whisper what you have done will hang you higher than Haman."

"'Tis but a war hazard."

He looked at me curiously. I saw a shrewd question in his eyes and set instant action as a barrier in the way of its asking.

"Let us find Colonel Sevier and beg us the loan of a pair of horses," said I; and so we were kept from coming upon the dangerous ground of pointed questions and evasive answers.

All that Sunday we pressed forward, hasting as we could through the stark columned aisles of the autumn-stripped forest, and looking hourly to come upon Tarleton's legion marching out to Ferguson's relief.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

The 2-year-old girl of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Moore, of Evansville, ate several pink arsenic and strychnine pills, thinking they were candy, and died in a short time from convulsions.

For thirty-five years Samuel Stephens, of Greenfield, suffered more or less pain in his jaw. Physicians were unable to locate the cause until a few days ago, when a stone one-half inch long and three-eights of an inch thick was removed from the muscles near his ear. Stephens has no idea how or when the stone became imbedded in his head.

Acting under instructions from the State Board of Tax Commissioners, County Assessors have instducted the township assessors to list for taxation all gravel road bonds held in the county. There has been considerable difference of opinion among attorneys as to the taxability of these securities, and the question will eventually have to be settled in the courts.

On a wager of $10 that he could not eat two dozen scrambled eggs in ten minutes, Alex Borer, night watchman at Petersburg, established a new record as an egg eater, and won the money in nine and one-half minutes. The feat was accomplished at a restaurant, and when Borer finished he asked if there were any more eggs, that the last tasted as good as the first.

A few charred boards mark the place where Joseph Addison, "the Shelby County hermit," has spent most of his days. The man built a hut years ago on the banks of Big Blue river, and held a lifetime lease on it by courtesy of the Billman family, owners of the ground. One night last week the shack burned to the ground, the result of incendiary origin. Addison is now at the County Infirmary. He is regarded as one of the best fishermen in the county.

When a funeral procession approached the Raglesville Methodist church, fourteen miles north of Washington, the home of James L. D. Evans, a short distance away, was found to be in flames. Men in the funeral procession left their vehicles and assisted in carrying the goods from the burning dwelling. The house, a two-story, six-room affair, was reduced to ashes at a loss of $2,500, partially insured. The fire originated from a defective flue.

Farmers in Bartholomew, Jackson, Johnson and other neighboring counties are busily engaged in burning corn stalks and getting ready to plow for corn. Some of them have already started and report the soil in excellent condition for breaking. Little plowing is being done for oats, as most of the farmers in this part of the State sow oats without breaking the ground. The people who think that Irish potatoes must be planted on St. Patrick's day are getting ready to put their spuds in the ground.

Thurman Percifield and Clarence Marshall, of Nashville, tell an early spring fish story and are willing to make affidavit that the story is true. The two young men were fishing with minnows in Salt creek, and were sitting close together. A bass took the minnow on Percifield's hook and then gobbled the minnow on Marshall's hook. Both men jerked at about the same time and landed the fish, which was fastened to both hooks. The bass weighed two pounds, and it was divided equally.

To save the lives of eight giant trees that stand in front of the Wilson homestead on the Yorktown pike, west of Muncie, the trees being a landmark known to all who use that road, a monster petition directed to the county commissioners is being signed. This road is about to be improved, and, according to specifications, the big trees must come down, but so strong has been the protest against this action that the work of cutting down the trees has been deferred pending action by the commissioners. If the trees are saved, it will mean that the road at this point will be narrower than elsewhere.

There are lots of ducks coming in already in the Kankakee region, and a good many geese, too. But Indiana hunters are not allowed to hunt very much. Most all of the swamp land in Jasper County has been leased for hunting purposes to Chicago clubs. The Diana Gun Club, the Valley Gun Club and the Capital Gun Club hold leases for almost every acre of swamp land from central Newton County to the Stark County line, in many instances on both sides of the river. Local hunters in past years have disregarded these leases to a great extent and hunted about where they pleased, but this year these clubs have hired active private game wardens, with instructions to arrest trespassers, and Chicago sportsmen will have about all the fun. It has been charged that many of the hunters do not take out licenses to hunt in Indiana, and are themselves liable to fines.

Harriet Grey, colored, who claimed she was 110 years old, and for sixty years a slave, died at the Poor Infirmary in Evansville after a short illness. She was a native of Daviess County, Kentucky.

Peter Cripe, direct descendant of a Revolutionary War hero and for eighty years a resident of St. Joseph County, died last week, aged 86 years. He was well known throughout Northern Indiana, especially among older politicians.

Mrs. George Ballard, aged 62, living near Evansville, is dead of blood poisoning, brought on by a scratch received several days ago.

Charles Miller, a minor, has sued the Evansville Veneer Works for $10,000 damages for the loss of four fingers. He alleges he was injured while working in the plant of the company in Evansville.

Omer Binford, a farmer near Greenfield, is holding a bunch of forty two-hundred-pound hogs for a "higher" price. He has been importuned to sell every day since hogs started on the high stride. A few days ago he turned down an offer of $10.25 at the farm.

The high price of meat at Columbus is causing people to eat fish and eggs. Grocers say they are selling more white fish than they ever did. Fish markets also report large sales of lake and river fish. There is also a big demand for eggs since the price dropped. Grocers are paying 18 cents a dozen, which is 2 cents more than the Columbus shippers offer.

The Allen County Sportsmen's League, organized for the protection of game and the enforcement of the game laws, is preparing to broaden into an organization which shall include the entire Twelfth Congressional district. The league has opened war on manufacturing concerns which are alleged to be polluting streams by permitting poisonous refuse to drain into them.

A smooth graft is being worked in Southwestern Indiana by agents selling wire fence to farmers, the price agreed on being usually 8 cents a foot. The farmer thinks this a small price for the fence, but when the bill comes around he finds that the 8 cents relates to every wire of which the fence is composed. The fraud has been successfully "pulled off" in a few cases.

A second hospital for animals is to be established in Muncie at once by Dr. Orville L. Boor, a veterinary surgeon. One institution of the kind has been in successful operation for several years. Dr. Boor will construct his own building at a cost of $10,000 and it will be located near the center of the city. Every possible comfort for sick and injured animals will be provided.

Francis M. Allen, of Laporte, will leave soon for London, England, to claim the estate of William Wellington Allen, multi-millionaire brewer, who died recently and whose principal heirs have been located in this country. Mrs. Mary A. Campbell, of Coatesville, Ind., and Mrs. Maria Campbell and Mrs. Alice Ransom, of Greencastle, are the other American heirs. Mr. Allen is now in Washington taking the necessary legal steps.

Mrs. Mary Cramer, aged 19, was fatally burned at Ft. Branch when a can of coal oil with which she was starting a fire exploded, throwing blazing oil all over her. The only other person in the house was Mrs. Emma Baker, near death with pneumonia, and before the screams of the woman brought help her body was charred, even the shoes being burned off. She is still alive, but will die. It was only by hard work the house was saved. Mrs. Cramer is the wife of a dredge boat contractor employed near Ft. Branch.

County Attorney Robbins told the Wayne County Commissioners that not until a whipping post was established would the county be relieved of paying the cost of boarding certain classes of prisoners at the jail. The County Attorney expressed the opinion that it is never necessary to send juveniles to jail, and that courts should refuse to do so, but the young men who are habitually guilty of minor offenses which make them a burden on the county should, the County Attorney said, receive the whipping post treatment.

Dr. and Mrs. John M. Stucky celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage at their home in Gosport recently. All the children were present, with many grandchildren. The children are Dr. Thomas E. Stucky, Homer W. Stucky, E. W. Stucky and Mrs. H. C. Binkley, all of Indianapolis, and Dr. Fred V. Stucky, of Gosport. Dr. J. M. Stucky, who is 80 years old, is a Kentuckian by birth, and came to Gosport from Louisville in 1843. He was graduated from the University of Louisville, a medical school, and was in the active practice of medicine in this place for fifty-five years. Dr. Stucky was a member of the Indiana Legislature in 1866. He was assistant surgeon of the Fifty-ninth Indiana Regiment during the Civil War, and participated in the battle of Shiloh. In the early days he was a fighter for the adoption of the free school system of Indiana, and he has been prominent in all temperance legislation and identified with all early developments. Mrs. Stucky, who is 77 years old, is a daughter of Hezekiah Wampler, an early settler and large real estate holder in Owen and Monroe Counties. Both are enjoying good health.

Carolina Winters, aged 60, was fatally burned at Portland when her clothing caught fire while burning trash in the yard at her home. She was unmarried and lived alone.

A woman answering the description of Mrs. Belle Gunness, the Laporte murderess, is under surveillance at Grand Rapids, Mich. Louis Richmond, of the Michigan City police force, notified the police of Laporte that he is reasonably sure he has "discovered" Mrs. Gunness.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of Chicago trade says:

"The volume of payments through the banks sustains high levels and is a favorable index of the extending activity in commerce. Further ease also appears in money, and this has induced better borrowing for both trade and investment.

"Current operations show steady progress, aided by more seasonable weather, the desire to push construction and wider demands in the leading industrial and distributive branches. Movements of grain, live stock and provisions exhibit declines, but the gross earnings of the Chicago steam roads rise, and there are heavy forwardings of finished outputs, raw supplies and general merchandise.

"Heavier contracts for equipment are now issued and important tonnages closed for rails, pig iron, motive power, cars and miscellaneous steel shapes. Building operations assure much work throughout the coming season, while additional machinery and hands are employed in woodworking. Dealings in the leading retail lines are stimulated by the attractive exhibits of fashionable wear.

"Bank clearings, $312,456,414, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1909 by 18.4 per cent and compare with $241,307,751 in 1908. Failures reported in the Chicago district numbered twenty-nine, as against twelve last week, eighteen in 1909 and thirty in 1908. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number six, as against three last week, ten in 1909 and eleven in 1908."

NEW YORK.

Trade reports continue to display a certain degree of irregularity, a tendency particularly noticeable in the East, parts of the nearby South and in scattered sections of the West. Yet, on the whole, trading at a majority of points is probably better than it was last week, the South as a whole reporting improvement, the Northwest showing up in good shape and the far West being good, with the Southwest satisfactory. More favorable weather conditions appear to be the chief influence making for improvement, but, on the other hand, the poor condition of country roads tends to deter anything like a free movement. Staple lines are in chief request.

Business failures for the week ending with March 10 were 250 as against 184 last week, 254 in the like week of 1909, 278 in 1908, 186 in 1907 and 187 in 1906.—Bradstreet's.

Boys Were a Little Fast.

Two thirteen year-old boys were committed to the Boys' School at Plainfield, Thursday evening, by Judge Bratton, rather an unusual occurrence, nevertheless a fact. Their pace was altogether too fast, hence they were taken out of the running.

Hugh Rex of Newville, was forced into public gaze when John Miller of that place, petitioned the court to have the lad sent to the reform school. This action followed the boy's arrest in that township and fine of $1 and cost totaling about $8 which he couldn't pay. He was brought to jail Thursday afternoon, not exactly to lay out the fine but for detention until he could be taken to Plainfield for the petition filed with the court at the same time resulted in his commitment forthwith.

In the petition the facts recited are that the boy's father, George Rex, deserted his wife and four children leaving for parts unknown; that the mother is not able to care for this boy because of his disposition; that he is disobedient, has a high temper, is a delinquent, is vicious, and unless restrained will lead a "vicious, idle and immoral life."

Willie Hensinger, the boy who stole the Bridget horse and buggy recently, was sentenced at the same time. The Hensinger boy's home can in a sense said to be in Newville township for he made his home a part of the time with his grandmother, Mrs. Jane Crom, and has stayed with others there so it can be said, and not wholly wrong, that two Newville boys will enter the Boys' School at the same time.—Dispatch.

An Awful Eruption

of a volcano excites brief interest, and your interest in skin eruptions will be as short, if you use Bucklen's Arnica Salve, their quickest cure. Even the worst boils, ulcers, or fever sores are soon healed by it. Best for Burns, Cuts, Bruises, Sore Lips, Chapped Hands, Chilblains and Piles. It gives instant relief. 25c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

Visited Old Home.

Hesperia, Feb. 2, 1910.

Friend Moon:

Having just returned from a very enjoyable trip to the Hoosier state, the place of my birth and where I grew to manhood, and thinking that perhaps my friends would like a report of the same, I will ask for a little space in your valuable paper for that purpose I wish to say right here that I didn't have to wait until I got to Indiana before the feast was spread, for I rode over to Brunswick with genial Ed Carbine, stopping on the way at the Becker mansion for a short visit and a good supper. I was entertained over night at Carbine's home. (By the way, there is only one Ed Carbine) I spent the day at Muskegon attending the District Convention of Highway Commissioners for Newaygo, Oceana and Muskegon counties, which was very instructive and beneficial to those who are interested in better roads. Would like to say something along this line but for want of space will leave it for a later date. In the evening went by electric car to Grand Rapids and to the soldiers' Home where I had a short visit with my mother's veteran brother who has charge of the watering plant of the home. He seemed to be contented and happy.

Next morning went by G. R. & I to Avilla, then by B & O. to St. Joe Station, and to my father's house, one mile out of town. Toward evening my brother took me in cutter to my daughter's, Mrs. Fred Hart There was to be a sociable of the young married people's Sunday School class that evening at my sisters, Mrs. J. W. Hart, so I was counted in with the sled load.

Except that my sister is slowly recovering from a painful runaway accident, I found nearly everybody enjoying good health, and somewhat surprised. For fear I forget I wish to say that for mentally well preserved old people I believe this locality bears the palm of 16 persons, nine men and seven women, an average age of 83 years have been attained. My father 82 years, and uncle, R. G. Coburn 84 years being among the number. I saw Uncle Moses Perry the oldest one of the number (91 years) cutting wood alone with a crosscut saw.

On Friday evening I attended Coburn's Corners band practice. They have a silver cornet band of more than twenty pieces said to be the best band in northern Indiana. They honored me by playing several selections If I could secure their service don't know but I would run for president.

On Sunday morning I attended a very live Sunday School at the corners, 80 in attendance, mostly young people. They use the piano and cornet to assist the singing. After Sunday School, social meeting, subject for discussion "Christian practice."

Last week was without special incident only that I didn't seem to know enough to regulate my capacity for the good things set before me and, well, nuff said.

Monday morning, January 31, rode nine miles in buggy to Butler, by cars to Kendallville, Grand Rapids, Muskegon and Fremont the same day where found my better ½ glad (I guess) to see me. Am dieting now.

Truly
Chas. M. Coburn.

Saved a Soldier's Life.

Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Stone, of Kemp, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cold" he writes, "that developed a cough, that stuck to me in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." For Coughs, Colds, LaGrippe, Asthma, Hemorrhage, Hoarseness, Croup, Whooping Cough and lung trouble, its supreme. 50c. $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by H. L. Dunkle Caucus Calls.

DEMOCRAT.

The democrats of the several townships in DeKalb county, Indiana, will meet in their respective places of holding caucuses in each township on Saturday, March 26, 1910, at 1:30 p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to each of the following conventions:—The congressional to be held at Fort Wayne, Indiana, on March 30 at 1 o'clock p. m., at assembly room at court house, also to the state and judicial conventions, the dates of which will be selected later.

The basis of representation is one delegate for every 200 votes and one for each additional fraction or more than 100 votes cast for Thomas R. Marshall at the November Election 1908.

WOVEN WIRE FENCE.

There is so many makes of fence on the market, some good, some very poor. I have handled a number of different makes and am convinced that the AMERICAN FENCE is the best value for the money of any fence on the market. The strength of fence depends on the weight of the wire in the fence. Now compare the weight of a ROD of AMERICAN FENCE with the weight of a rod of any other fence then compare the price. Do not take the dealers word as to how much it weighs but put it on the scales and weigh it. I can sell you

Can you buy any other fence so cheap?

I have eight different styles on hand now. The American Steel and Wire Company make nearly all the wire that is woven in the different makes of fence and it is folly for an agent of any other make of fence to claim a superior quality of wire or of galvanizing. Every manufacturer of fence has an idea as to what temper the wire should be for a fence and orders his wire tempered accordingly, in other words he experimenting at the Farmers expense. The American Steel and Wire Company have passed the experimental stage and are producing a composition of Steel for Fence that is perfectly adapted for it. Every farmer that has had any experience with wire knows that wire exposed to the weather becomes hard and brittle, this feature has been largely eliminated in the special wire used in AMERICAN FENCE. While the wire is stiff and springy it is flexible enough to be easily spliced and will remain so. We will explain other good features if you will call and see us.

We are headquarters for all kinds of roofing, galvanized shingles, any kind of iron roofing, tin repair work. All kinds of Hardware, Lime, Cement, Paint, Oils and Varnishes. Quality right. Prices Right.

D. J. BAKER, Hardware.

Money Coming to You.

Put $100 in this bank, at the end of one year you will have that $100 and also $4.00 coming to you as interest.

At the end of the second year, you will still have $100 in the bank; you have had $4.00 interest and have $4.00 more coming to you.

There will be money coming to you as long as savings are in the bank.

The Money Chicago Spends for Drink.

The people of Chicago spend $64,220,000 for drink each year, at the lowest possible estimate. This, in silver dollars piled one on top of the other, would make a stack 101 miles high, 1,358 times as high as the tallest skyscraper in the city.

It would take a train of 75 freight cars, or a procession of trucks 5.26 miles long to carry the silver. It would pay for a wall of bread, 10 feet thick and 25 feet high, on three sides of the city, with enough bread left to build a line of forts on the lake side.

It would buy a mountain of flour, with a city block as its base, 1,800 feet high. It would build 64,200 cottages. It would feed all the people in the city for 97 days, on army rations.

It is a fifth more than all the yearly taxes paid in the city.

Don't eat too many eggs Sunday.

Nurse Says:

"I know what is good for young and old people," writes Mrs. Clara Dykstra, a trained nurse of South Bellingham, Wash., "and will say that I consider Cardui the best medicine for girls and women. It makes them feel like new persons, relieves their pain and regulates womanly troubles. "Both my daughter and I received great benefit."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

As a medicine for female trouble, no medicine you can get has the old established reputation, that Cardui has.

Fifty (50) years of success prove that it has stood the greatest of all tests—the test of TIME.

As a tonic for weak women, Cardui is the best, because it is a woman's tonic.

Pure, gentle, safe, reliable. Try Cardui.

Five Years

of Heart Trouble Cured by Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had pains in my left side, and under my shoulder blade, could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath the least exertion would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. When I had taken six bottles I was cured."

MRS. C. C. GORKEY,
Northfield, Va.

If there is fluttering or palpitation it is an indication of a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the heart. It is not necessarily diseased—just weak from over-work. The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. You can make a weak heart strong by taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy. Get a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

SAVED BY MEDICAL SCIENCE.

Human Life Is Better Protected Now than Ever Before.

The health records of London show a death rate for 1909 of only 13.9 per thousand. That of New York when corrected by the census this year will figure out close to 16.

From 1851 to 1860 the London death rate was 23.7. That of New York cannot be so accurately stated, but it was much higher. The fall in the death rate in London in fifty years, due to better sanitation and more accurate knowledge of disease, means the saving in a single year of almost 70,000 lives. The saving in New York has been in like proportion. New York has extremes of climate to contend with which London never knows. Blizzard times hasten the departure of the old and the feeble; very hot weather in summer slays children under five by the hundreds.

In spite of later marriages and a falling birth rate, the natural increase of population in both cities is considerably greater than it was fifty years ago. In 1860 each 100,000 people in London increased in one year to 100,990; now each 100,000 increase to 101,140. With the present estimated population of both cities the natural increase in London in one year is nearly 30,000 and of New York about 55,000 with immigration greatly aiding the newer city in the race.

What a debt humanity owes to medical science, not only for prolonging average life, but for diminishing sorrow and suffering year by year!—New York World.

WHAT'S THE USE

Sticking to a Habit When It Means Discomfort?

Old King Coffee knocks subjects out tolerably flat at times, and there is no possible doubt of what did it. A Mich. woman gives her experience:

"I used to have liver trouble nearly all of the time and took medicine which relieved me only for a little while. Then every once in a while I would be suddenly doubled up with an awful agony in my stomach. It seemed as though every time I took a breath I would die. No one could suffer any more and live.

"Finally I got down so sick with catarrh of the stomach that I could not turn over in bed, and my stomach did not digest even milk. The doctor finally told me that if I did not give up drinking coffee I would surely die, but I felt I could not give it up.

"However, Husband brought home a package of Postum and it was made strictly according to directions. It was the only thing that would stay on my stomach, and I soon got so I liked it very much.

"Gradually I began to get better, and week by week gained in strength and health. Now I am in perfect condition and I am convinced that the whole cause of my trouble was coffee drinking, and my getting better was due to leaving off coffee and taking Postum.

"A short time ago I tasted some coffee and found, to my astonishment, that I did not care anything about it. I never have to take medicine any more. I hope you will use this letter for the benefit of those suffering from the poisonous effects of coffee."

AN EASTER MYSTERY.

Here's a tiny, cozy house,
White and tight from top to toe;
Not a sign of fence it has,
Not a bush or tree to hide it;
Not a window, not a door,
Just the roof and walls and floor;
Not a crack to come and go,
And no way to peep inside it.

Later comes a knocking sound,
Funny, busy "tap-a-tap."
Why, the wall is giving way,
Breaking in the very middle!
I declare, beyond a doubt,
Here is some one stepping out!
Now put on your thinking-cap
And find the answer to my riddle.
—Nannie B. Turner.

AN EASTER FLOWER WHICH FLEW AWAY.

The Russell children were perched on the fence, looking down the road by which Sister Grace would come from the station.

They used to watch there for mother, but Helen realized that mother would never again come round the turn by the big elm, and wave her handkerchief to the children on the fence, for in September the busy, loving mother had died.

There had been a few miserable days when every one walked softly because mother was sick; and then they had all marched in a sad little procession down through the old orchard, with its mellowing apples and fading leaves, to a quiet little lot full of pine trees. Grandfather and grandmother were buried there, and there they left their mother, and went back to the lonely house.

Then it was that Sister Grace began to be mother to them all, comforting them one by one—15-year-old Helen, and Jack, who was 12, and Polly and Paul, the twins, and little Elisabeth, just 6, whom she rocked to sleep in her arms and left to dream of "mamma, with lovely, shining wings."

On the day this story begins, Grace had been gone all day, getting their winter things in the city, and they were lonely. But at last the carriage came swiftly up the dusty road and stopped, and each one received an armful of bundles to carry to the house.

Elisabeth's load was a pasteboard box, and Grace opened this and gave her a bag of candy.

"And here is an Easter lily for you, Helen," she said, "and a daffodil for Jack, and hyacinths for the twins. I thought you'd like to take care of them, and at Easter we can put them on mother's grave."

Elisabeth laid down her candy and began to cry.

"What's the matter, Beth?" Grace asked, surprised.

"I want to do something for my mother and you did not bring me anything," she said, her lips trembling.

"Why, you poor little girlie!" Grace said. "I thought you were too little."

"Here, Bethie, you can have mine," Jack said; but Elisabeth shook her head.

"No, no!" she said. "I don't want yours. I want one of my very own!"

"Never mind, dear," Grace said. "I'll send for one for you."

But suddenly Elisabeth sat up and dried her eyes, smiling mysteriously. "No, you mustn't, Grace," she said. "I'll get one for my own self to-morrow morning. I know where." And she nodded her head wisely, but not another word would she say.

The children planted their bulbs and set them away in the cellar. Next morning, when the others had gone to school, Elisabeth came in, holding something triumphantly in a grimy hand.

"I found it!" she cried, running up to Grace. "Now I'll have a flower for mamma!"

Grace looked at it. It was a very large brown chrysalis, and it did look like a bulb. She opened her lips to tell Elizabeth her mistake, and then she changed her mind.

She found a little pot, and some soft, light earth, and putting the chrysalis in, sprinkled a little earth lightly over it, and set it away. They had it for a secret and told no one.

One by one the pots were brought up from the cellar and set in the sunny window.

All had tiny green points pushing up, excepting Elisabeth's; but Grace said, "Just wait, sister, and yours will come up."

Elisabeth watched it every day, sprinkled it, and waited anxiously for the first leaf to appear. The other plants grew and budded, and Elisabeth began to be discouraged; but Grace, who noticed that the earth was cracking in the little pot, told her that hers might bloom for Easter yet. But the day came, and the window was aglow with bloom, and still no sign of life in the little pot.

Elizabeth was disappointed, but Grace promised her a wreath to carry, and she was comforted. The orchard was gay with wild flowers and violets, and as they walked slowly through the bright sunshine with their Easter flowers, Elisabeth gathered wild flowers, and Grace wove them into a delicate chain for her, so that she, too, had something to lay on the green mound under the pines.

When they came back to the house, Grace went to the window where the one little pot stood.

"Beth! Beth! Come here!" she cried, and Beth ran. Then she stood looking in wonder at something which had pushed away the earth in the pot and was coming out.

"What is it?" she whispered.

"Wait and see," said Grace, taking her trembling little hand.

The other children slipped up behind, and watched as something white and green and yellow came in sight.

Then Jack smiled and looked at Helen. "A butterfly! Is that what she's been watching and watering all this time?"

Elisabeth never had seen such a queer butterfly—such a big body and such little wings. It began slowly opening and shutting its crumpled wings, and oh, wonder! as they moved they grew larger and smoother and brighter, until it was larger than any butterfly Elisabeth had ever seen before. It balanced lightly on the edge of the pot, as if ready to fly away.

"Grace," said Elizabeth, softly, "please open the window. It wants to fly away up to heaven, like mamma."

Then as the sweet spring air came in, she bent over and kissed the butterfly softly. "Take it to mamma," she whispered, and as if in obedience, the butterfly rose in the air, and fluttered back, once, twice, and the third time it floated away, up, up, until it was lost in the bright sunshine.

When it was out of sight, Elizabeth turned to Grace with a little sigh.

"Do you think it can find mamma?" she asked, wistfully.

"I think mamma was watching for it," Grace answered.

And the children all declared that Elisabeth's Easter flower was the loveliest of all.—Youth's Companion.

Easter Used to Last Eight Days.

In the ancient church the celebration of Easter lasted eight days, but after the eleventh century the time was limited to three days, and soon again reduced to two days. It was formerly the favorite time for performing the rite of baptism. The courts of justice were closed, and alms distributed to the poor and needy, who were even feasted in the churches. Slaves were set free, and as the fasting of Lent was over the people gave themselves up to every enjoyment.

KANSAS AND HER PROPHET.

Where Star of Empire Lingered While Pointing Westward Way.

There used to be a widely prevalent saying about hard times in Kansas. Nothing of the sort is heard nowadays and if Governor Stubbs is to be believed, there is nowhere in all the length and breadth of the Sunflower State any suggestion of hard times.

"We have," says Governor Stubbs, "the most industrious, the best educated, the most moral people of any state, and I guess we have more money per capita." What a cheerful message coming from a land once famous for grasshoppers, boom towns and wild-eyed politicians! remarks the Louisville Courier-Journal. That is not all. Half the jails and poorhouses are empty, the mortgages have been paid off and the farmers are riding in automobiles. No need for anybody to ask, "What is the matter with Kansas?" She is prosperous and pompous. She may not know where she is going, but she's on her way.

The apostles of populism have been gathered to their fathers or have subsided or sought greener fields. Mary Ellen Lease has located in the effete east and Carrie Nation is selling hatchets in that vague locality best described as parts unknown. The joint keepers have moved to Missouri and gone into the mail order business. The politicians have gone to work. The money devil has been licked into submission and is eating humbly out of the horny hand of the honest farmer. The microbe can find no eligible spot to rear a family and the hookworm has no place to lay his head.

The star of empire has lingered over Kansas while pointing the westward way. The spirit of prosperity and the handmaids of progress have set their beacon lights on hill and valley.

"S. O. S." HELP CALL.

New International Signal for Ships in Distress.

The wireless telegraph character . . . — — — . . . (three dots, three dashes, three dots), is the general signal of distress as provided in the service regulations of the International wireless telegraph convention, signed at Berlin on November 3, 1906.

Although, in the continental code, three dots means S and three dashes O, the distress signal is not sent as three letters, "S-O-S," as is commonly supposed, but is a distinct character by itself, which means only "Send help with all speed."

Up to Jan. 1, 1909, the Marconi Wireless Company had a distress signal of its own, "C. Q. D.," which was made famous by the Republic disaster. On that date, however, the international signal was adopted. This is one of the steps which the wireless telegraph companies are taking to secure uniform service throughout the world.

When a ship is in distress the wireless operator plugs in all his power and begins sending the distress signal again and again at brief intervals until he receives an answer. Then he gives all possible details which can be of use in sending aid to the vessel. As soon as a wireless station receives the signal of distress it immediately stops all other correspondence and gets into communication with the vessel in distress. No other work is taken up until it has been made sure that the operator on the vessel has transmitted all the information necessary to aid rescuers in reaching the crippled ship.

Sure of Sympathy.

An Omaha man presented himself to the leader of a band in that city, according to a writer in Harper's Magazine, with a request that the band play at a cousin's funeral.

"Is it a military funeral?" asked the leader.

"Not at all," was the reply. "My cousin was no military man; in fact he was never interested in matters military. Nevertheless, it was his express wish that your band should play at his funeral."

The leader was surprised and flattered. "Is that so?" he asked.

"Yes," responded the other. "He said that he wanted to be sure that the people who came to his funeral would be sorry he died."

They Were Not Indians.

It is said that when the first Chinese entered California the Indians were very curious about them. A dispute arose among some of them as to what country the strangers might hail from and whether or not they were Indians. The Indians decided to apply the water test. One day a party of Indians met a party of Chinamen approaching a little stream. The strangers approached the bridge and started across. The Indians, too, filed across and, meeting the Chinamen in midstream, pushed two of them into the agery, spooming current below. The test was conclusive. They could not swim. They were not Indians.

Beautiful Wall Coatings for Homes.

In line with the progress of all other things in these modern days is the beautiful, perfect and sanitary wall coatings for our homes. Alabastine is the name of a rich, soft and velvety preparation for the decoration of walls and ceilings. It adheres to the walls of its own adhesive qualities. It is inexpensive, clean, artistic and so easily put on that any one can follow the printed directions on every package. Any shade or tint is easily produced. Alabastine is proof against insects or disease germs so prevalent in wall paper. It does not rub off and flake like kalsomine. A complete color plan for the walls of the home and stencils to help make the home beautiful, together with a book about home decorations and samples of color effects will all be sent free by the Alabastine Company, 482 Grandville avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich. The liberal offers of this company to home decorators in our advertising columns elsewhere in this paper deserve careful perusal.

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel [800 miles north of the International boundary]. JOHN I. BROWN & SON, Boston, Mass.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

AMONG THE MANY MANSIONS.

By Rev. James Mudge, D. D.

"In my Father's house are many mansions."—John 14:2.

Too much can hardly be made of the fact that heaven, in a very important sense, in its essential elements, is here and now. Nevertheless, there is, of course, a life hereafter beyond this world, a life eternal in Immanuel's land. There is a place "where Christ is," a place which He told His disciples He would prepare for their final abode. What should be our attitude toward it, our feeling about it? What use can we probably make of it in the deepening of our spirituality, the perfecting of our character?

It is a test both of our faith and our faithfulness. In proportion to the vigor of our faith will be the clearness of our sight of the things unseen by mortal eye, our realization of the intangible. We may have a faith so strong that there will be no more doubt as to the reality of that world than of this, no hesitation whatever in accepting the intimations concerning it which are found in the written Word, no question as to the satisfying solidity of its joys, the permanency of the rich possessions to which it introduces the redeemed. What will give us this faith? Our faithfulness to God and duty, our living constantly in His presence, our cultivating those faculties which apprehend the things of the Spirit.

Should longings for Heaven fill much of our thought and time? Not to such an extent as to prevent the devotion of all our energies to the work assigned us by the Master. Surely not to the breeding of the slightest discontent with the duration of our tarrying here. St. Paul's position about it (Phil. 1:23) would seem to be ideal. He keenly appreciated the glorious gain involved in the transition to the splendor as yet so imperfectly revealed, but he also appreciated fully the joy of laboring for Jesus on this earth and increasing the triumphs of the gospel. He was sufficiently unselfish to put aside his own joy in favor of the advantage of his converts and others to whom he could do still further good. It is certainly safe to leave the decision as to the best time and manner of our death with God, assured that it shall be exactly aright and need not concern us in the least. It is in no way inconsistent with a true humility as to any worthiness of our own to merit Paradise. "Our trust is all thrown on Jesus' name. Where He is there we shall be also; we shall be with Him; this right has been bought for us; through His favor it has been brought to us, and we, in rejoicing over it with joy unspeakable, only do what He has bidden us. We may be of good cheer as we launch our barques on the sea of eternity, for our Saviour walks upon its waters making them calm, and crying to us, "It is I, be not afraid."

WHEN MAN IS AT PRAYER.

By Rev. P. H. Halpin.

Pray without ceasing.—1 Thess., 5:17.

All divine commands make for the welfare of the individual and the civilization of the race. These laws forgotten, the man touches the nadir of degradation, the family is a den of abomination and the nation totters on the brink of barbarism.

The faithful Christian is a conqueror in the moral world, bears off all its trophies and wears its crown of glory. These precepts do more. They hedge in all human dignity and guarantee privileges beyond the power of the world to destroy. Eminently true all this of prayer. The quickening pulse of prayer is in the heart only. Lip prayer alone is mockery and insult. Hence, when Heaven is deaf to our beseeching it is because, while our voice mutters words of devotion we are bargaining in our souls with the world, the devil or the flesh. Never yet has the heart of man sent up on the wings of prayer its palpitating message without finding strength and healing. Even is such a pleading as music in the ears of God, causing His hand to open and shower down blessings.

To pray is a privilege beyond expression and the employing of our highest faculties in their noblest function. To pray is to be on the heights, in the court of the king of kings—it is fanning that spark divine which is in every one of us into a flame wrapping the soul in the splendor or raiment of the eternal halls. Prayer is the lordliest spurning of the world and the most defiant proclamation of the vanity of its promises and of its utter helplessness in our hour of need. Man is at his finest as he kneels in prayer.

What may we pray for? Augustine answers that it is our right to ask for anything and everything our heart has the right to desire. Nor is it impossible to pray without ceasing. If we only knew our danger and our dearth our whole being would be attuned to prayer and in the incessant encounter with our spiritual foes and perils our every thought and word and deed would be instinct with petition. Why lack trust in the efficacy of our supplication? Confidence is easy when we remember the infinite power of the God who made us, because He loves and yearns for us.

As we pray we are prostrate before omnipotence and boundless love. It will be well with us all when we learn to pray. If it is well with us now it is because there are more than ten just men appealing in our behalf. Yes, it is all right with the world because God is in His heaven, but it is more all right because He is on His earth as well and no sentinel bars our way to His presence.

THE HONEST MAN.

By Rev. David James Burrell, D. D.

"Provide things honest in the sight of all men."—Romans 12:17.

What do we mean by an honest man? We want a definition to begin with; and let is be as simple as possible. An honest man is one who pays his debts. That covers the whole case. It will be seen that this definition, so simple apparently, is quite comprehensive, and it cats deeper than we think. For when the matter of life's assets and liabilities is fully canvassed, it will appear that it is no easy matter to live and die with a clean balance sheet.

The question at the outset touches our relations with God. Are we debtors to God? Yes, by universal consent.

In God we live and move and have our being. We slept in His arms last night, cared for as tenderly as children in their mother's arms. He feeds us, clothes us, and continually cares for us.

"I am debtor to every man." The original break in the family circle was made when Cain asked: "Am I my brother's keeper?" I owe something to the next man. Get that in mind when you meet a drunkard reeling in the street, for he is a brother of yours. To such you are a debtor. What do you owe them? All the category of kindnesses marked out in the Golden Rule: "Do unto them as ye would be done by." Lend a hand! Be not an over-reacher, like Jacob; buy no man's birthright for a mess of pottage. Say never, "Honesty is the best policy," for honesty is right whether it pays or not. Take shame to yourself if ever you get the better of another man. And if he fall, what then? Lend a hand. Help him up!

Are you living that way? Are you paying your debt to the community? Are you dealing fairly with your fellow-men? If not, give ear to your conscience which is saying: "Thou art not an honest man."

And here, in a last word, is the prayer of honesty. Would that it might be written in our hearts and that we might constantly offer it: "Lord, make me be myself!—seeming as one who lives to Thee, and being what I seem to be."

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

BETHLEHEM.

By Phillips Brooks.

[Phillips Brooks (Boston, Dec. 13, 1835—Jan. 23, 1893) was more than the bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts; he was the bishop of the whole American people. They have not yet ceased to grieve for him. Perhaps admiration of the author's personality has not a little to do with the popularity of this poem. It was written for the use of Trinity Sunday school, about 1880, and sent out ananymously. But the people soon found it out. Though evidently intended as a Christmas hymn, it is used at other times, and may be counted as one of the few new hymns that have taken their place along with the old ones. It is already found in all the standard collections of church hymns, as well as in many of these of less permanent character.]

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep,
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee to-night.

For Christ is born of Mary,
And gathered all above
While mortals sleep the angels keep
Their watch of wondering love.
O morning stars, together
Proclaim the holy birth!
And praises sing to God the King,
And peace to men on earth.

How silently, how silently,
The wondrous gift is given!
So God imparts to human hearts
The blessings of his heaven.
No ear may hear his coming,
But in this world of sin,
Where meek souls will receive him still,
The dear Christ enters in.

O holy child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin, and enter in,
Be born in us to-day.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell;
O, come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Immanuel!

Famous Cough and Cold Prescription Has Cured Hundreds Here.

"Get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. Take a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle well each time." This is said to be the quickest cold and cough remedy known. It frequently cures the worst colds in twenty-four hours. But be sure to get only the genuine Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes put up in a tin screw-top case. Don't use the weaker pine preparations. Any druggist has it on hand or will quickly get it from his wholesale house.

Tiny Baby's Pitiful Case.

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few mattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off, leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalds. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Kansas Takes 1,000 Overland Cars

Our agents in Kansas have ordered for this season 1,000 Overland automobiles.

Nebraska takes 750—Iowa 1,000—Texas 1,500. Thus has the Overland—after one year's experience—captured the farming states.

It has captured the cities, too. New York City takes 1,000 Overlands this year. Boston takes 500—San Francisco 500—Washington 500—Philadelphia 450.

Our agents have contracted for 20,000 Overlands—for $24,000,000 worth of Overlands—to supply the demand for this year. That's a larger sale than any other car commands.

Yet, two years ago few had ever heard of an Overland. This sensational success is due to the creation of a remarkable car.

The Simple Car

The success of the Overland is mainly due to its amazing simplicity. A 10-year-old child can master the car in five minutes. Push a pedal forward to go ahead, and backward to reverse. Push another pedal for high speed. There is nothing else to do but steer.

Any man with the simplest instructions can run an Overland a thousand miles and back.

There was never a car so easy to care for—so easy to keep in order.

20 Per Cent Reduction

The Overland's success is also due to its price. No other maker ever gave nearly so much for the money.

Yet we have cut our costs this year about 20 per cent through enormous increase in production.

The Overland we sell for $1,000 this year is better than the $1,250 Overland last year. It is a 25 H. P. car with a speed of 50 miles an hour.

So with the $1,250, $1,400 and $1,500 Overlands. Each offers a fifth more than ever before for the money.

All prices include Magneto and full lamp equipment.

Ask for the Story

The Overland story is one of the greatest business stories ever told. It tells how this car—the creation of a mechanical genius—has in two years reached the topmost place in this field. And it tells all about the car. Send us this coupon today for this book.

Alabastine
The Sanitary Wall Coating

comes in all sorts of rich, soft shades of color that enable you to decorate your walls in the same style as the handsome city houses.

Alabastine is a powder made from pure native alabaster, you mix it with clear cold water and apply it with a flat wall brush. Simple directions printed on every package. Anyone can do it. Then when you want to redecorate, just put the new coat over the old. That saves a lot of work, trouble and money.

People do not like kalsomine, as all kalsomine is mixed with glue to make it stick. The glue rots and the kalsomine comes off—on your clothes and on the floor. Alabastine adheres to the wall of its own cementing qualities. It requires no dirty glue, nor paste, as with kalsomine or wall paper. These always attract insects and disease germs.

The Los Angeles County Sunday School Convention was held in the M. E. church at this place, last week 2nd., 3rd. and 4th. Several hundred delegates were in attendance. Some of the most noted speakers of the west were present, also Dr. Franklin McElfrut, superintendent of the International Teachers Training Department, and Mrs. S. Lamoreaux of Chicago, gave very interesting talks along the line of Sunday School work. The session closed Friday night with a temperance lecture by the noted temperance hero of California, Dr. Chapman.

Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. George Paff, Gladys, Edward Carnes and myself supplied with a noon lunch went for a day's outing. Took the boat (Cameguin) from the end of the pier for San Pedro, which is 7 miles distant. As we left the Pier to our right, along the beach we could see the different places of amusements, the merry-go-round, joy wheel, rollie coaster, bath house, next the million dollar hotel (Virginia) the pride of Long Beach, farther the shipyards, then the Salt Lake R. R., lifting bridge across the entrance to the harbor, it is about 150 feet in length across the entrance to the harbor, it is so constructed that it is nearly on a balance and rocked up with one end high in the air to allow the boats to enter the harbor. Before reaching Pedro we came to where part of Uncle Sam's Navy was anchored, ten boats in all, seven torpedo boats and three destroyers, they are about 200 feet in length not so very wide. That was a nice sight.

Then in the harbor were a number of large boats, some sail boats and some steamers. San Pedro is one of the greatest lumber harbors on the coast, lumber is shipped here from Seattle, Washington, by water then is distributed over Southern California Arizona, Texas and the middle west by rail. At Pedro we took the trolley car for Point Termen, about 3 miles down the coast, that is where the Government bought eighty or more acres of land to build fortifications to protect the harbor, the price paid for the land was $2,500 per acre (pretty good price for hills which would be called mountains in Indiana). At the end of the car line took it a foot down the coast. Mr. Paff, Carnes and myself managed to get down the cliff about four or five hundred feet high, after eating our luncheon walked down the beach over a solid bed of rocks and stones for three or four miles then we found a trail to get up the bank again, which was steep to scale elsewhere, at once up the bank we started back over the hills seven miles back to Pedro where we took the boat for Long Beach. Its hardly necessary for me to say that we were satisfied with our day's adventures and when we got home were ready for a square meal.

12 Years the Better.

The Garrett Weekly Clipper in its last issue stated that, Addison J. Stewart, who was about to leave that place and go to Kansas where he will launch into the clothing business was the oldest business man in the county, having located in Garrett in 1877 and had been in it continually. THE NEWS this week is pleased with the opportunity to ask Brother Hamilton of the Clipper to kindly retract the statement as there is an old man in St. Joe who holds the belt of the entire county. This man has been in business for 45 years and has worked hard during that time, and has been continually at it for this period and is still at it. He is a man that is well known all over the northern part of the state, and is an important factor in the M. P. church of this place, and of the I. O. O. F. lodge of Indiana. Solomon Barney is the man of whom we speak and it might be said of him that he is as young as when he began in the mercantile business. We kindly ask our brother editor to notice these few remarks.

An Appreciation.

Mr. Editor:

Will you please insert this article for one who has been a reader of THE NEWS ever since its first publication. I wish to thank the many kind friends who participated in giving me a card shower, Feb. 9th., my eightieth birthday. Presume they will think this a late date for thanks but was very sick at the time, and am only able to sit up a part of the time as yet. Have just looked over the cards and counted them. There are fifty-four cards, five letters and three beautiful bouquets of carnations, a beautiful white silk handkerchief and a book. Should I live to enjoy a good degree of health again shall think it largely due to the love and good wishes for my welfare expressed on those cards and in the letters and my thanks are due each and everyone. Mrs. Elizabeth Gee.

NewTerminal

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has awarded a contract for the construction of an extensive freight terminal at Chicago Junction, Ohio, on the main line of the Chicago division, which will be the largest terminal west of Brunswick, Md., and the second in size on the System. The improvement will cost in round figures $1,500,000 and includes a gravity, or "hump", classification yard having a capacity of 3,900 cars, with necessary yard buildings, scales, etc., and a reservoir of 200,000,000 gallons capacity, perhaps the largest ever built for railroad use.

The new freight terminal will contain receiving and classification yards for eastbound and westbound traffic, the capacity of the former being 2,000 cars and the latter 1,900 cars.

Chicago Junction being the terminus of the Chicago and New Castle divisions and situated at the intersection of the Newark division lake line to Sandusky, is the most important locomotive terminal on the Baltimore and Ohio, and for this reason the reservoir will be constructed sufficiently large to supply water for the engines of all three divisions.

It is estimated that 950,000 cubic yards of excavation and 4,500 cubic yards of concrete will be necessary in constructing the terminal. The contract has been awarded to the Robert Grace Company, of Cleveland, work will be started at once and completed as early as possible.

Uncle Sam's Boy Writes.

Dear Parents, Brothers and Sisters:

Well mother I suppose of course you are worried about me because you haven't heard from me but the last letter explained why. We did come over onto the beach to camp and have small-arm-practice (with rifles and three inch guns) and we have been very busy since. We get up in the morning at 5 o'clock, eat breakfast at six, go on the range at six thirty, leave there at twelve, eat dinner at half past, go back at one thirty and stay until five o'clock. Then eat supper as soon as we get back to camp and and after supper scrub our dirty clothes. So you see I haven't had much time to write only on Saturday or Sunday. Sunday six of the boys and myself went out to see what we could find and after walking about three miles, found a bee-tree, so we took an axe and cut it down. Upon taking out the honey we found we had three two-gallon buckets of honey and comb. When we got back to camp I borrowed a seive and pressed the honey thro' getting fourteen pint bottles full of the finest honey you ever saw. While we were on our way to the bee-tree we saw a little deer and that was all, not a human being.

I went out to the beach clear across a neck of Cuba and found some fine shells and some corral but lost the prettiest shells of the bunch. You know I said the Connecticut crew was coming out to camp and it did.

I saw Will Freeburn and talked to him and think he looks better than I ever saw him look before. So fat, but just the "same old Will." He said he was going home on a furlough as soon as he got back to New York, he thought. He asked all about every thing and everybody around home. I will see him again before I leave if I possibly can.

Well, the guard was called so I will have to go and finish some other time.

Here I am again! I had to stay up to the guard for the rest of the day and had no chance to write until today. We are now back aboard ship so I will have a little more time to write I hope. You asked me how far from land the Va., lays. Well, it is not more than a mile but there are no inhabitants nearer than six miles. There is a very small town there but I do not go there as there is no liberty granted while here. The fleet will leave for Hampton Roads about the 25 of Torch, or that is the latest news.

No, mother, our commander did not die. The Captain Sharp who died was our old commander and everybody was sorry to hear of his death, he was such a nice man. Yes, I have seen a few Cubans but they are just about like negroes only their hair is not quite so curly.

You remember those cactuses we used to have, the big tree cactus and straight round one. Well the cactus down here are just like them, then there is one that has a blossom on and a kind of fruit called cactus pear, which are pretty good to eat.

Yes, when we are at anchor, if we get under way and come back, we anchor in the same place. Every ship has a position to anchor the same as they have when under way and they have to lay where that place is.

Well I have just thought about it but it has been one year and two days since I enlisted. It is now very hot here being 90 degrees in the shade. Now what do you think of a winter like that? None of it for me. Oranges are just fifteen cents a dozen down here and are a great deal better than the ones you get up there. But of course we get those that are good and ripe while the ones you get have to be picked when green. These have such a sweet flavor if they are small.

We haven't traveled around so very much yet, but I wouldn't have missed some of the sights I have seen already for a great deal.

Hoping this finds you as well as it leaves me I must close until another time. Ever your loving son and brother,

Floyd Coburn,

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank those who have been coming to my barber shop for the past four years and also the new ones that have started in since I moved back to town. I can truly say that my business has doubled since October 1 for all the cut in barber prices my business has increased each week. My aim is to do your work to please you, but if I fail come to me and I will make it right with you. For a short time with every hair cut I am going to give you a 25 cent treat and with every shave I will give you a 10 cent treat. Come in and if you are not satisfied I will refund your money. I have bought here and expect to make an up-to-date shop.
